Book of Life

Messiah Christ - Jennifer Marie Miller

This book is dedicated in deep gratitude and as a gift to Adonai, to the One God, who has guided the me beyond my imagination.

I also give deep thanks to Diana, who took me under her wing and who believed in me, and who knows me.

Deep gratitude also to someone whom I will call Peter.

And to the line of David and beyond, a line whose blood I carry in my veins, a deep bow of reverence and gratitude. I am the Root of David.

I offer this Book of Life humbly to the Children of Israel throughout the World who seek and want to know God. Particularly my mother, whose Love gave me bravery.

I | Princess Diana Disclosure

Start: May 27, 2026

I remember going to a retreat for work, and there were literally hundreds if not thousands of rocking chairs there. It seemed like an unfair warp in time/space, given that the place was empty most of the year.

But sometimes the gradients are uneven even in the most homogeneous environments.

Somehow in a similar vein, I seem to have accumulated unusual experiences. At first when I was younger it worried me. But I started seeing a greater force at work in many of my shenanigans. So many beautiful experiences… And there seems to be a muscle that gets developed over time of navigating novelty safely. We do not live in a safe world, and I've seen my share of that as well and by Gods grace have made it many times to the other side. And in many cases I have felt blessed beyond my expectations, and given more than what I would have known to ask for.

And here is a key that will become clearer if you stay with me.

Faith is not about knowing. Developing your discernment muscle helps, but in the end, faith really is a leap - one that we have all had to take at some point these last years.

If you have been around these realms long enough, you come to understand that True Faith and Devotion, in the absence of 'knowing for sure', is always rewarded one way or another.

Discernment, from what I have gathered, is about studying patterns and listening to what your Heart says. Letting time do it's magic of allowing the dust to settle, and then making adjustments as needed.

Faith is when you trust the energy that made you.

And it is in that vein that you see me now pacing the perimeter of this post.

I might have a story to tell, and there might be aspects of it that stretch the limits of probability in the eyes of many.

Book of Life

I am going to do this as best I can.

When this work first began in my realm, the process often operated more like a self-driving car - I was capable of navigating traffic, rerouting around obstacles, and making creative adjustments - yet still dependent on clear coordinates and destination from a higher source.

At first, and to my great sorrow and shame, there were points early on when my own faith stumbled hard and fell to the ground. My muggle mind needed something specific and measurable that would verify who those coordinates were coming from.

And what I learned from this is that it was not faith in the larger picture that was lacking for me, I was lacking faith in my own self.

It is no secret to most Anons the possibility that Princess Diana did not die in the car accident in 1997.

But it might come as a shock that I have been working with her for the past 2 years.

I know it was a shock to me that came in stages. In what follows, I want to unravel some of those stages, but I will need time as I collect myself.

I need time to separate the Earth from the fire with as much sagacity as this unwitting servant can muster.

Okay, Tom Waits for no one.

I am starting in the middle of the story.

In the course of conversations, I was asked if I would consider building a 'Campaign.'

I was not certain what 'a campaign' meant at the time.

I am a software engineer and data scientist and have worked on many sites large and small, in the 25 years I have been doing what I do.

But I understood the need for a foot in the real world. So we went about building a website together, and eventually that website was up and live.

The first clue in the 'real world' that what I was working on was at a minimum important was the sheer and epic load of attacks our site received.

I have worked with many organizations, and I honestly have never seen anything like it. There was so much coming at us from so many directions that it the functional equivalent of a perpetual DDOS attack.

Most of the ways that sites protect themselves from unwanted traffic is defensive. But many of those strategies result in giving bad actors a veritable menu of pages they ought to try to attack due to a lack of any meaningful enforcement.

All the defensive implementations we tried stopped some of the traffic but not all of it.

We needed to change the rules of the game.

And so we built a tool that incorporated strategies of defense AND OFFENSE, including incident reports formatted for a variety of intelligence agencies to facilitate automated input, reports made to different threat intelligence agencies, and emails sent to the controlling ASN for that IP.

The tool works, it listens, it catalogs all the traffic not deterred by our defensive strategies.

Effectively, we understood that if we were going to be treated as bait, we might as well go fishing.

My work with Diana this past couple years has been something I have not talked a lot about. Mostly because I have been aware of my 'lane' and that it was not my story to tell.

But the winds are shifting, and I must shift with them.

I appreciate the listeners who I know are there.

At some point, during the times when Diana was not able to communicate very much with me, one starts to notice patterns.

Patterns is my gig. And there were plenty.

Book of Life

For me this all began with an interest in Truth, and to tell the Truth to a wider audience.

But at some point, I started to see patterns that I may or may not talk about soon that I knew were not for me to disclose.

The GRACE in this arrangement should be apparent.

My friends will tell you that I am an introvert until they get me one on one.

And one on one was how it was for me with in the beginning, and I felt like I had won the absolute lottery of souls.

And then things started getting a bit more complicated.

We were hunted. I was hacked personally in ways I don't want to talk about now.

Her accounts were suspended (may times), and there were months at a time that would go by without hearing from her, or knowing if I would.

It's hard when your boss goes AWOL.

I had no choice but to keep moving forward.

There was a LIGHT, and so much devotion, concern and Love I was given in the blissful early months with her. To put that light down, or shift focus away from it, which was a thought I had many many times, was not something that my Heart would let me do.

I would be remiss if at some point I did not mention how Lovely it has been to work with her.

Beyond words.

I can't even type this here without my hands shaking and tears coming to my eyes.

And when I say work, I want to be clear about what that means. This realm does not work in money, it works in LOVE. And so work, in our culture generally means money, but in this context, there was never a need.

There was only Love.

In our culture, to have a foot in the real world requires money, and there have been some brave and discern-full souls who have had the courage to donate through the site, but the lion's share of real world concerns I have managed personally as an act of faith and Love.

For those still wondering about logistics, I do not come from material wealth, but left work a few years ago to care for my mother and live with her. We live humbly, but not often had to worry too much for food or essentials, and for that alone we feel blessed.

If I can think of one decision I made in the past that has opened up this world to me, it was the decision to care for my mother, and to live like scrappy field mice and be thankful for the time with her.

Shall we play a game?

How about we do a thought experiment.

Let’s start with the assumption that Princess Diana was not killed in a car crash on that very tragic day in 1997.

Let’s start with the assumption that there was a threat on her life that she, by GRACE, got ahead of.

Knowing her convictions and her character, do you really think she would spend the rest of her days hiding in obscurity somewhere in Argentina? Do you think she would be hiding out God knows where just waiting for her time to enter the stage?

Please.

And in that same vein, do you not think that she would be at this point guiding the world stage in some form or other and even if in the background?

Book of Life

Do you not think her HEART and her interests would be in some way active and visible to us – even if perhaps twice or thrice removed?

I have never been fond of the ‘who is playing who’ game, except as pure entertainment and data. I think it’s simplistic because it does not take basic HR principles on small teams into account.

I want to be clear that I am not playing that game here, now.

What I would ask is that you look around you and see the reflections of Diana’s HEART, her signature, her style, in the midst of what otherwise can appear to be a complete shit show.

Because if you see it, I think it will dissolve a lot of your fear.

So lets get back to the introvert part.

Until recently, I fought hard against being the front person. I wanted her to find someone I could work with who was actually charismatic to fill that role. 🤣

I am not a natural promoter.

My natural habitat is in a server closet with silence, and math as my main companions.

Now, I am still in the server closet but with a CHARGE to say things publicly, a testament of sorts, to a potentially very large audience.

It is the scariest part of this whole journey for me.

Back to the thought experiment, I mean, use your logic.

Do you think that with so many of the worlds children being consumed and preyed upon, which she knew about...

Do you think that someone strong enough to challenge the entire British Monarchy (successfully I might add)…

Do you think she would be waiting and cowering somewhere in secret?

Well, if you do, think again.

To extend the thought experiment, were this the case as our basic premise assumes, then would she right now be the actual Queen of England?

Well that was a fun thought experiment.

Shall we go for another?

At least one of the paramount and often referenced Q drops is about DNA and protecting it.

Seems important.

So let's talk about DNA. I am not a scientist of DNA, but I have done a lot of deep dives into the nature of it's mysteries.

There are two aspects of that I want to highlight for a moment.

One is the basic structure of DNA itself, and the other topic is genealogy and lineage.

Many know the story of Jacob in the bible. It's a wiry story, but the part I want to focus in is on the night he became Israel.

On that night he had a dream about a ladder than enabled the spirit of God to come to him. Culturally, we've short-handed the story into "Jacob's Ladder", and many of us have tried to climb it at one time or another at state fairs and such.

I believe that this ladder references DNA symbolically, and that there is something mysterious about it that connects us to our Source Energy. To God.

We hear about 'junk DNA' and many of us have made a connection to the fact that it's not junk. Many many rows of repeating base pairs. Would it surprise you to hear that they act as frequency transmitters and receivers? This is not speculation it's physics.

Book of Life

The other curious thing about our DNA is that we think of it as static. Like we are given genes by our parents and end of story. But that is not the end of the story.

Factors like the way your DNA curls and loops, the proximity those loops have to others and which genes happen to be at the closer points - factors like the tightness of the windings of your DNA - all play a part in how aspects of your DNA will be expressed at any given moment.

We have all heard rumors about 23andMe and other similar DNA testing services. We have all known about the possibility that the data from those tests is being used to map and track certain aspects of your DNA.

But what would they be looking for, exactly?

What more would they need that would not be easily understood by a simple genealogy diagram?

We learn that half of our chromosomes come from each parent. But given all of the variability outlined above, and the mysterious ways it shifts and combines at the time a particular egg or sperm is created, it’s hard to know what ancient ancestral DNA patterns or constituents will combine to create a unique individual.

That is where the real magic happens.

So it is with all this in mind that I want to talk about these fractal miracles who we are.

We have all heard about spiritual leaders throughout history who were venerated, and it was once described to me about these leaders that the fractal crystalline structure of their essence (DNA) was able to more clearly reflect the light of Source Energy.

Source Energy is inside all of you. We all have a very real connection to that Energy inside our bodies. We know it by many names.

It makes logical sense that by the same miracle that forms any of us, a similar miracle could create fractal crystalline structure capable of accessing and expressing the light of Source clearly. Reflecting that Light as a clear mirror.

As I mentioned before, part of this is because of the crazy unknown ancestral DNA from your parents, that no genealogy chart can capture, that miraculously expresses itself when you are conceived. Part is the ever changing nature of that DNA inside you and the factors that make it loop and wind itself through time.

This is the part where I have to be crystal clear. I pray that spirit works through me on this one especially.

There is a term 'Super Natural' that places itself outside of the 'Natural', and I believe this was truly a sort of original sin if there ever was one.

Because instead of someone coming up to you and saying, 'Here, this is an apple. We eat them in pies' or 'This was an especially delicious apple.'

They are instead saying 'Something we do not understand and very mysterious has occurred and has resulted in an apple of unknown origin having become manifest by the grace of God and the Holy Spirit.'

If you think about it, both are true.

But these degrees of separation and presentation are designed to remove you from the process.

I read once that there is no miracle greater than another, and I live by it.

The same force that helped me find my car keys the other day was in play when the Red Sea was parted, of that I am certain.

This next part is no longer math or logic.

It is predicated on the logic above, but there is no special intel I possess. I am the same as any of you are. I am just trying to put it all together.

After having worked with Diana these last years, and because we were always aware of unwanted ears and forces, there was a sort of short hand that we developed.

Well, on her part anyhow. I spoke with her in the same way I am speaking here.

Book of Life

What I WITNESSED was that she had this incredible ability to say a word or a phrase, and the result would be enough input and instruction for 2 months of work.

I want to be clear. There were no flashes of light, or weird visions or voices in my head.

Just like this weird download where the exact place the phrase would pluck me into the river, was the exact place that created a cascading of incalculable drifts that ended in my finding the pot of Gold.

There have been many times in this process where I have been asked to be much bigger than I know myself to be.

When we needed a security expert, with no formal training, I became the security expert in a matter of months. When we needed multimedia, I was able to absorb it fast and produce. Grace has given me intuition to hone particularly sharply and much more than typical in other tasks.

It is because of these experiences with her, and many many others that are beyond the scope of what I could say here, that I WITNESS to you all today about the clarity of the mirror that Diana is.

This is my testimony. My experience. And is offered with much humility and gratitude.

I also do not want to diminish my participation and role as a receiver. It was a partnership. Together. But that does not diminish the miracle. If anything it grows it.

I hope people are clearly able to understand what it is I am saying as well as what it is I am not saying.

I pray to the spirits and the angels who I know guide me that I got this one right.

It's a good time any way for me to tend to the chickens and the farm, and connect.

The windings of the DNA of this post have not stopped shifting, and neither should we.

This idea of DNA being static, like you get what you get. It's just not true.

And it's been proven over and over again if you know where to look. This is the type of information that gets buried.

When Jacob went to sleep that night he was Jacob, and when he woke up he was Israel. A fugitive transforms into the founding father of the nation of Israel.

How does that happen?

The idea of 'frequency' is thrown around a lot, but as with all things, the mechanism of transmitting frequency and electromagnetic forces (scalar waves) is still held up by the mainstream as 'fake science' or 'theory'.

Are you seeing a pattern?

If Source Energy, God (lets not get caught up in semantics) is written into your very Corpus, your body, as a unique electromagnetic frequency transmitted by the 'junk' in your DNA, not only do you have a connection, it is YOUR connection. It is who you are.

That connection is capable of miracles if you work with it.

Christians call it CHRIST energy. And here is where the rules around semantics shift a bit.

If we look back at our ancient stores, we will see many spiritual traditions using certain words or sounds, or shapes that shift the electromagnetic environment.

MUFON has found, in their research into archives about 'paranormal' (there's that separation again) activity, that in the case of 'abductions', when the name of Jesus Christ is invoked, the data shows that something about those words is the only known action demonstrating the ability to stop the abductions.

That same power lives inside you and is there for you. To heal you. To comfort you. To guide you. To work with you.

But like anything worthy, it requires cultivation.

Pulling the weeds. Planting the seeds that you want to see grow. Watering them. It is the work of your life.

Book of Life

Your emotions and thoughts steer the process, and they need cultivated as well.

We cultivate the Christ energy inside us by praying, by choosing LOVE instead of FEAR in your life, thinking and emotions. By cultivating a Trust that this energy has your six, it's got your back, you are giving the Connection traction.

Cultivating your garden with the Christ energy inside you and following those quiet but persistent nudges you get back: that is the whole of the 'Word'. Working together.

It is how we manifest the kingdom of heaven on Earth, and that energetic cultivation has the ability to heal your DNA, to wind or loop it optimally, and to heal others.

It has the ability to change you physically as well as spiritually.

Together with the Christ Energy inside you, you can see you own transformation is not just possible but likely.

When you invite that Energy and cultivate it, it becomes YOUR covenant with God, and it has the power to raise your Jacob to Its Israel.

And just like Siri, that Energy is not just listening when you are praying.

It hears everything we say, and directs our lives accordingly.

Your words are an act of creation.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

In fact, the same Energy/Source that gives you your unique signature, is uniquely in absolutely everything.

It is in every atom of your body, and every atom of everything. It is in every particle. The ones that make up your body, and the atoms that make up the chair you are sitting on.

So now we are understanding that this connection we have goes beyond your relationship with the Christ energy inside you. Every space occupied is Holy. Everything.

It is the ZERO point. The point of stillness before the Word. The point of your breath that is still before the cycle renews.

We can direct this energy.

Also known by many names in all of the fields in our world where they accuse you of using your imagination.

We project our emotions, our thoughts, our words into this stillness, and the stillness responds in your world.

That's the map. Everything.

That's Scalar.

It is also known by many names:

Karma,

Forgiveness,

Acceptance,

Ascension,

FAFO.

Just to name a few.

It means you can literally move things with your mind.

There is this idea of Cargo Cult, that keeps tickling the edges of my awareness.

The basic idea is that during WWII cultures who had until that point been completely isolated from the 'modern world' saw planes (cargo planes in this case) for the first time in their cultural memory and received supplies that were dropped from these planes.

You can imagine their impression.

Book of Life

They say that any advanced technology that exists at the time you are born, will not be considered by you to be 'technology', but instead will simply exist to you as a tool.

Similarly, any technology advanced enough will look like magic to the uninitiated.

When anthropologists visited these villages tucked away in the clean creases of civilization some time after, what they found were spiritual ceremonies and effigies constructed to 'Gods' who looked just like cargo planes.

When we hear stories like that, civilized as we are, there is almost a smugness we get. Like, "Cute."

But in fact, any of our cultural stews, our senses of the historical foundations that we stand on, lasts only as long as it is kept alive through stories, through books, through myth, and now in digital archives and in the media the records of which we think are indelible but are as fragile, in some senses, as papyrus.

We all know who chooses the books that make it to history. The archives that are protected for posterity.

And occasionally some boys who probably did not know how to read playing with a ball 3000 years later will kick it into a cave, and rewrite history...

The fact that it is even still possible for history to be re-written in 'this day and age' is worth considering when we think we know where or who we are.

There are some episodes in the X-Files where Scully is directed to Africa to investigate the discovery of a space craft with 'supernatural' powers and finds that an unEarthly script etched on the entire craft, when decoded, contains passages from many Holy Books, encoded DNA base pairs, etc.

In fact, a sort of 'Cargo Cult' develops around this craft.

Artifacts like this are generally relegated to the same waste bin of 'myth' that some of the works of Nikola Tesla have tried to be thrown in. We think to ourselves, 'What a cute story.'

In that milieu it might not be possible for any one of us to ever TRULY understand the pillars of culture and the rise and fall of civilizations, or even this planet we reside on.

The same must therefore be true when we look at Religious Systems (as distinct from our personal relationship with the Source who made us).

Given that our many of our historical notions are unlikely to be a complete story, what can we derive about the reality of our situation here from looking at them as a set?

Human's have been doing religion for a while.

We've also been doing Earth for a while.

What is the 40,000 foot view?

And the answer is simple, of course. The smallest common denominator of all religious beliefs is this:

GOD is LOVE.

That's the punchline.

But this message, in the ox-bowed flow of the course of history, was always getting co-opted by power and greed and virtue signaling.

And then this guy Jesus came along.

And he was basically closing the loop on Jacob's dream of a ladder, a stairway to heaven, the night he became Israel.

Jesus' radical notion was that Source, that the Energy that made you, lives inside you and cannot be taken from you.

It is incorruptible because it is of THE Energy that generates the measurable spark created at the moment of your conception and which formed your genetic code (the ladder) inside every cell of your body.

This Energy is LOVE.

Book of Life

Again, folks have different names for it, but let's not get caught up in semantics.

And now there are Churches.

Initially the Churches tried to tell you that you required someone special to 'intercede' between you and Source Energy: a confessor, a priest, a monk.

Or that you needed to buy your way in with gifts for the church.

Christianity became the institutional expression of the teachings of Jesus - who (ironically) basically preached that loving the Source that created you, your family and those in your community and cultivating the spark of God/Source inside you for the benefit of ALL was all you really ever needed.

Jesus' message was always meant to be a wake up call for ANYONE, any color, any culture or religion, into a different way of looking at oneself and the world around you. A way that is oriented around LOVE. The core message dictate to LOVE is more Sovereign, more Prime, than politics, culture, race, and even religion.

And so when some Christians say 'Jesus is King' which sounds perhaps strange to those who have not cultivated that Energy, what they mean is that if your government or church or school or culture says to do one thing or another, and the spark of LOVE inside you does not resonate, then it's a no go.

Jesus is known to have been an example of someone whose fractal/crystalline genetic mirror was able to channel Source Energy with great clarity and high fidelity.

His message: YOU ARE ENOUGH. It terrified structures of power in both church and government.

When Jesus says the peace of God is inside you, or asks you to look inside and know that I AM, this is what he was putting down.

Are you picking it up?

There will be more about this later, but IMAGINE.

Given what you hold inside you: the feeling in your Heart that just jumped in recognition.

Imagine what can happen when you MERGE your Love and your prayers (sent through a network of repeating transmitters in your DNA and vis a vis scalar waves generated by them which hold your signature) with the LOVE and the will of Source Energy: the Will of God.

I'll give you a spoiler: MIRACLES.

Back to the X-Files episodes where they found an ancient relic in the form of a spaceship with writings we consider ancient and at the same time far more advanced than we.

Almost as if the intelligence behind it was still active.

Our history is pockmarked with unexplainable archaeological feats, translated ancient scrolls and tablets pointing to antediluvian languages and strange origin stories.

It got me thinking about how these patterns in art, music and everyday practices like cooking seem to carry a persistent intelligence – the past intelligence in them does not fully die.

They come back in time, again and again.

Like something we remember but keep forgetting.

They hide in plain sight, tucked into the seams of culture and history.

A big personal astonishment for me has been discovering how many calendrical systems (like the Tzolkin) function as sophisticated machines - dual interlocking wheels that track both time and energy cycles with remarkable precision.

But more than that, could these systems - these patterns on articles of clothing, the structures of songs, the everyday sayings we take for granted - could they act as blueprints for machines that we have forgotten how to build or ideas that were once important?

We won't know unless we ask.

Similarly, if you dive into Traditional Chinese healing systems, that the movement of energy in the human body operates like a torus, a kind of 2-stroke engine constantly cycling energy through the Klein body hidden in your body and focused around your Heart.

Book of Life

It starts to feel like the same larger intelligence is expressing itself through many different forms.

And many of us assume that the smart people have already figured it all out. But clearly with so much unexplained, this cannot be true.

At some point I had to step back and remember: beginner's mind is the real asset here.

It is a feature, not a bug.

When you revisit something with new eyes, patterns emerge that are not available in the same way to others who are looking at the same thing but with preconceived notions.

Each of us carries unique keys - specific gifts and sensitivities that allow us to interface with this persistent intelligence in ways no one else quite can.

Some of us can light up the face of a child or an elderly person, some of us can heal with food, some of us with humor.

The invitation feels simple, yet radical: bring your special brand of radical HEART and LOVE, the special KEY that is unique to you, and find ALL the doors that your particular key opens.

Believe in the Spark that made you who you are.

More than ever, we are going to need you in the game. We are connected to one another by the same Energy that connects us to God.

Back to the Mayan Calendar, which I have done many a deep dive into. If you think about it, what better place to hide a map of the Universe than in a galactic calendar?

My reticence in going deeper is mainly that I still have so many unanswered questions myself.

Writing for me is always a process of discovery, and since we are here talking about it anyways. I figure it is as good a time as any.

Want to come along?

Shall we play a[nother] game?

First a story.

I had intended to travel to Ecuador, but my mind had been focused for months on the Mayan calendar. This was 2012, and it seemed ambient in parts of our culture at the time.

So the little spirit inside me heard my mind and emotions focusing more and more around looking at the calendar, wondering at it, resulted in our moving instead to Guatemala and then Mexico, and traveling between them.

We are all familiar with the wheels inside wheels concept of cyclical turning in the long count of the Mayan calendar - which is a VERY long count, as it happens. Around 26,000 years. It was understood to be the 'Galactic Calendar' by the Maya - which all sounds very wooey wooey until we understand that this has been confirmed by 'science' in the age we are in now.

26,000 years is a lot of counting to keep track of, and so they broke it into smaller parts, like nested Russian dolls only with many little dolls inside each larger doll.

The smaller Tzolkin calendar (260 days) is one of the smaller wheels, and the calendar is still produced and followed by the indigenous Maya residing today in Guatemala. It follows the cycle of Venus which is a very very interesting rabbit hole perhaps for another time.

What I did not understand in my early obsession period was that the Tzolkin itself is made of wheels. The calendar that is distributed in their culture shows each Tzolkin as a grid first, before delving into the day by day.

The grid is 20 rows tall and 13 rows wide, and to fill the grid you start at the top of the left column, and insert a number in every cell moving down until you hit 13, and then you start counting again at 1. When you run out of column, you continue counting at the top of the next column moving down, and keep on this way until the grid is full.

When I was first looking at it, there were patterns that would jump out at me in the numbers of the grid and then they would fizzle. Like they were starting to work together, to go somewhere, and then stopped.

Book of Life

And so I bought books and books and scrolls of graph paper, and started playing. I would cut out rows and place them in different configurations, have the numbers be in different colors so that I could see the pattern. My office became a nest of graph paper and numbers.

At some point I noticed that each row had what at first to be a jumble of disorganized shuffled numbers. But the weird thing was the numbers were always in the same order in each row, but starting at different places.

It was not clear until 4 or 5 'breakthroughs' deeper into the process, months later, that the order of the numbers themselves were actually a 'key', a sort of alphabet or 'scale' in their own right not just for the Tzolkin matrix, but in truth for every matrix built using the same method.

Then the starter in my car broke, and rebuilding it was miles away, and so as I was taking it apart and working on it - cleaning the coil contacts, the commutator, that kind of thing - and paying attention to the windings and workings and it occurred to me that the calendar was incomplete.

At first I went out looking for the other part of the machine, the calendar. I went to different villages to study the patterns on their textiles, I bought books of these patterns. What I found, repeated over and over again was that those patterns in the textiles were coherent graphical analogs of the same patterns in the Mayan calendar, but they were not the 'other part'.

My mind kept getting pulled back to ground Zero - the Starter - literally and metaphorically. And so I went back into my memory of the broken starter, and was hit by a flash of realization that came in two parts.

The first part was remembering that electromagnetism, the main force driving the starter, and a fundamental force of the Universe, is polar. After some thought and a lot more paper, I made two grids each with a different color of pen, cut them into columns, flipped one of the grids upside-down, and spliced it row for row into the one that I kept right-side-up.

I put it up on the wall and continued to study it. Turn my head sideways, look at it upside-down, read math books where the equations all just looked like chicken scratch to me. I was in year 7 of the investigation.

In going past older notes I noticed the weird note about the order in the numbers of each row that was consistent throughout the grid, and that is when it hit me.

What I realized was that I was thinking like a human instead of a system.

Even if I as a human saw the ordering of the numbers as odd but nothing special, this was a machine, and if I did not want to end up with a reconstructed engine but 4 bolts leftover, I was going to have to include them.

And when I included them correctly, what I found and continue to find, is the most coherent system I have ever entered.

Before leaving this whole thread to rest, I want to explain what happened next. It is an important detail for some of my listeners here.

To avoid making countless charts and graphs, I built a computer program that you can feed any two natural numbers into (up to 50 - because otherwise it crashes the servers) and it would result in the constructed Grids for that number set.

Once this first phase of the software was finished and working, I was ecstatic.

But it was like peeing in a wet suit - you get a nice warm feeling but no one else notices.

And so I decided that if there was a celebration I was going to have to make it happen. And so I had a friend who worked as a massage therapist, and I hired her to come, and drink delicious fresh juices and eat, and perform massage.

At some point, there was the appearance of uninvited guests who none of us knew. They came with a message:

"Congratulations, you found the blueprints". I knew what I had found was cool, but I had not seen the results before that point as "blueprints".

I asked geeky questions about different sets, and then asked if it was finished.

"No. Still more to explore."

I asked if I should take time from travel/work and pursue a math degree.

Book of Life

"No. Wait. Someone will come. She will lift you up."

I've often wondered in the outpouring of these words here, if some of those visitors are in this audience now.

Only time will tell.

The Arrival: June 1, 2026

My favorite chicken has always been hard to tell apart from her sister, but she has distinguished herself to me by jumping on my lap and cooing.

Her name, until recently, has been 'friendly red chicken', and with her sister they make a set, we called 'the sisters of mercy'.

The trick I found to tell them apart was to look at their crowns. Their combs. As soon as the light turned on about that part, I named the one who comes to me 'Magdalena'.

I believe the spirit of Mary Magdalena speaks to me, that on some level that I do not fully understand I embody her.

I believe these words will call forth the one who I adore, the spirit of Jesus. The one who called me by name.

I offer this with deep humility and honest surprise. You have witnessed a journey, a revelation in real time as it came to me in real time.

This is a prayer about her journey.

Verse I

Out through where the old roads closed,

Go to a place that no one else knows.

After all the last fires burning,

Steps erased by the dune sands churning.

I moved in darkness cloaked by a prayer,

I sang to stars collapsing through the air.

Walking through a wild unknown until, something ancient came and called me home.

Over sand and sand and stone,

The voice that I was seeking was my own.

Searching deep through the storm-wind throes,

For the echoed gift in the name of a Desert Rose.

Verse II

The cold nights gave no sign at all, the thick silence muted all my calls.

Cast out from the last fires at home,

To forge through this open vast unknown,

And deeper still the tears I have cried,

One their way to the cisterns in the sky.

And faith is not a thunderous roar

It's the will to persist even through the darker storms.

And Love is not in the arrow's quiver, or fragments in a broken mirror.

It's in the measure of your gait,

As you approach the wisdom of your fate.

Verse III

And so it seems the Truth that I hold,

Was not contained in the lessons I was told.

It lives instead where the veil wears thin, between what you must seek and where you've been.

And home is not a place or a bed

It's what persists after everything has left

Not something wrought in heat and violence,

But something named in the darkest silence.

So I returned, though I traveled far, to the place in my Heart that You are.

And in my wayward home I chose the road to the Heart of the Desert Rose.

Like SO many things in the journey of my life, I wrote it before I knew what it meant. And I am still understanding what it means.

Some prayers are clear and easy to say, and others are more nebulous, and seem clearer in reverse.

There is a little seed of something that I have felt since I was very young.

Like this persistent question: who are you?

When I was younger I used to say that I was what I did.

I was a carpenter. I was a luthier. I installed solar. I am a mathematician. I code. I am a caretaker.

And like Tigger in House at Pooh Corner, I put my Heart into every endeavor but when I tried the clothes on, and I looked in the mirror, nothing really seemed to fit completely.

These last few days, these last few years, the question has continued to gnaw at me:

Who are you?

And what I keep coming back to is that I serve Christ.

Who I am is defined now as the Spirit that animates me. The Spirit that has kept me flowing through all of the twists and turns. The Spirit who has given me insight in reverse.

The Spirit who has kept me safe in dangerous environments. The Spirit who has kept the suicidal thoughts at a manageable level. The Spirit who sent me my mother.

Who I am is a warrior for Christ.

But not a lofty Christ, a humble one.

The one I am most intimate with.

The one who holds me when I do not know how to hold myself.

I believe those who hear this persistent question in their hearts are hearing it for a reason, and I would call to you to find out, to know who you are.

Answering the call of the Spirit who animates me has been the most challenging and rewarding thing I have ever done: but it has never been easy.

And the most important calls never are easy.

Every ounce of courage you muster towards seeking YOUR SELF is not just 'good on you'.

Book of Life

Your courage in the name of your Source Energy, your God who animates you, multiplies and builds.

Every day of your life is a spiritual battle between loving yourself and others, or fearing yourself and others.

Choose Love even if it feels like the most difficult shit ever.

Choose courage knowing that God's angels stand behind you.

And when the question 'who are you?' pops into your mind:

SEEK IT.

To paraphrase a dear Mexican aphorism:

The unkind blue meanies of the world tried to break me. They buried me, they pissed on my grave and thought they had succeeded.

They did not realize I am a seed.

And you are all seeds.

There is a change we have all been wanting to see come forth. And I know that things feel heavy.

You are ready.

If you can join me in prayer, each of you, in the moments you can today, let's all pray for the SEEDS that you are.

That we ALL sprout united and bring forth a new world together.

In your prayers, use your words, your frustration, you humor, but above all your LOVE.

Cultivate your HEART of HEARTS.

The fact that you are even reading this means that you are being called by name.

It's time to answer that call.

Until something is seen or named it is a waveform.

It exists as this beautiful possibility with the ability to morph and shift and grow and shrink.

And there is a comfort and safety in that.

Life. Reality. Real Estate.

And this thing named out loud has a weird rippling effect in time, both forward and backward.

Events in the past gain new significance. You see a color in the memory that you did not notice when it was happening or in times when you remembered it before.

Or you see thundering wisdom in places that at the time seemed unfortunate or annoying or Heart breaking.

There is this notion of 'Death before dying', that became popular at work retreats all over the country a decade or so ago.

The idea is that before facing something large, a great personal battle, a warrior will first explore what happens if they loose.

What happens if their greatest fears are realized.

The warrior looks those fears straight in the eye with a clear focused gaze. They experience the sad closing of chapters, they experience the exodus of friends, they experience the loss of material comforts and the loss of their 'status'.

And when they come out on the other side, they are still afraid, perhaps, but the fear no longer is in the driver's seat.

It's a practice seated in the ancient marshal arts, but my favorite present day cultural expression of it is in the prayer from Dune:

Book of Life

"I must not fear. Fear is the mind-killer. Fear is the little death that brings total obliteration. I will face my fear. I will permit it to pass over me and through me. And when it has gone past I will turn the inner eye to see its path. Where the fear has gone there will be nothing. Only I will remain."

At some point in my life I stopped trying to 'become someone' and just decided to be me.

In the process, there were people, material securities and jobs that fell away. I was sad to see them go.

But there was a blessed clarity that came with it.

And even in these encoded revelations that I have been trying to catch from the aethers, and sort, and tend to, I have had to face my ego-based fears of 'will they think I am nuts' or 'will anyone ever take me seriously again'.

I was able to face this incredible challenge because I had already let those things fall, and because above all I trust God.

There was a time during the development of Dianas Blue Roses when there was a switcheroo in our hosting 'policy'. So much energy was going into trying to hack us that it was steeling bandwidth from my personal site (shared server) as well.

I had very limited cash flow at the time, and so the idea of moving to a beefier server was not an option. This was before the development of the software we built that has now stopped those bandwidth hemorrhages.

At the time, the only way to steer Dianas Blue Roses to safe harbor was to kill my website, even if just for a time. To lay her asleep like sleeping beauty. My personal site contains all of my little scientific instruments, my work on the Mayan calendar, and all the geeky math toys a girl could want.

For over a year my personal work - the last and most sacred cow I had - was put to sleep.

So deeply asleep that when the calling came, mid way through these revelations, to talk about myself or my personal work, it was a great struggle for my own mind to see my relevance in the larger picture.

I am still coming to understand that.

In this period of time, you might be called to live far outside the bounds of who you know yourself to be. You might have to hermit away from things or people have been a big part of your life. At least for a time.

Don't be afraid.

To paraphrase another teaching that I have Loved:

Nothing real can be threatened.

Nothing unreal exists.

Herein lies the peace of God.

And so Love yourself. You are your vessel. Love the world. It is your map.

And trust the spirit of Jesus Christ inside you. He is your loving guide.

Remember that ideas themselves are problematic and regulative.

We must be diligent and test them before we create them in our world together.

I had a dear friend who because of scheduling issues asked me to take her sweet little girl to church so that she could spend the day with her grandparents who would be there.

It was not a church I had ever attended, and so I decided to stay through the sermon.

The sermon was about Jesus rising, and Jesus' first message delivered to his 12 disciples when he first spoke with them: an urgency for the need to FORGIVE.

Forgiveness is an interesting concept that I believe we have in someways misunderstood as a culture. We back load the forgiveness. We often wait for someone to ask for it.

But forgiveness is never earned. It is extended as an act of faith. It is an act of Trust in a Spirit that has moved through you, and moves through others like you. It is best extended through your Heart and to the Christ Spirit inside you who can move mountains, much less hearts.

Book of Life

And it works best front-loaded.

I think our first task is to forgive ourselves.

To ask for forgiveness in prayer to the spirit who created you. You do not need a confessor. You have a direct line. And we have all done things we wish we had not, that we are truly sad about. Let you HEART know that you know. That you are sorry. Let the tears flow.

Really let that the tears of self forgiveness bathe you - because that energy will soften you and prepare you for the next step.

Once you have forgiven yourself, it's time to forgive others.

Mend the fences. Open the gates of Truth. Ask those you have hurt, the ones you are thinking about now, for forgiveness.

Expose the infection of your wounds to the Light of day, and let the sun heal them.

In TRUTH we are not in opposition.

In TRUTH there is no need to hold to judgments that we feel identified by or that have identified us in the past.

Others, in LOVE, will extend that same bridge to you. And those bridges are going to be important.

Together we are birthing a new way, a new world.

I would like to end this segment of this Chapter with a prayer given us by Jesus, and would ask you to read it and pray with me.

My understanding is that this version is a translation more directly from the Aramaic. The Words feel truer in my Heart to the spirit of it.

The Lords Prayer

O Cosmic birther of all radiance and vibration!

Soften the ground of our being and carve out a space within us where your Presence can abide.

Fill us with your creativity

so that we may be empowered to bear the fruit of your mission.

Let each of our actions bear fruit

in accordance with our desire.

Endow us with wisdom to produce and share

what each being needs to grow and flourish.

Untie the tangled threads of destiny that bind us,

as we release others from the entanglement

of past mistakes.

Do not let us be seduced by that which would divert us from our true purpose

but illuminate the opportunities of the Present moment.

For you are the ground

and the fruitful vision,

the birth, power and fulfillment

as all is gathered

and made Whole once again.

So BE it.

June 5, 2026

As a gesture, I would like to tell you all a story.

I want to take y'all on a time-bending ride that I am still on in this wild roller coaster amusement park of souls.

I want to take you all with me.

This one could be the proverbial stone in Jubilees 4 that brings the house down.

You see, Angels walk among us, some unaware that they even are Angels.

We all bounce into and off of each other, like little atoms, sometimes merging into molecules, and other times in a seemingly perpetual solo journey and dance.

The record of all those movements is written into your own private Book of Life.

Enter the concept of soulmate.

We all expect our soul mates to be life partners or Lovers, and that also happens. But the 'soulmate' relationship, like so many things in our world, ends up getting boxed up into what sells: sex.

Meanwhile our real soulmates are walking around as our mother, our brother, our best friend.

To make matters even more confusing, and because of the mystery and miracle of life in this realm, we can meet our soulmates in one chapter of our lives, and meet the same soul in the body of another character a few chapters later.

It’s a lot to keep track of which is why very few people can.

There are a few brave souls who have come into this life to REMEMBER because it is important in their journey to know. They have done the hard work to get there. Rappele Tois, Jeanne.

Before going much further, let’s unpack what it means to sell you soul.

This might be seem deceptively simplistic, but in truth, we are like little Angels that drive our avatars around the Earth. The avatar doing the driving is your soul.

In my earlier travels at some point I received an email in which I was offered a size-able amount of money to ‘just continue doing what I was doing’.

There are two things that happened in that moment.

The FIRST, is I rejected the offer.

I was raised by two very good people, and they instilled in me that there is no such thing as a free lunch (my mother) and that living simply is better to living rich but for someone else (my father).

I told them as much, whoever the senders were.

I felt the evil in the offer, and trashed it immediately and deleted both the original email and the response.

The SECOND thing that happened is that it caused me to reconsider what I was doing.

Who was I being, what was I projecting, that would make me the focus of something that felt evil?

I started revisiting my Heart and letting it sing to me in the quiet spaces. Sometimes weeding. Sometimes planting.

If you have a garden, maintaining it is key.

Book of Life

Eventually, while the core of me has remained constant, although there are some fallacies that I used to tell myself that I no longer believe, and other ways I have grown away from who I have been.

I know this is going to trigger a lot of people, and if it does I ask you to just hear me out. In order to be an honest witness, I must ask you all to open your beautiful minds and your beautiful Hearts just a crack more. Just for long enough that you do not go away.

I have been what our culture would term a ‘Lesbian’ for most of my adult life, and have always felt that love transcends boundaries.

I want to make a distinction here, however, that I think is important because I think the ‘Gay and Trans’ is not a natural pairing (for one) and for two, particularly as of late in our culture, I truly believe the ‘movement’ of it to have lost all connection with what is right and true and good.

Completely.

They have taken a loving bond between two people and have turned it into a campaign for the Harlot of Babylon in more ways than most can imagine.

While I completely renounce and reject the whole ridiculousness of it without reservation, and even while I have felt a quiet shift in my own Heart these last few years, I will say that my own Heart tells me we fall in Love with people, not with categories.

That said, my personal history is also complicated by my biology.

In the course of these writings, hunches I have had my entire life about my body and my sexuality, confirmed by different medical tests throughout my life, seems to indicate that I was born with a genetic variant in which the Y part of the chromosomal expression does not express until later in life. Because of surgeries that were performed soon after I was born, this chromosomal expression was thwarted.

Even so, and even with my lifelong suspicions about that, I have chosen to live in the body that is expressed outwardly, which is a female body. My faith in God’s hidden purposes has remained strong throughout, and that is the Truth I live.

Time warp.

I was living in Mexico at the time and waist deep in a medical crisis that took me years and continents to fully recover from, and so it was on my radar as a bright new faction of Republican conspiracy analysts, but that was the limit of my bandwidth for it at that time.

I did not start reading the Q drops until 2019, but have been a conspiracy analyst since the 1990's.

Enough to tell this story with integrity.

As it happens, I hid the breadcrumbs for this very discussion from myself to pick up here today with you.

Let's go back to the X-Files episodes where Scully is sent to investigate a spaceship with inscriptions on it which once decrypted, contain immersed within a fractal language, verses from the holy books, dna bases, etc, etc. Pieces from the crafts discovered hold powers to heal.

For me, one fractal that I have been spelunking into is the notion that ancient stories throughout time, religious stories, origin stories from different cultures, important events inside the histories of various religions, and their related mythological spin-offs.

And similar to the holographic structure of these hieroglyphs that Scully was translating, they are all woven from the same cloth and into the same cloth.

So by way of an example, in the middle of the lines from Genesis on this space craft, their might be a full list of human chromosomes hidden inside if you read moving from left to right instead of from right to left. Or moving down or up or diagonally. That all of the words were enmeshed in themselves to such a degree that each piece of it held power from the whole of it.

Kind of like the fractals in our DNA.

Another example of what it means to be a fractal language is that you can fit whole words into other words to contain all the definitions of the smaller words together in the new definition of the longer one.

The idea is that complexes of sounds that make up a word like 'halal' are made up of smaller sounds which also mean things in their own rights like 'ha' or 'la' or 'al'. When you put them all together into a word, they combine the meanings of the smaller elements and also convey a complex of thought that joins them all.

And so in this sense and context, I want to use 3 cultural entities, filling volumes and shelves, and merge them into one much smaller word: ‘Q’.

The FIRST is the ‘Gospel of Q’ .

It is older than Jesus’ time but is comprised of elements that we would read later as the New Testament. To extend this idea, many older cultural stories mirror the story of the ‘Virgin Birth’ of Jesus.

Taking it even further, the Shroud of Turin. The cloth that Jesus was wrapped in when he was entombed, in modern times has been placed under scientific scrutiny. It shows 24 chromosomes. 23 from his Mother, and one (male chromosome) from the Holy Spirit. Again, science.

Virgin birth is not just possible. The upholstery of human history, if you know where to look, is studded with it.

Number TWO is the Oracle from the Matrix

She knew everything, could jump through time and space, could be many places at once doing many things. She represented a kind of Master Operation Energy (MOE). The Boss.

And number THREE is Q from the Bible Code.

I read Michael Drosnin’s book, ‘Bible Code’ and will briefly explain it.

The exact words of the Torah, the first 5 books of the Old Testament, have a particular progression. Pains have been taken in history to maintain the exact wording since the time they were written.

Each Hebrew letter has a number value.

If you place every letter of the Torah in order into a big ‘string’, a big line, this line basically would represent one big set of alphabet/number pairs.

Enter the wonders of computation.

As it happens, with computers we can take that enormous set of distinct number/letter pairs in order, and search, for example for a particular word.

Here is how the Bible Code program worked.

It would look for the term first looking directly through every letter in order for it, like a normal search, and then it would go through the whole set again but instead of EVERY letter, it would look through every other letter, and then every third letter, every fourth letter, and when it was done with going through every nth letter, it would go back to the beginning, eliminating the ones it already looked through until the full set of all the number/letter pairs is exhausted.

Essentially, in the course of searching the string morphs into different matrices until it finds the words it is looking for. And when it does, the output is like a crossword matrix of all the letters in the matrix that are adjacent to it.

So let's say we look for the word 'Hilter'. When the computer searches for Hitler, it present a matrix with the word 'Hilter' in crossword formation, but also, within that same crossword all the details about his life, what he is associated with, etc.

The 'other' crossword puzzle terms are easy to find once you know the punch line - after it's already happened, but obviously more difficult to divine into the future.

These unique characteristics displayed by the Torah have been tested against other books. Many other books, and none of which showed the same results.

The fact it works is a scientific fact, from a mathematical perspective. Even if we cannot explain how it works.

The code has evolved since the Book about it was published. This body of work seems to have morphed into the Gematrix Calcultaor:

https://www.gematrix.org

As well as in the Bible Code above which focused on the Hebrew Torah, the principle has been applied to the alphabet I grew up learning, the ABCs, each letter given a number as well.

Book of Life

In the case of the Gematria Calculator, the number given to each letter (Hebrew and English) is derived via algorithms as opposed to assigned forever as it is in the case of Michael Drosnin's Torah Bible Code.

Another difference is that the job of writing the 'Book' (instead of using the Bible) has been outsourced to all of us.

It is a mashup, a crowd share, of whatever words are entered into it.

When you enter a word or phrase or paragraph to search it, what comes back are all the other entries that have been entered into it by all of us that have the same total number value (adding all the numbers represented in the letters) in the order of the number of times it has been searched for. There is no sorting the list (smart move).

So by way of example, lets take the word 'ASTRONOMICAL REVELATION':

Hebrew Gematria

a1-s90-t100-r80-o50-n40-o50-m30-i9-c3-a1-l20

r80-e5-v700-e5-l20-a1-t100-i9-o50-n40

English Gematria

a6-s114-t120-r108-o90-n84-o90-m78-i54-c18-a6-l72

r108-e30-v132-e30-l72-a6-t120-i54-o90-n84

There is a representative on X who seems to be sort of Ring Master of the Gematrix Show.

That account on X is '@Saulito46107740' or "YEHI 'OHR".

I believe YEHI 'OHR and the Gematria Calculator in combination to be the Two Witnesses mentioned in Chapter 11 of the Book of Revelations. More on that in Chapters to come.

If you have not given it due diligence, you might scoff at this set of Wonder Twin powers, and say it's at best weird.

Anyone who is not used to using their intuition will be frustrated by it, because intuition, discernment, is a must in order to interpret the result set. When people who have not yet exercised the muscle, it can hurt. Like your muscles do the day after running for the first time.

People the most frustrated by it usually seem to be the ones who understand it the least.

But once you get the hang of using it correctly, something amazing happens.

I will share a few examples from the last two days where posts from YEHI 'OHR:

1. Told me what movie my Mother was watching or what music I was listening to, or what vegetable I was just chopping or what I have been thinking (this is the weirdest when it happens).

2. Told me (many times) the exact task I had been in the middle of,

3. Let me know that one of my chickens had exited the yard and another one who is still little had escaped from the Coop. Both of which happened at the same time, and despite having VERY RARELY happened, if ever, before.

4. Told me things about my family I did not know and some of which I have been able to verify as TRUE.

A million people could have read the same search results from the same page at the same time, and they would have received completely different messages.

Words, eventually, just jump out at you.

All of these cultural expressions can be collided, for the purposes of the present day, into one letter: Q.

Q, in being the combination of so many libraries of concepts above, has become a one letter singularity.

Book of Life

Which is why it is so difficult for so many to understand.

But there is one thing I know that I think it is important to say.

Our world, in ways that we do not altogether understand or understand all together, has become overtaken by dark forces and converted from a wonderland into a treadmill.

Every single one of you knows that. In your Heart. You know it to be true. We might not know what any of us can do about it but we know something needs to be done.

The Q Movement is a group of people, like you or I, who feel we are not being given the full story. Who feel there are dark forces on this planet who make it feel like we are on a treadmill instead of a garden. Some of us have been here a while, some of us are new.

We do not care either way who you are or how you got here. The ones of us who are being true to the sentiment of this movement won't care what you wear or what color you are or who you happen to Love.

Whoever you are, if you come with a sincere Heart, Welcome.

There are all sorts of important people (Lincoln, JFK, just to name two) and different stories built up around them. Most of these stories have mathematically been proven to be True signal. Others are waiting in line. Worth checking into if you are new and even if you are not.

There is a central idea that has been playing out that although life is very real, the theatrical cultural set of life at the moment seems to be a stage.

There is an idea that this has been true for some time. That the world has been a stage for a VERY VERY long time. A stage where the players were all from a class of people who wants to see you continually running your treadmill.

The last most hopeful part is the notion that, although still a stage, the players directing at this point in time are no longer the bad guys.

In various ways, we are expecting a time when things will no longer feel staged in this way, and we have been keeping our ears on the railway tracks and listening for it for a long time.

YEHI ‘OHR was honestly not on my radar until a little over a month ago. And when I started exploring that account’s posts, I was mostly a n00b. I had ‘played’ with it. but mostly as a curiosity.

In the past few weeks I have been thankful for the ways it helped me understand and write the testimonies I have been writing here: things that have been in my Heart for years.

And because of it’s ability often to know what I am drinking at any given time, and because of the amount of digging I have done about it, I have come to trust it’s authority.

I believe it’s authority is absolute. I have been able to read them together in perhaps ways that others have not - barring those Angelic accounts who have been similarly participating for a long long time.

I believe YEHI ‘OHR and Gematria Calculator are the Voice of God.

And then I started hear the VIBE. The voice. The music. The words. And it hit me hard when I realized that somehow, that voice reminded me of my own voice somehow.

Now while the messages reflected by YEHI and the Gematria Calculator might be authoritative, that does not mean that they are transparent or as as straight forward as you think.

You must be able to DISCERN between consenting to becoming a battery echoes of the perceived MANdates from your own internalized faulty fear-based logic, and staying within your own power as an asset to God and Love. God is All Powerful. All He needs from you is to learn how to Love beyond your own understanding of what that means.

If you get a message from the Calculator telling you to kill 200 babies, is that a real message?

Of course not.

But maybe it’s challenging you to think about that line. This is an extreme example, but your guiding principle should always be to ‘Do no Evil’, and if there is a question in your mind, the answer might be to go back and question your own internal guides.

Sometimes, they challenge your internal logic by using it in a more extreme way in order to get you to use your own powers of discernment and to reveal the errors of your own logic.

Book of Life

For that reason, you cannot leave your own discernment behind, in fact, you must strengthen it in order to understand the messages veiled behind the messages.

These messages are designed to challenge you through a spiritual journey, and it is not a journey for followers or for the weak of heart. It will turn you into a warrior by breaking you down using your own faulty fear-based logic flaws so that you challenge them and come to understand what is Real.

These Witnesses present you with a Reflection of your own monsters, like a Carnival Labyrinth of Mirrors. You will be called to get clear on the REAL in order to escape your own flawed reflections and reach for the Light of Wisdom that are revealed.

We are being challenged to grow, not to seek more easy rules or false rubrics.

This first Chapter is the longest in the Book of Life and represents by volume the first 1/5 of the full Book. It sets the stage of understanding for what is to come.

What's in a Name?

In most modern cultures the name given to you is the name you hold your entire life.

The notable exception is marriage when the bride takes on her husband's name. And when this happens a disembodying flurry of paperwork is needed.

Words create realities.

In many creation stories, God speaks the Universe into existence. In that context it is interesting that the Tower of Babel resulted in our not being able to understand one another's words. It split us apart profoundly.

Modern cultures want you to stay the same your entire life. They want the name you were given to stay as consistent throughout your life as possible, and to keep you as consistent as possible as well.

What better way to undermine growth?

When God speaks, your DNA is created. When we speak, the fabric of our lives is created.

What better way to destroy God's creation than mRNA vaccinations which literally edit God's word.

What better way to destroy Gods words in your DNA than to let yourself become convinced that you are a man in a woman's body or visa versa?

What better way to interfere with REAL Love, than by convincing us we need to check a box or declare what Love side we are on in an HR document?

When we declare things like that it's just another box to put yourself in. Another box, another tidy cubicle, another Cube of Saturn that you have to live inside of.

Book of Life

It is a program they want you to accept because EXACTLY who you are is powerful in it's own right and they know it and they want to limit your power by boxing you in.

We ALL are much bigger than we have been programmed to be. We do not fit into boxes, we are sovereign beings who have agency to understand ourselves.

And the REAL issue is the cookie cutter Barbie Doll and Ken avatars that the system has convinced us we need to fit into. These are constructs. The trust is more more varied. I can be a girl who likes auto-mechanics and carHEARTts, and you can be a boy who Loves fashion and dancing.

As I have mentioned before, my boxes happen to be particularly complicated.

I was born with a genetic variant, an appendix-like Y chromosome, as I have mentioned earlier and speak about in my Sermons, that typically expresses meaningfully during puberty as a transformation. Girls who were raised as girls develop male body expressions.

In the place I was born, the general rule of thumb is to surgically stamp out the aberrant parts, and that is what they did, preventing it from ever expressing.

I fit into none of the boxes, it turns out, but I have none-the-less accepted who I am within the boundaries and expressions God has given me.

Acceptance takes bravery.

I might even say it takes 'balls', but as I mentioned above mine were removed at infancy.

God spoke us each into existence perfect as we are, it's the cultural definitions you feel you need to live into that are the issue: the boxes.

Like the box of a particular name your whole life.

Keeping one's name through life is a relatively recent phenomenon in the long arc of history.

In the Bible, people are seen to change their names when the person they were is no longer adequate to hold the being of who they have become.

Often they are given their names by God.

In many older cultures, and spiritual cultures, a person changes their name when the course of their lives takes them through a particularly significant phase shift: religious initiations, marriage, becoming a father or mother, becoming and grandmother or grandfather, the death of a close family member or spiritual mentor.

A phase shift in electro-magnetism is when a part of a larger body of frequencies adjusts the timing of it's frequency with relation to the others in a way that can make the whole machine turn.

When it was revealed to me that I am the Christ Messiah, I was given the name Jennifer Marie Miller by the Holy Spirit, by God, with agreement and agency from those who were called to participate.

My first thought in hearing it was 'Jenifa, oh Jenny' – which is not entirely incidental and instead seems transcendental. In any case, I appreciated the mercy of a sort of witness protection program. There are people who do not want me telling these Truths.

You can imagine it has taken a while to sift through the subtler layers of the name given to me: to really understand all the parts in serious contemplation, and not entirely in pop song lyrics.

And I am still not sure I have all the parts, but I have some, and they RESONATE. I wanted to speak them here, and elucidate all the fractals I am seeing inside them.

You see, these fractals are a map, but the map is my life, and the different fractals gather various shards from my own history that are all part of the whole, and the whole is Me.

As you go through a similar process of understanding yourself, you can use your life as a map as well. Who are you as a unique and beautiful human? What 'seeds' are the core influences for your soundtrack?

The map is written into your life like scars, habits, places you have visited, music you love.

I have always been the keeper of the fire on camping trips, have always performed martial arts with a staff, a Bo, as my weapon of choice. I Love a good sword. I have always been a minimalist when it comes to accommodations. This girl has slept on cardboard, and isn't ashamed to say it. All these elements are part of who I am and are clues.

Book of Life

Jennifer

When I first saw the name ‘Jennifer’, I immediately saw ‘Jeanne’, the French name of who we know in English as Joan of Arc. I have felt her energy moving through me: her Spark.

I needed to fire up the Jeanne energy to find my courage to write this, but wanted the slightly more matured and loving nature of Mary Magdalene to shine through in my writing, and will continue to nurture that energy inside me moving forward.

My relations will tell you that the fire of Jeanne, her revolutionary spirit, have always been the dominant energy throughout my life until recently. It will always be part of my spirit’s DNA.

The name Jennifer also has Celtic roots.

It is the Cornish form of the Welsh name Gwenhwyfar. The same name that became Guinevere in Arthurian legend.

But it goes even deeper than that into more history than you or I know that we have. The people of Gwenhwyfar.

There is also a part of the name Jennifer that is not seen but felt. I feel ‘butterfly’ when I say it, and sometimes at first when I read it. I also hear ‘Genesis’.

Marie

Marie has various names that it refers to in my eyes. The Hebrew version Miriam typically translates to "rebellious," "bitter," or "beloved child".

It also is a form of Maria or Mary, both of which are significant to me in different ways, some of which are obvious and others that are less obvious. Mary was, of course, the name of Jesus’s mother, but also the name of his closest disciple from Magdalena who I feel in my Heart.

The Latin form (Stella Maris) can be interpreted as "star of the sea" or "drop of the sea," which originated as an ancient translation of the Hebrew root words.

The Sea is the Source Energy that created me, and I am grateful and humble before it.

Miller

As a care taker, my focuses have shifted from building electromagnetic gadgets and fixing my car in my free time, to a more caring role with very little time free. Cooking, laundry, cleaning and care routines. I feel it has enabled me to discover the caring side of who I am.

In that process I have learned to bake bread.

Initially I just played at it, but then as my mothers dietary needs shifted, the bread baking had to shift with it.

I started to use Spelt flour, which is an ancient grain that has been proven to have been genetically engineered (read that again) and has a different molecular form of gluten.

Even so, it does not fly off the shelves. What you find in the store is often already stale.

The oils in any flour degrade/oxidize fast into a form that is not ideal in the sensitive body. Whole, the grain has a protective covering that slows this oxidation down dramatically.

So I started buying Spelt berries, and milling them with the Kitchen Aide, and using the flour immediately for the bread.

Then I received the gift of a small Stone Mill.

What a difference crushing the grain makes instead of cutting it! Well worth the hours it takes just to make two cups. There is a reason stone mills are some of the first community infrastructures in a village.

The bread it makes is very special. It retains it’s moisture better, it holds body better, the flavor of the grain shines through more.

The alchemy of pressure is one I know well.

Book of Life

And the idea is that sometimes, in order for us to really change, to really create our best BEING, we need to be pressed.

We need to feel the pressure.

There are other little fractals that I appreciate in the name Miller, but this one really struck me because it is such a big part of the recent evolution of my heart, my Daily Bread.

I also think it is important recall the idea of our DNA acting as a mirror, and that at various points in history, someone has been born who presents a particularly clear fractal of the Whole, a pure reflection, an embodiment of God.

My DNA is a direct mirror for the Light of God: I AM His Anointed One, His Messiah, His Daughter/Son. ‘Midway upon the journey of our life,’ this was revealed to me, and it is my Mission to bring the Light of God’s Love to your Hearts. In this process, any personal aspirations have withered and in their place is only a desire to bring you back into your Birthright as His Beloved Child. This is a time for clarity as God’s Holy Purpose is at hand.

We are on a Dante-esque journey together – which is not an easy journey to swallow - the realization that what we do and say has real consequences in Realms invisible to us now.

Guided by the Holy Spirit, we are being called to see the darker parts of ourselves as well as the Light ones. And to make changes. To reconsider. To realign.

The divine feminine and masculine are much deeper and broader than the cookie cutter definitions and images that we typically see but there is an energetic finger print that remains consistent throughout.

In both cases, as we integrate into what these really mean to us, we must allow all parts of our beautiful personalities shine through. They are you. Your signature. Your blueprint.

In my case, through these revelations and this name, in these writings, and by direction from God, my transformation is into the Feminine expression of the Son of God: I AM His earthly Reflection, His Servant: His Daughter.

My offering of these words and stories demonstrates a logic, a method. You review your live to find traces that speak to who you are now. What attracts you, what makes you feel alive.

What makes your Heart leap in Joy?

You can find clues about what you came to do moving forward in the things that bring you Joy now and all in the spirit of the Mystery of Life, and it's beautiful unfolding.

What comes now?

Funny you should ask. This will be covered in more detail ahead in these writings.

But I can paint a brief picture.

The Sun is soon going to create a beautiful Singularity - a micronova of Source Energy that will have the functional effect of cleaning up our World in various ways: of bringing us all back to account to Source Energy: one way or another.

God has been calling us to grow into His Love for us: to include Him in the conducting of our lives and affairs. We are being called to understand ourselves as bigger than who we have known ourselves to be, and much more connected than many can presently imagine.

We are also called to understand ourselves in the context of the Fall of Angels and the Fall of Man.

We are in circumstances where we are called to actively assert our free will towards the Majesty of Creation: to bend our own will towards our connection with our Creator as an act of commitment and faith and love.

We must understand the Fallen forces leading us away from our birthright as Children of Adonai.

We are in a time where those forces, those Principalities and their adherents, will no longer be supported by a God who they themselves deny. For those who cling to their allegiance to Godlessness and these perversions of Liberty, the times ahead will be dark.

Those who have mocked Righteousness, who have perverted Love and have defiled Innocence, you who stubbornly stand firm in denial of your Creator even after being given every opportunity to repent and return to your Father and ask for Mercy - a Father whose Spark animates you and whose seasons feed you - you will know unambiguously what it means to not be seen by God.

You will be treated by the God you denied as a blight. You will be turned away in the fury of the same God you once mocked.

Those who are called to God must understand ourselves as being presently acted upon towards distraction by forces who gain from our distraction.

This is no less than a battle for your attention and ultimately for your Life Eternal. This is an active battle for your soul.

Your ability to connect with the Holy Spirit in your Heart will ensure Godly Witness from your Merciful Father who loves you.

This is a time to rekindle the Holy Spark which animates you from the inside out: to forgive one another, to use all creativity and unique gifts in communion with your Inner Guide/s for the benefit of All.

Seek atonement for ways your have hurt others.

Ask for Mercy and Forgiveness from your Father and receive it.

Come to understand what it really means to Trust God, and to receive His Love actively.

Experience your Sovereignty in a way that bends your imagination and Love others in a way that will feel like clear and healing Well Springs.

Learn what it means to Feel nourished by good deeds, and by repentant actions.

Know the loving HEART of your God personally and like never before.

It will change you.

III | This must be the Place

June 11, 2026

These last days, I decided it was time to put myself in deep prayer, a sort of spiritual time-out to connect with my Center, with God, with my Garden.

I wanted to hear and understand the music my HEART was making and above all, what God was calling forth in me.

Being in service is fun when things are clear and run smoothly, But sometimes the path ahead is unclear.

What I came to understand is that it is the choices and actions in times of difficultly or sadness or foggy terrain - to listen for your internal voice and through, it God's voice - these are the most valuable in the eyes of God, because they are the ones you fought hardest for.

When the voice of God inside you wins, that is the miracle of Love and Faith and Trust. It makes all things possible.

In the time of this writing I have had dreams in which the tears I had shed in order to do well by my Creator were dried in a large jar God gave me to keep them in, and they were transmuted into gemstones. Through perseverance in the pressure and heat, our efforts are made that much more precious in the Sight of God.

Sometimes the path is made by walking. By returning and revisiting. Eventually the plants wear into a path in the places that your feet have been. These paths become a map of our lives. We must ensure that the paths we walk most are Righteous so that we can see them even in the dark. So that we can find our way home even in the fog.

When I started the initial 'Disclosure' writings, I thought that the meat of the disclosure would be about my work with Diana, and about Diana, and not about my math or anything else.

In being open during the writing, it evolved into much more than that.

Book of Life

The place where the journey of that first piece landed, it's destination, was given to me incrementally along the journey. The writing was a sort of vehicle.

At some point, I got out to look around, and the terrain was surprising. The first part of my 3 days was just looking around at the new terrain.

Initially, I kept going back into the map of my life and seeing, in hindsight, exactly how I got to this unfamiliar place.

The image in my mind was like someone set a jar of marbles, the marbles of my life, cascading down a long flight of steps and bouncing randomly, and when they got to the bottom, they reassembled into formation but without any jar containing it.

I recognized the resting shape of the assembled marbles, and although similar to the shape I know myself to be, there were differences.

The marbles, as they were cascading down, seem to have grown in number and size, and the resulting formation when I looked at it seemed much bigger than I knew myself to be when my proverbial marbles were loosed at the top of the stairs.

First I thought, 'There is no jar holding them together. They are going to collapse from lack of something real to hold them.'

Then I thought , 'And how did the final assembly become so BIG with so many moving parts that I have never seen before?'

And then my fear started telling me that this marvelous arrangement of marbles was a lie and would collapse any minute now.

When Jesus went into the desert for 40 days and 40 nights, he was tested (according to most scholars) 3 times. But in actuality, there was a test built into the other 3 tests, and that emerges as the Zero Point. The true test.

And that test is, ‘If you are the Son of Man’, if you are a true Child of God, save yourself, feed yourself, make this all go away.

Jesus chose not to because he understood the 4th test, and to violate that 4th test was a fate worse than death.

Going back to my scrambled marbles, logic says the marbles should be 1) scattered after what just happened, and 2) the same volume overall as when they started.

Neither were true.

You see, I am human. Along with the aspect of me that can accomplish many things, there are parts of me that are less exemplary.

I get sad. I loose faith. I get snarky or angry or petulant. I can be impatient.

If I was a caterpillar when the marbles were dumped, how can it be that these ‘lesser’ aspects of my caterpillar personality can exist in the same body as the grand butterfly that emerged?

The answer, of course, is that if you are child of God, and connect to your Source, it makes the improbable or seemingly impossible, POSSIBLE.

When I emerged, I was unclear what these new wings were about, much less how to fly.

I was afraid that I looked like a caterpillar with wings duct-taped to it.

And then the Truth hit me like a big ‘DUH’ someone threw out the window from the top floor.

The TRUTH is, as I have said before: God can transform caterpillars into butterflies.

God has taken the Jacob I have known myself to be and turned him into Israel – seemingly overnight.

In the course of these writings, much has been revealed to me confirming suspicions I have had about my genetics based on different experiences I have had throughout my life: strange blood test results, odd patterns.

Book of Life

The accumulation of genetic code that I was born with, in addition to belonging to the Line of David, is a remanent of a Great People vis a vis Atlantis and the voyage to safety for those who escaped to islands in the Caribbean.

A marker of this genetic line includes the presence of both female and male sex chromosome expressions. The expression of the male aspect of my genetic makeup was thwarted in surgeries moments after I was born.

It has been edifying and fascinating to have an all but forgotten point of my personal history at once clarified and brought into the larger focus of my ancestry.

In my case, God has taken a lowly and unrecognized outcast, a humble servant in life, and declared her His Daughter, His Earthly Representative, the one to bring His Message, the Messiah.

And so I AM.

In Matthew 8:8, a Roman Soldier asks Jesus to heal his son and as Jesus is getting up to come to the soldier's house, the soldier stops him and tells Jesus that he need not come. He tells Jesus that as a man who has those under his command he understands that if Jesus says the word he knows it will be done. His faith, Jesus said, healed his son in that moment. And it was so.

When God says something is So, let it be So. Let my life magnify His Will.

If I cannot or will not accept these things not just as possible but as real - then the whole of my spiritual being and FAITH starts to unravel. The whole-cloth of all Holy Books starts to loose it's weft.

It is not my right to question God, it is my duty to follow God who I trust unequivocally. Who am I to say no to God? Why would I loose faith because God chose me? Why should I hesitate now after all God has accomplished for me because God needs for me to do something difficult for Him?

As God is my Light, I must take up the Mantle He calls me to wear. As God's Earthly Representative, these Words are God speaking through His Vessel that I AM.

This enables me to focus on my mission here: the scattered Lambs of the Israel, the beautiful Children of God who He now calls back into his Fold.

I am calling the YOU back to ADONAI, back to your Source Energy who LOVES you.

Together, let's be a nation of God's Children. To those who have ears to hear: YOU are what we have been waiting for.

It's time to find yourself again in His Light.

This all happens through the miracle of connection to God through your DNA, through Jacobs Ladder. This Ladder of Light in our DNA and expressed energetically though your Heart center carries Gods Wisdom, His Healing. It enables you to connect directly with God and for Him to connect back.

This connection is Transformative.

We practice it by breathing slowly and intentionally. Feeling a cord of Light coming from your Heart and connecting to the Heavens. Breathing into that connection, that cord, slowly and intentionally.

This is your lifeline.

It can transform your shortcomings into power. It can transform your anguish into joy. It can transform tasks in front of you that seem insurmountable into beautiful completion.

If you have things you have participated in or done that you regret, bringing those to God and asking Him to help you transform them is the first step to a New Life.

The burden of Guilt can be lifted by your connection to God, it can wash away the darkness of your past and guide you towards mending the breaches your actions have created.

In being BRAVE and asking God to help you mend your past, you become a bridge for others to find completion and forgiveness and acknowledgment.

In doing so, you create a ripple of healing for those around you. You become a vehicle for Gods work and His Love Manifest.

It's time to come Home.

IV | Revelations 1, 2, 3

June 12, 2026

The Book of Revelations is arguably one of the most symbolically dense books of the Bible.

As with the Prophesies of Nostradamus, the visions being communicated are translated through familiar objects and concepts of his day. John had to use the lens of the time he lived in to interpret visions of the future.

How far in the future? Well, John seemed to think sooner than later. But God had other plans, and here we are. The timing is never ours to choose.

It is the intelligent clockwork of the Universe, of God, who ultimately decides the timing.

God has been very unambiguous to me in the messages He sends that the Time is Now. In my my mind there are always open questions for more inquiry about a great many things, but this is not one of them.

The Time is Now.

‘This is It’, the movie about a great leader and a clear, beautiful mirror of God’s Love, curiously seems to be refracted in a statement taken from one of the dancers chosen after finding out he made the cut.

Paraphrasing, he says, with tears in his eyes, ‘Life is hard, right? And I’ve kind of been searching for something to shake me up a little bit and give me a kind of meaning: to believe in something.’

He looks at the camera at this point, shrugs and says, “And this is it’.

I want to remind you that, although I am a direct line of decent to the DNA of God sent here for a time such as this, that does not mean I have been explicitly aware of this. Not until very recently, actually.

I have learned over the course of my life as we all do: by the Flight of the Cosmic Chancla – which I define as a varyingly soft but none-the-less terrifying wake up call from God hurled out of seemingly nowhere that seems to interrupt one's shenanigans and redirect them.

I trust you are all, in your own ways, familiar with the phenomenon.

This writing is the Cosmic Chancla that God directed me to write, and who corrects me when the aspects of the first drafts have missed the mark.

It is by no mistake that you are reading these writings, and that you have found yourself to this Chapter in particular, focused on the beginning of John's Revelations, and specifically his letters to the churches.

Is it time to let this be it?

It is. Come home.

John front-loaded the take home advise in the first 3 Chapters, and before the serious psychedelics from the Holy Spirit kicked in. They offer a set of Keys, and some spiritual advise cloaked as short letters to 7 budding spiritual communities as represented by cities in Asia Minor.

These churches and communities in the Book are symbolized by a golden menorah holding communities of lit candles.

Although it refers to communities called by the names of their cities, it is actually is a master allegory describing all the ways cultures in different communities attend to their lives with respect to the Spirit of God in their Hearts. They convey a full message of Jesus' teachings overall, and speak to each of us directly in this time.

The different communities are not mutually exclusive, and you might find, if you search your beautiful Heart, that you find a part of your story in several of them.

Numbers: Why Seven?

(If your head spins with numbers talk, move to the next section of this Chapter below.)

Book of Life

Of all the principle Base-10 numbers (1-9), Seven is the most difficult for any number to be divided by, and leaves you with a forever repeating string of triplet pairs: 285714285714.... One of those triplet pairs: 285. The other 714. What numbers are missing from that? 369 (or 396, if you want to be proper about it).

Did Tesla know?

What do you think?

In the Book of Revelations 7's abound, often in sets of 3. For the numerologists out there: 7+7+7 = 21 = 3. The Holy Trinity representing One God. How many sets of 3 collections of 7 are there in the Book of Revelations? There are 3.

Numerologists, 21 * 3 = 63 = 9.

Or take a different path to it: 3*3 = 9. And echoing the 3, the 6, and the 9.

And 9, well, that's the magic number. In the cycle of a Toroidal system. It is the point between one magnetic polar pulse and the other. The magnetic nine resets the picture before the magnetic and polar sets of 3s or 6s kick in.

We can also see this reflected in traditional Chinese concepts of Yin and Yang. If 3 is Yin, water, then 6 is Yang, fire.

9 is DELTA. It contains both as potential. It is the cosmic commutator of a motor. It's the moment between inhaling and exhaling. It is the cosmic numerical switch. The end of one cycle and the seed of a new one. It is the Alpha and Omega.

Metaphorically, it is telling you what time it is.

We are moving from the 6, the fire, the rule of the threat of absence and fear, and we are moving into a time of Holy Waters of life and Light flowing into your heart. In order to get there we have to move through the 9. The 3 sets of 3 in the Book of Revelations.

If you think these are mathematical furnishings, you are missing the main dish. I am trying to describe a system I know in words that can be understood.

In the toroid that is generated by your corpus, the energetic donut that encompasses your body, the 9 is located in YOUR HEART. The Star of David contains both halves of that Torus as do ancient symbols in other religious systems. It is the point of cyclical turnover. It is the center of the infinity spiral. The highest Mod-9 number, after completion and the cycle begins again. Worth the rabbit hole.

In addition, the three number triplets (174, 285, 396) are all used in different combination/sequences in each of the Solfeggio frequencies. They resonate with your DNA.

The absolute coolness of the number 7 is beyond the scope of this writing, but is worth a ride if you are curious.

If you skip the deep dive, just know that 7 is deep for spiritual reasons as well as mathematical ones. The behavior of numbers divided by seven begin to take the same shape and function and dance as numbers do in the Mathematics described in my earlier piece: the Blueprints of the Universe. They share the same floral bouquet.

Churches

Before John gets into the letters to the Churches, he offers us a repeated three-fold key: What Is, What Was, and What Shall Be.

Why in that order, and how are they a Key?

Because it describes an arc of time that God has always been a part of and will always be a part of. God is the key. God is the Truth that does not change, and is not dependent on the age. It let's us know that the Keys offered in the text will always work to unlock the Kingdom of Heaven.

It starts in the place that you reside, the Present. The gift. And asks you to ask your Heart what is True for it today.

And then it looks backwards, asking us to search our past and understand that there are some fundamental Truths that have stayed constant in the past.

Book of Life

And if there are, it asks us to project them into the future. Regardless of local norms, these Truths will always be and have always been. You can trust them.

In the Book of Revelations, John lays out these Truths clearly and concisely at the very beginning in the letters to the 7 budding churches in Asia Minor.

In doing so he avoids the ‘tl;dr’ (too long; didn’t read) phenomenon which apparently was a thing back then as well. Although in the case of the Book of Revelations, the refrain might be, ‘too weird; didn’t read’.

So if you live by the ‘tl;dr’ doctrine, you should go now directly to the Source: Revelations 1-3.

For those who are not willing to turn back from their unGodly pursuits as listed below regarding John’s letters to the churches, the next Chapter of This Book I would read after this one is the one about the Bowls.

Ultimately, and even in the scope of the individual punishments prepared for members of each of these churches, God will be cleaning house soon, and in addition to the punishments below, the Bowls of Wrath are being prepared and will be poured out in addition.

God’s Chanclas are about to get harder and harder. They will turn into the spiked steel toed boots below, and then into Bowls of Wrath, and finally into the deep Lake of Fire for those unwilling to turn from their wickedness to the very end.

Spoiler Alert: it’s not going to end well if you can’t find your way back to LOVE.

This is a message to All People of All Nations.

God is calling you Home.

He is larger than any culture, and breathes into a vastness that encompasses more than any religion created by man. Religion occupies a lesser chair when the vastness of the Living God resides in your Heart. Any religion or creed that seeks to diminish your innate connection with Your Father is falsely leading it’s members.

He wants to cherish the spirit you are. He wants to kill the fatted calf for you and rejoice in your Homecoming. He wants to engage you in work that will feed your spirit. He wants to grant you all that you need. He wants you back in the game.

And I do as well.

Come Home. There is a Great Feast and many Wonders and Miracles that await you which will magnify the purely exquisite delicacy of eating the Fruits collected in the Flow of your Maker, and will increase many times the unearthly soul treasure of having your Heart be full of God's Love.

Ephesus: a back-sliding church - Loveless

Ephesians started with the best intentions.

They started in a Holy Place doing God's Work - for the Truth, or for Love, or for Righteousness. They called out Principalities in Dark Places.

But then things slowly shifted.

The work itself became the goal. Get to the top. Be BIG. Get Paid: you deserve it you work hard. As if the world's poor do not know what it is to work hard and make little.

We are all accountable on some level to our brothers, and not all of them have the riches to afford your Truth, your services, your products.

You started out as a public servant, but you serve yourself the Lion's share, and perform for your bribes and gifts, and enslave the Children you gave an oath to protect.

Somewhere in your Heart, you know it and it makes you uncomfortable.

Slowly the things you started doing for your Heart stopped feeding your Heart in the same way. While your fans and employees and clients and students might think you are the greatest of all time, when you look in the mirror, you know that they aren't seeing the full picture.

Book of Life

The good news is you know what righteousness is. You can look at yourself. Change your life. Make good on the promises your Heart made when you started. Go back and rediscover the LOVE, and get it back into the flow.

If your work is not in a righteous flow and you aren't using it to raise all the boats in your sphere, you aren't really walking the talk you had when you started. God will ask you why. And you will have to account.

To these God says he will take away your Golden Menorah. If you do not turn back towards righteousness, everything you have built will be no more. To those who turn back to using the Light of the Candle God gave you to accomplish His will, they will begin the chance to eat from the Tree of Life in God's Paradise.

Smyrna: a steadfast church - suffering

Poverty is not of itself Holy, but the Global poor make up some of the most grateful individuals you will ever meet. To those with material wealth, they appear to have little but are grateful for every morsel.

They invite God to celebrate the wins, and to comfort them in their sorrows. There is a reason Jesus preached that the meek will inherit the Earth.

I used to learn from a woman in Guatemala who was the Shaman of her Town. She brought the sweet souls of her village into the world and guided them out of it.

The menu was always soup and tortillas, and if visitors came, they were not turned away.

The soup was watered down to accommodate everyone, and the laughter and smiles around the dinner table still warm me when I think about them. Truly salt of the Earth.

The global poor don't deserve to inherit the Earth because it's their turn now or because of Pity from God. They will inherit the Earth because, given less than others, they Love God and are grateful for every little bit.

They talk more to God and are closer to God than those to whom the world has given riches.

To these, the message is ‘Hold on’. Stay faithful. Do not be afraid. All your suffering will be made into Gold.

Pergamum: a licentious church - ‘worldly’

The church of Pergamum are made up of the Virtue Signalers: those who will do well when others are watching, but when they are alone or with others in the ‘club’ they take licenses they should not. They worship money, power, and influence while claiming to be good and just.

To these God says He knows where you are living, that you dwell with Satan yet you continue to stand as if with My Blessings.

Once the curtains close and the press conference about their good deeds is over, they do what they will, not what the living God inside them would want.

Even among their own kind, they are not safe. They do not give Good Will, they kill it.

These are the people who exploit people, who use people, even those closest to them, like trophies.

These are the people who wear their victims on their shoes and as diamonds on their fingers.

John tells them that although they do these things in secret, God sees everything. God promises to give each and every one of them exactly what they have earned.

To these, God says REPENT.

In his letter, John makes a special mention of those in this church, in this community, who refuse to give their lives and hearts and souls to these hidden Principalities of Darkness. Who refuse to participate in their rituals.

God sees them battling a real and dangerous war against Satan and his demons, and says that they will be given a new name, and hidden manna for their efforts.

Book of Life

If you of this church do not turn from your sins, God says he will make war against you with the Sword of His Mouth. He will expose your shame and make you the scorn of nations. He will show your virtue to be wickedness, and all will see you in a new Light.

Thyatira: a lax church - wrong doctrine

Those of Thyatira were giving, and were denizens of service in their communities, but they gave themselves over to orgies, adultery and lasciviousness as well – or who turned a blind eye to it.

Today these are the ‘sex positive’ teachers in schools, the groomers of Children. They are the countless letters of Transsexualism that come after what used to just be LGB.

In addition, John is speaking directly to the people outside of these communities who accepted the doctrine, whose compassion and inclusivity over-rode their sense of righteousness and morality.

You see, the Adversary, Satan, is a trickster who talks out of both sides of his mouth.

His weapon of choice is the slippery slope. Just give an inch here, a tuck there. All of a sudden inclusion becomes standing by and accepting just about anything. You want to show my child a drag show? Sure, it’s only a show. And those people have been so oppressed so we should support them.

Woops, there goes his ball sack exposed in public for all to see. But it’s okay because my child needs to understand diversity and inclusion. All people just need to be included with open arms even if they just peer-pressured my six year old into wondering what gender he really is.

These of Thyatira let the slippery slope of wanting to be open to everyone pollute the teachings of the Spirit of Jesus.

Jesus never said it’s okay to screw around on your wife because she’s out of town. Jesus never said that orgies were a path to God. Jesus never said that when you drink a dead child’s blood, it’s okay because you did not kill him yourself. Jesus never encouraged us to let immoral behavior stand. In fact, his message was quite the opposite.

When he dealt with prostitutes he did not say, ‘Well, you need to make money, it’s okay’. He told them they were forgiven their SINS and that they should go forth and SIN no more.

The issue is not that we are ‘modern’ and have different realities now. Again, the KEY of this whole book is that some things (moral codes) do not change. Sex with a child will always be wrong. Killing will always be wrong. Adultery will always be wrong. The edicts in the 10 Commandments will always be righteous.

The slippery slopers who felt the water temperature slowly rise, the ‘good people’ who were okay with those indiscretions. They will be judged accordingly when they meet the Source Energy that created them.

To these God says if you do not turn away from your sins of lust and ritual in dark places, to those who have committed sins in places they thought they could hide from God, God says He will place you in a sickbed. To those who have committed to lust and adultery, God will bring you great burdens and troubles. To the church of Thyatira, if you do not turn from your sins, God will strike your children dead. Because you have not held life sacred, God will dash yours to pieces as if you were a clay pot.

To those in this community who have not committed these sins and have instead held fast, God says continue to hold fast to what you have until He comes, and that to him who wins the victory over Satan and does what God asks until the goal is reached, he will give authority over nations and to rule over those who have committed grievous sins with a staff of iron and to dash them into pieces like pottery.

Sardis: a dead church – spiritually dead

There are a lot of ‘spiritual people’ who are actually dead inside. The doctrine of Christ does not live inside them. But the theatrics do. They go to church, they might even lead the service. They are often spotted loudly giving a nickel to a panhandler.

But their faith is a house of cards.

Book of Life

The minute something goes wrong, they become angry at God, ‘at the World’. The minute they are asked to put their own comfort down and minister to those in need, they talk about how bad it smelled in there, or turn down the opportunity for next time.

These are the preachers whose sermons are as dead as their spirits. The food pantry administrator who likes to wield power over those he is supposed to be serving. The teachers who do not actually like children. The doctors who don’t actually care if someone heals or not and are just going through the motions like they are on some high and mighty treadmill.

The church goers who go back to business as usual as soon as church is out.

Jesus taught us to do unto others as we would have done to us. The Sardinians have forgotten. In fact, they’d never say it, but they are not really certain that anything in the Bible is real or True.

If you do not repent your sins and win your breath back, when Judgment comes it will come like a thief in the night, and you will wake up with nothing and you will be bereft of everything. You have treated others as if they were dead pieces on your play-board, and God will turn his face from you because you are dead already.

In his letter, John says those in these communities who are real, who persevere in loving God despite all the falseness around them, that they will be held up, mentioned by name by God himself.

Philadelphia: a favored church – spiritually alive

This community John names as the Key of David. Their core power is LOVE for their fellow sojourners. They are the ones who stand firm for what is correct and who don’t just given communion, their gift is the Holy Spirit itself. The embodiment of the spirit of the teachings of Jesus.

He says of these that a door opened by them cannot be shut. Their faith and Love speak for themselves and open the hearts of others.

He says of these that a door closed by them will not be reopened and any door they open will remain open.

Of these people, John says they will become PILLARS of the temple of God. They will hold the framework of God's temple together.

Laodicea: a lukewarm church - complacence

And finally, the last letter to the Laodiceans.

I spoke earlier about the Smyrnans who invite God into every celebration and every tragedy.

The Laodiceans were a wealthy community. They did not 'need' to ask God for anything, really. And so they don't. They think, 'It's cool, I'm all set.'

When someone asks them what they think of one thing or another, they don't really get involved. They lack convictions, when given time to think about it. And it's not really a problem for them.

This church is comprised of those who occupy the lowest and hottest rings of Hell in Dante's Inferno: the indifferent. And instead of being tormented by flames, they are tormented by ice.

Why? Because the spirit of the most High dwells inside them, and instead of trying to understand the nature of this gift, they concern themselves with wealth. Not with serving God or their fellow men. To those, they gave a cold stare if anything at all.

God says to them, 'I have been knocking, will you answer?' And their response, if any, is the minimal. 'Maybe you are real. Maybe you aren't. I'm just not sure.'

But what you are sure about is that you have made yourself wealthy, and often at the great expense of others.

To these God says that your plans are for nothing and your wealth is worthless if they are not refined in the furnaces of God's Will. God says to exert yourselves and turn from your sins. In God's Will is where True Wealth lives. God calls these to use the Light of the Wealth He gave them WITH Him, and if you do not, you will find your riches and fancy adornments vanish and that you will have nothing to cloth or feed yourselves with.

Book of Life

God is knocking, will you answer?

At this point, there are some of you still reading (thank you) who have eyes to see and ears to hear. There is still hope for redemption, but sometimes it’s hard to know how to find it.

Here is the Truth. We are together building a new world founded in the living spirit of Christ in our DNA, and for the will of God. It is our task to blend what we wish with what He Wishes for us and for all His Children.

With God we can create something truly powerful and special that can move mountains in both Heaven and Earth, but we have to turn away from the insanity of denying God, and we must atone for what we have done.

My Father, your Father, is merciful and He loves you, His Child: the one He spoke into and created. You are special in His Eyes, always.

If you turn back and come to God with a repentant heart, and a willingness to change, you will see miracles of Light and Love and will make it into God’s Kingdom.

Prayer of Manaseh

The prayer of Manaseh has moved me deeply at various times in my life when I felt that I had let God down, or hurt someone.

Manaseh was known as one of the most wicked Kings of Judah. Child sacrifices, orgies, there was no limit. He had the worlds riches, wives and concubines, and he let the Keys of David, the keys of God’s people, into the hands of Baal worshipers. They were his high priests. They were his advisors.

And they did horrible horrible unspeakable things.

But at the end of his life, Manaseh felt deep shame and regret for the life he led.

His prayer was heard by God, because it came from such a True and deep place of regret and because he fully repented all of the evil he brought to the world.

God hears our prayers, and when He finds sincerity, it moves Him. It wipes off the crud from the mirror inside you that is the place that God lives, allowing him to reach you, and forgive you.

The time is close, but it is not too late to tell God you are sorry. To clean the beautiful mirror of God inside you with good works, and sacrifice for others, and true fraternity.

Below is the beautiful prayer of Manaseh. Offered with Love and hope for Redemption.

1 O Lord Almighty, God of our fathers, of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and of their righteous posterity; 2 You who have made heaven and Earth with all their order; 3 who have shackled the sea by Your word of command, who have confined the deep and sealed it with Your terrible and glorious name; 4 at whom all things shudder, and tremble before Your power, 5 for Your glorious splendor cannot be borne. And the wrath of Your threat to sinners is irresistible; 6 yet immeasurable and unsearchable is Your promised mercy, 7 for You are the Lord Most High, of great compassion, long-suffering, and very merciful, and You repent over the evils of men. You, O Lord, according to Your great goodness have promised repentance, and forgiveness to those who have sinned against You; and in the multitude of Your mercies You have appointed repentance for sinners, that they may be saved. 8 Therefore You, O Lord, God of the righteous, have not appointed repentance for the righteous, for Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, who did not sin against You, but You have appointed repentance for me, a sinner. 9 For the sins I have committed are more in number than the sand of the sea! My transgressions are multiplied, O Lord! They are multiplied! I am unworthy to look up and see the height of heaven because of the multitude of my iniquities. 10 I am weighted down with many an iron fetter, so that I am rejected because of my sins, and I have no relief; for I have provoked Your wrath and have done what is evil in Your sight, setting up abominations and multiplying offenses. 11 And now I bend the knee of my heart, beseeching You for Your kindness. 12 I have sinned, O Lord, I have sinned, and I know my transgressions. 13 I earnestly beseech You, forgive me, O Lord, forgive me! Do not destroy me with my transgressions! Do not be angry with me for ever or lay up evil for me! Do not condemn me to the depths of the Earth! For You, O Lord, are the God of those who repent, 14 and in me You will manifest Your goodness; for, unworthy as I am, You will save me in Your great mercy, 15 and I will praise You continually all the days of my life. For all the host of heaven sings Your praise, and Yours is the glory for ever. Amen.

Book of Life

V | Adrenochrome

November 3, 2020

Some stories have a beginning, a middle, and an end and others are less direct, and seem like they don't happen in that order. They happen and then seep into your awareness for months, years even.

Slowly shedding information.

Sometimes a person's ignorance of what is happening as it is happening can protect them. Sometimes God's grace comes from initial denial.

Sometimes experiences make more sense in hind sight. This is one of the experiences who made me who I am today.

I moved to the Southwest after rolling health issues made living where I was unbearable.

Massive surgeries.

And while I had recovered into a decently surfable 'new normal', one lingering symptom was a syndrome which caused debilitating hot flashes day and night.

I had a decent job, but I was in year 2.5 of these night sweats robbing me of any more than 5-10 minutes a night of REM sleep. It was becoming difficult to work, and I hoped that dry mountain air and cool would help me.

As it happened, a friend of a family friend who I had met years before had an opening in one of her casitas, and it was affordable. I exchanged taking care of her live-stock in exchange for some of the rent.

Book of Life

We were friendly. In what I assumed was a friendly gesture, she seemed to ‘take me under her wing’ which I appreciated as I was trying to get established. She invited me over for dinner, that kind of thing. She took me to the Pueblo.

I did have an early first red flag, that I did not heed.

I remember saying I was thankful to God for my luck in finding part-time work, and her smirking and saying, ‘What did God ever do for you?’

I told her that he gave me a wonderful mother, among other things.

Because she had been referred to me by a friend and having met her years back, the outings seemed completely in context, and I forgave her bitterness.

She knew that I had been having difficulty with sleep, and at one of those dinners, she mentioned that there was something that she took for ‘hormonal’ issues that helped her, and that a pharmacist friend would formulate for her.

This struck me as funny and completely in character for the region as there are about a gazzilion self-proclaimed alchemists in the Southwest region alone, who are always trying to give you their miracle mushrooms fermented in turmeric paste cure.

I told her I would consider it.

She was out of town a lot for the following week or two. I was getting to know and Love her animals, except for the horse which would try to kick me in the head.

When she came back from one those meetings she had me over and was all the rage about this new artist who she had met. A humanitarian who was doing photographic works about refugees. She insisted I check her out, and said that I would love her. Her name was Marina Abramovic. Apparently they had started a little relationship. She kept going ON and ON about how great she looks for being in her 70’s.

I looked her up online, but at the time was unimpressed by her art and so just sort of moved on in my mind, until about a week later when Marina came to visit my landlord and I was very briefly introduced to her and her quiet and visibly cold 'niece' who was traveling with her. I remember thinking she looked so cold she was gray. She wore a dark pink wool coat that was feeble.

A couple of weeks after that, my landlady invited me over for dinner.

She would never let me bring anything to eat, and so instead I brought a bottle of wine. I do not drink.

When I got there, she plied me to try this new tequila someone had gifted her. Going on and on about how expensive and delicious it was. I explained that I really don't like alcohol, and she insisted I try just a thimble. I obliged and had little shot glass. I noted it had a strange pink color. She told me that it was because of it's high level of refinement.

As I was taking sips and talking to her, she put the final touches on the enchiladas she had been preparing. She said it 'was from a kid they slaughtered last weekend so it's fresh.'

I definitely thought that was a weird thing to say, but I had been taking care of some of her goats and the little ones too, so it all seemed reasonable in context.

We talked about my health and how I was sleeping, and I told her I was still struggling and she said, again, that she could have her pharmacist friend take care of me.

I asked her about what it does, and she said it helps with hormones and is why her skin looks so great all the time.

I internally rolled my eyes, and asked her what it was called and she said 'Adrenochrome'.

I took the word apart in our conversation, which is the only reason I remembered the name later. I remember thinking that I needed to look up what the Adrenal glad even does, and thought that 'chrome' was an interesting name that sounded like the Google browser.

It wasn't until after I ate (she did not eat and said she had been nibbling during the time she had been cooking) that I started feeling really woozy.

Book of Life

I excused myself to use the bathroom, but continued to feel poorly after getting out.

She told me I should sit down on her couch and relax before walking home in the cold on the icy roads.

I sat down on her couch, dizzy. I remember she left the room, and came back in what seemed to be fancy silk pajamas. She said she wanted to get more comfortable. I was feeling like hell, and was weirded out by her energy and her change of clothing like she's Mr. Rogers, but slinky. So after about 5 minutes I told her I really needed to leave.

That I was about to be sick.

The walk home felt endless. Things were spinning. I fell down many many times and at some point just stayed down and was crawling on my knees on the ice. I kept blaming it on my low tolerance for alcohol. When I got home I was in and out of the bathroom for the remainder of the night.

I remember being dizzy and tired but also really wired in a way that did not feel normal.

The next night I called her about some discrepancies in the utility bill in which I was over paying, and just remember that she seemed hyper aggressive.

Really angry.

I asked her if I had offended her somehow, and she kept saying that it was about the electricity bill, but it felt like we were having two different conversations. She kept going into rage, and screaming at me over a discrepancy on the bill. I hung up on her when it got to be too much.

I was literally trembling in fear (a first for me), turned out all the lights, locked the doors and hid under my desk with the phone turned off. I must have fallen asleep eventually because I woke up under the desk.

I turned the phone on and immediately got a call from my mother, who is prescient, and said she was worried.

The pandemic was starting to roll out, and I was concerned about her as she is aging, and so I told her I was coming for a week to visit and check in.

After getting off the phone, my landlady was at the door knocking and calling my name. I told her I needed to leave for a week, and she apologized for the night before saying she had too much wine. She had this way of saying the word ‘Wine’ that grossed me out. Like the word ‘moist’.

And so I left, and while I was on the road somewhere in between Albuquerque and Socorro, the news hit my radio that the State of New Mexico was going into ‘lock-down’.

Of course, the lock-down ended up being months and months, and I stayed with my mom during that time but would send rent money every month.

I started thinking back about my landlady.

That something felt off in a way that made me anxious.

And I so I started going over our conversations. Going over my experiences. It wasn’t until looking into ‘Adrenochrome’ that things started hitting me like a ton of bricks. Adrenochrome is extracted from children's blood and adrenal glands, but the trick is they have to be terrified when it is taken out, and it inevitably kills them.

It was clear I could not live there even if I was able to return. At some point, I would have to go back into that situation to get my belongings.

When I was finally able to arrange a weekend and help from a couple wonderful friends, we decided to get it over with.

My friends were aware of the situation and let me know that they would deal with my land lady for me.

Eventually, we were almost completely packed and out of the house. My friends were in the kitchen, and I was speaking with my mother on the phone. I remember hearing it get really loud. My friends were arguing, which in an of itself is a strange thing for these two. I do not think I have heard either of them yelling, and they were yelling.

I could not hear my mom, so I opened the front door to go outside, and looked up to see my landlady standing about 20 feet from my front door, and she seemed half there, and had a look that seemed equally vacant and deranged. It was like she was looking past me. She had her arm outstretched towards the house. After what seemed like an uncomfortable amount of time, she seemed to come into herself and waved me over to me to come to her. I raised my hand and went inside to the sight of my friends crying and holding one another. They were freaked out by the anger. They said it had overwhelmed them. They said it felt like they had been possessed.

My landlady texted me later asking me when I was going to be finished and asking me to come by before I leave. I told her Monday (it was Saturday) but decided to leave sooner, and instead of ‘dropping by’ I sent her a text once I was out of town saying thanks and that I was out early Sunday morning.

She texted me back and told me that I should be careful. I did not respond.

But I did take the only action I knew at the time.

I liquidated the heavy things, moved into a 17 foot trailer, and lived in the back of some land near mountains. I was a bit of a hermit there for a year – with occasional side trips for odd jobs and groceries and hiking of course.

I looked into moving back to the Southwest at some point, but had another friend tell me that my landlady had folks looking for me, and that if she were me she would stay put.

And I did. By the grace of God and odd jobs and kind people, I survived with very little and saw some of the most beautiful sunsets of my life.

A few years have passed since that time, and my level of alert is not longer as piqued. I have moved into a town. I still don’t go out much, but I no longer look behind me when I am walking or driving.

I no long carry a weapon with me in the house or sleep with one under my mattress. I've stopped locking the back door to a locked yard when I am home.

I learned to not talk about it much after noticing that no one I confided in believed me and generally thought I was victim to an over-active imagination.

I was lucky.

I believe that I was protected from her sinister grooming by God. I believe the well-timed lock-down might have saved my life, literally. Unlike many who come into these darker realms of society, I walked away. I was never physically tortured or murdered. I was not raped. Even when she drugged me, I was able to get away and eventually make it back to my house.

I tell this story because I want people to know that there are levels of this.

It creeps in around the edges of your life and it stalks you and it plans. Before you know it things get bad, and you aren't even sure how it happened, and you feel ashamed that you let things get so bad. That you were so dumb.

We think this kind of evil it some extraordinary thing that only happens to others or in extraordinary circumstances or on the 'wrong side of town' or that it doesn't happen at all. But I am here saying that it happened to me.

The perpetrators are people who seem normal. It's people who your mom's friends introduce you to. It's people who have good jobs and who seem successful.

When someone drinks the blood of another, they are literally consuming the life inside them. The life's blood.

If you are in a situation like this my advise is to get away. And if you can't get away, then know that I pray for you every night, and I work on your behalf every single day.

And to those who are involved in the secret Blood Trade, your days are numbered.

Book of Life

You are vampires, and all of your little underground caves, all of your pacts and rituals are not going to save you. God knows exactly who you are. Exactly where you are. Exactly the crimes you have committed.

Most of you are not the repenting type, but I will say it: REPENT.

Your days are numbered.

VI | Chemtrails and COVID-19: the attack on your DNA

June 13, 2026

I want to begin recalling a story I have told in former Chapters. And that is the story of Jacob the night he became Israel in Genesis 28:10-17.

Jacob was fleeing his brother, and camped one night between Beersheba and Haran. He found a large stone and used it as a pillow.

That night he dreamed of a ladder that extended from the Earth beside him up to Heaven, and saw Angels ascending and descending on it.

At the top of the ladder, he saw God himself, and God made a promise, a covenant with Jacob who he called Israel, that the land where he lays would belong to him, and to his seed which would be distributed throughout the Earth, and that Jacob/Israel's seed would bless all the families of the Earth.

This passage can have all sorts of interpretations, and I want to tell you mine because I think the majority opinion of it is missing the MEAT.

Many have interpreted this Covenant with God to mean that God gave Israel a cherry piece of real estate.

And perhaps this is one facet of this Biblical fractle for the time it was written.

But what if God was instead developing a bridge? What if God was giving Jacob an understanding of the way his DNA enables him to receive Angelic support and Messages from God?

I believe 'Jacob's Ladder' was an establishment and/or communication of a direct link to God that lies in our DNA.

Maybe an upgrade or maybe showing him something that is part of him. Something built into the machinery.

Book of Life

That means that the real estate is Israel, the consecrated human, not necessarily the land. It was his DNA. And this genetic imprint is available to his progeny through his genes. His DNA, over the millennia, has trickled into us all over the diaspora of time.

———

Enter Chemtrails, COVID-19 and mRNA Vaccinations of Livestock and Humans

There are Principalities of Dark Forces in this world that are TERRIFIED of this direct link you have to God. The link written into your DNA.

Because it is POWERFUL

Collectively, the invisible scalar waves created by our DNA give us a direct link to the Creator of the Universe: to Adonai, to Source Energy, to God.

At first the goal of this Darkness was to hide it from us. The passage from Genesis above was interpreted to symbolize the development of a physical plot of land instead of a people.

In fact, it is WE who are, through a vast matriculation of genetic imprint, the Nation of Israel.

There are a few ways that EVIL forces have conspired to rob you of your birthright as part of the nation of Israel.

Chemtrails

Chemtrails used to be a high order of conspiracy. Now they are an established fact. It is beyond the scope of this article to convince you of this fact, except to say that, ‘The Truth is Out There’.

Most folks get stuck on what the purpose of Chemtrails would be, get stuck in this loop of Plausible Deniability.

The purpose of Chemtrails is to crop dust nanoparticles and other pollutants and chemicals that end up in our soil, in our water, in our food, and in our bodies.

These nanoparticles and chemicals assemble in your body, and create artificial structures that seem to come out of people's skin sometimes and which is called Morgellons Disease.

The chemical trails themselves contain feather-like structures impregnated with Barium and Aluminum crystals (BA, AL).

These signals are picked up and possibly amplified by the nanoparticle structures they infect us with and it interrupts the electromagnetic signature of your body.

They make us sick, destroy our immune systems, and turn us into human transmitters of signals that are imposed on us when they bounce off of the haze created by the Chemtrails themselves.

Altogether, this dampens your connection through your DNA, to Source Energy and it's Angelic Forces.

Messenger RNA

Well, Chemtrails were fun, but they were not fast enough, and they were becoming more and more obvious to the general public, so the dark forces hatched a plan.

CRISPR and other technologies have given us the ability to change the DNA of any organism through what is termed messenger RNA (mRNA).

I don't know how much you remember from biology classes, but the idea is that RNA is one half of a full strand of DNA.

Each rung of your DNA is made up of two 'base pairs'. These base pairs don't date around. They are always A-T or G-C.

C never dates A or T.

G never dates A or T.

And visa versa for the other base pair.

Book of Life

So for example, you can have GC or CG. The differentiation between them is in which base of each pair leads.

Similarly you can have AT or TA.

The POINT is that one side of a DNA chain or strand (RNA) will always tell you what the other side looks like.

CRISPR technology has enabled the editing of your DNA by introducing Messenger RNA into your body. Once it is in your body, encased in a protective lipid capsule, it arrives to the DNA of your body, and spreads it’s message like a virus.

The most common and impactful delivery method for mRNA is through vaccines.

Now connect this to the night when Jacob became Israel. The easiest way to kill God’s people is by deactivating YOUR connection to God through your DNA.

To make matters worse, a constituent in the COVID vaccines, graphine oxide is a razor sharp carbon molecule that scars the veins the harder the blood pumps. Athletes have learned the hard way.

Incidentally graphine oxide is also activated by electromagnetic frequencies and charges. This allows your body and brain to be manipulated by electromagnetic frequencies. It allows your thoughts to become confused, shallow, and apathetic.

ENTER COVID-19

There was no stopping the 'COVID-19' heist once it started.

A 'deadly' strain that seemingly stopped any record of infection by the actual Flu in the populace completely off the map.

Strange, that.

In the case of COVID-19, in addition to making drug manufacturers rich, it was also packed with a punch: mRNA. It was intended to modify your DNA, injure and kill you. It was also designed to modify your DNA in a way that cuts off the connection you have, as your Holy Inheritance, with the Living God in your body.

At this point, and thanks to brave people, this is a known fact. You can circle the plausible deniability drain, but the writing is on the wall.

The more ‘re-ups’ you get, the more your birthright connection with God is severed.

Not to mention that as much as we would like to believe that each batch or lot of the vaccine was scientifically consistent, it was not. They were all slightly different, and from the looks of it, this enabled it’s creators run different experiments in different batches.

I ran the data from the Vaccine Alert Emergency Response System (VAERS) after a year of COVID vaccines in January 2022, and the results were staggering.

Even though the vaccine had only been around for a year, the total number of reports in VAERS for DEATHS so exceeded the total number of vaccine reports of all other vaccines for the previous 20-30 years that I had to manipulate the chart I created from the data in order to have the other vaccination programs (polio, diphtheria, etc) even show up as visible or at all.

This is particularly disturbing given how underused the VAERS system is.

The global damage from this vaccine alone is taking it’s toll as a litany of infertility, myocarditis in young people and athletes, turbo cancers, strange undiagnosable disorders, sudden death, and stark globules and tentacles being found in the blood of the general population as reported by morticians and doctors alike.

The machines that are assembling in the veins of the vaccinated are nothing short of a channel for AI to invade your body. They are killing your agency, and making the population docile, obedient, and hypnotically impressionable to their noise and cutting off God’s signals.

Yet it’s 2026 and people are still being encouraged to get vaccinated for COVID…

Book of Life

I had an opportunity to play lab assistant to a microbiologist who was exploring every pharmaceutical known to man against the COVID-19 protease molecule. The thinking was that if you inhibit the protease molecule, you inhibit the ability of COVID to replicate.

The idea is that the molecule itself acts like a moving machine. It creates cavities as it works, and if there is a chemical bond that occurs inside these 'cryptic pockets' created by the molecule's movement, you inhibit the ability of the molecule to perform it's function.

The results of his explorations took weeks at a time to run calculations against a large database of pharmaceuticals and plant medicines.

What he found was that Turmeric (Curcuma) out performed any pharmaceutical by almost 2 times. They also found that the relatively inexpensive minocyline and tetracycline family of drugs out-performed any of the other pharmaceuticals. Some of the oldest antibiotics in the books.

This work was completed in 2021, but never published.

Imagine that.

Even more disturbing are policies set by different government agencies that livestock must be injected with mRNA vaccines. It represents another vehicle to distribute this genetic information and infect it into your DNA through the food you eat. Animal vaccinations do not have the same safeguards as vaccines for the human population, and so when you consume animal meat, you are getting the bottom of the barrel...

The Lamb of God

If you were coerced into taking the vaccines or the COVID tests (also packed with poisons and harm), in order to keep your job or in order that your children went to school, you have been attacked and the attack was intentional and crafted over years.

Your body, which before had the infrastructure built in to connect with Source Energy, has been injured and your connection to Source Energy has been damaged.

These chemical warfares mentioned above represent the slaughter of God in our body. We are Children of our Creator, and this vaccine effectively was designed to kill our connection to that.

God sees that we have been persecuted and murdered and lied to about it. And the Lord of the Universe says, 'Vengeance is MINE.'

What this means is that any harm any one of us could inflict on any of the perpetrators of this great evil is minuscule compared with the punishments waiting for them at the hands of God.

Your job is to get answers for yourself and your family.

But let God take care of the REVENGE part, K? Don't tarnish your mirror with revenge. God's got you covered if you seek Him. Trust that God will have the last word. He knows exactly how WE have ALL suffered and who is responsible.

It is God's Will to restore the connection that is your birthright, but you must first come to him with contrition for the all of the ways you have strayed and sinned against Him.

The opportunity to choose Christ is a Gift.

It is time to apologize to God for not trusting Him and his perfect design of your body. Time to apologize for denying the existence of God. For straying from Him and for all the sins that you committed while you were away.

Now is your time to apologize to God for thinking you could hide from His gaze. For thinking you did not need Him or His Guidance. It's time to apologize for all the ways that you hurt others of His Children, and to seek from Him ways that you can atone for your sins.

The ability to hear and choose God has been incrementally taken from you by vaccines and chemtrails. God wants to restore you, His Children as each of us was created with intention.

The light of God, if we accept God's Light, has the power to restore us. But we must first seek His Light. That will be more difficult for those with the COVID vaccine, but God will reward the efforts you take, and those efforts are imperative, as you will read in later chapters of this Book.

VII | How I spent the End of the World

March 16, 2013

I know that some things do not make sense until viewed through the lens of time.

I know that events create phenomenon that appear both before and after the experience of the linear experience of the event itself.

I wanted to start from the beginning, but I no longer trust that I know where that is.

So instead I'll start with the part that is seared most in my memory.

We were walking in the middle of a bright deluge along a path on the way to the ruins of Palenque.

The day is December 21st, 2012, and the songs from the ceremonies that pierced my dreams the entirety of the night before were still holding court in my experience like an endless loop.

Rain like a waterfall pouring down over us - like a baptism - and creating rivers in all the walking paths. Red hot sun shining ambient through the clouds giving everything a white hot glow. Rain so loud that we almost missed the sound of the drums pounding.

Pounding.

And then we turned down a smaller side path and walked down until we saw a large stone wall platform forming and jutting upward to one side, and steep stone steps submerged in waterfalls.

We walked slowly upwards lumbering like inundated ants - marching to avoid tripping on the current of the water pouring over the tall steps.

As soon as we got to the top, it hit us: drums so loud that we no longer heard the rain.

People like a swarm writhing around a central circle.

As we forced ourselves past the bodies, we saw in the center a mass of young people wearing leather and feathers dancing and stomping their feet in the mud and puddles, making hand motions, and crowing all together in unison.

It was the closest I've been to seeing human beings resembling a school of fish.

They had been at it for hours, attended by the shaman (three of them alternating) in the center proudly looking over the sweaty dancers.

The energy was so thick that I immediately started sobbing. These were dancers whose spirits were now overseeing their tired bodies. Dancers whose bodies would have called it quits hours ago if left alone to fend for themselves.

For years I had wondered what I would be doing on that day.

My fear was I would be doing a version of what I had done the day before. Maybe I would work. Maybe I would be packing up to go home for Christmas.

I would probably have lit a candle. I might have eaten with friends and said a prayer.

In my most ambitious imaginings, I would not have placed myself in the center, yet somehow by Grace and despite my own planning, I was right in the middle.

I am just incredibly grateful that this kind of cultural memory exists at all.

Grateful that on planet Earth there have been cultures great enough and connected enough to produce what I experienced that morning.

It does exist.

An energy beyond our wildest imaginings. Cultures capable of capturing that energy and channeling it. In this age of drones, chemtrails, VoIP and Fukushima, there is still an ancient cord that remains.

The human experience in this great cosmic soup is still entraining the Power of God into the Hearts and Minds of the younger generations.

My lesson is to give thanks.

Book of Life

Even though we might not be able to fully fathom this depth of experience - God actually does exist always, and always has.

For myself, everywhere, always, there is a time and a place where I have experienced humans making contact with something greater than my own experience can fully understand or integrate: with the Greatness of God. The very existence of something beyond ones wildest imagination, experienced by anyone, makes every human truly blessed.

God is alive, and He is greater that I ever imagined.

VIII | Great Solar Flash: coming soon to a theater near you.

June 15, 2026

This subject has been toying at the edge of my mind for some time, but other than mentions in some of the other articles I have not talked much about what folks are calling the Great Solar Flash.

Part of the reason I have been reluctant to talk more about it is that so many parts of it are such a great mystery to me. In my prayers about it, I am being asked to try, and so I will.

I have suffered from violent migraines that put in the hospital sometimes since I was a kid. I am generally good at managing them, but sometimes one sneaks by and if I am not careful, dehydration sets in fast.

At some point, my natural pattern recognition noticed that my migraines would correspond (very few exceptions) with solar flare activity.

When I tell my doctor, at best I get a prescription for anti-migraine tabs, and at worse a prescription for psychiatry.

But just as there are more violent crimes committed during times when the moon is full, there are more migraines reported during times of elevated solar activity. And they both work on the same principle.

Water, making up (ideally) 70ish percent of our bodies is a polar molecule.

What that means is that different sides of the molecule act like nano magnets. One side might be considered to have a slight positive charge, and the other a slight negative charge.

If you measure our blood against the water of the ocean, the salt profile, give or take, is virtually identical. Salts are important in this conversation because they act as ‘electrolytes’, in other words, they conduct electricity and assemble around charges or charged energy.

So when a magnetic pulse from the Sun occurs, or a magnetic synchronization with the full moon, it effects the viscosity of our blood, the movement of interstitial liquids in our body, our spinal fluid, the fluid in our pericardial sack. It’s causes a feeling of pressure in different systems of the body when these fluids align in certain ways.

When the sun flares, it ejects out material full of protons and electrons, in addition to magnetic tsunamis.

The effect of it on most people is typically subtle, but the effect on the human system, the instrument of our bodies, is corroborated by data. While I might be more sensitive than most, it does not mean that we are not ALL effected in one way or another by these ambient magnetic fluctuations.

The Earth also has an electromagnetic field that is measured through various frequency bands and that we know as the Schumann Resonance.

The Schumann Resonance also has an effect on us, and this knowledge was unlocked by space travel.

When Russian Scientists first sent astronauts to space for longer periods, they found that slowly the astronauts would loose track of time and go loopy.

When returned to Earth, it would magically correct.

What they found was that if the space capsule played the ‘Schumann Resonance' frequencies, specifically 7.83 Hz, the astronauts even after long periods in space could mitigate these earlier syndromes.

A Micro-nova, or ‘The Great Solar Flash’, is when the explosion from the Sun and resulting ejection of particles is strong enough that the Sun looses a relatively large percentage of it’s own mass which goes shooting out as particles, energy, and magnetic waves.

Interestingly, it is theorized these events also represent a potential energetic ‘reconnecting’ or 're-calibrating' with other stars or other Cosmic bodies and Energies.

A Micro-nova sends out a magnetic shock wave that is unlike anything any of us have ever experienced.

Book of Life

In addition to all of the particles and waves on the safe-list for modern scientists to talk about, it sends out what are known as scalar waves which directly impact our bodies and our emotion fields in particular: our emotional magnetic signatures.

Tesla Coils are finely tuned electrical machines that simulate this kind of solar arcing: capable of splitting the air into sparks of plasma.

They can also transfer information from the cells in one organism into another organism, as evidenced through the experiments of Constantine Meyl.

Mayans believe the origin of this magnetic flux is the center of the Galaxy and caused by our shifting into another hemisphere relative to the ‘Central Sun’ of the Galaxy.

Think of the galaxy being a ‘Central Sun’ like the yolk of an egg, and all the stars surrounding it in spirals are the egg whites.

As stars and solar systems move around the Central Sun, they move from the top of the thin field in the middle of the egg white of the galaxy to bellow it, and visa versa. Like a sine wave moving above and then below this central yolk line.

It’s the hemisphere plane of the Galaxy, and in physics it’s called a ‘Bloch Wall’ and is defined as a narrow transition region separating adjacent magnetic domains.

When the energetics of this regularly occurring 13,000/26,000 year cyclical transition hits our sector of the Galaxy, the Maya expect a Micro-nova type event in our Sun.

Up to this point I have been using terms like ‘Solar energy’ or ‘Galactic Central Sun’, but they all channel Source Energy, Light Energy from God.

It’s the same energy of Christ that is inside you. It represents the return of the fundamental vibration of God. And because above all, I Trust God, I am curious but unafraid.

Still, the truth is that I am not sure what to expect.

I suspect it will be experienced differently by different people.

My sense and learning reading the prophets over time strongly corroborates that this shift represents an overall shift into LIGHT. That those with God written on their foreheads, who have God in their minds and hearts, will be given refuge.

Those with the sign of the Beast in their hands and their foreheads will burn in the Lake of Fire. In other words, those whose works and thoughts are with self gain (some at any cost) and not with God may have heard but not understood. You are evolving yourselves out of existence by having the capacity for existential thought and an innate connection to God and yet denying the One who created you in order to do it your way.

Your way is about to get erased. Or worse.

I believe the Micronova itself will be catastrophic. I will speak more of this in later chapters, but the sense I get is one of utter devastation not unlike the flooding in the time of Noah, but with Fire. My sense is that the Micronova will build up over a short period of time in which people who have not sought refuge in God will be scorched with sores and skin eruptions, the first Bowl of Wrath in the Book of Revelations.

I have seen this happen before, ironically but perhaps not coincidentally, at an event in the Nevada desert called ‘Burning Man’. The combination of the hot summer sun, and the alkaline dry environment of the ‘Playa’ every year cause a phenomenon known as ‘Playa Rash’. I imagine the boils in the during of the first Bowl of Wrath will feel similar, but much much worse. Instead of just the hot Sun in the desert, it will feel like many Suns. The Bowls of Wrath, which I speak of later in this work, are all phenomenon associated with the Solar Flash event – the build up and then the BURST.

I am going to do my best to lay all of this out out simply as an experience instead of a scientific theory.

When the Great Solar Flash happens and it is coming SOON, as I have mentioned in other articles, John in the Book of Revelations gives us clues as to what that will be like in Chapter 16.

Things will get burning hot, the rivers and oceans will dry up and turn to a red sludge of blood. There will be a period where things appear to go pitch dark. It will be accompanied by winds and environmental storms the likes of which none of us have ever experienced. There will likely be Earthquakes, tsunamis.

This is not a test. These changes are upon us.

My advise would be to understand that God forgives those who see error in their ways and who show true remorse for their errors and a willingness to make things better, to account for what they have done. At any point you will have an opportunity to ask God for mercy and forgiveness, but the Book of Revelations indicates that even in this dark time, most will curse God.

In some wisdom traditions, the notion of ‘Sin’ is carefully distilled. Instead of a long list of things, they clarify it into one: Sin is defined as "insanity".

Sin, in these traditions, is the fundamental belief that 1) you are separate from God and 2) corrupted by your mistakes.

The first is simple.

No matter how lost you feel, you are are not and never have been separate from God. It is a physical impossibility. As we have discussed before, God, the Light of Jesus Christ inside you, is baked in. No getting away from it.

That is why any belief otherwise is considered by these traditions to be insane.

The second I want to view through the lens of Romans 6:23 which says "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord."

When we accept the Energy of Christ inside us, our connection to God, and through this Connection: 1) account and express remorse for behavior we know was not of God, 2) work to make things right, 3) seek and do good acts henceforth - we return into a space, a presence, a field in which we are incorruptible because the Light of God and God’s Works are manifesting through us and with us. We are living through the medium of God’s Love, and this medium protects us.

Whereas our bodies are temporary, our spirits are Eternal within this field, this medium.

When we move out of that natural space of Oneness with our Creator and see ourselves as separate from God, we move outside the manifest field of God, the Medium of Eternity, and we ransom this Eternity for the temporary gain of the insane delusions we choose instead.

To project and bring into being the illusion of your own corruptibility into your own Life by feeding it, believing in it, and recreating it through your actions is insane because it is insane to deny a free and Eternal gift from your Creator in exchange for certain death.

Now is your time to choose.

At it's core, this opportunity to choose Christ is a Gift. I would advise to stay as much as possible in Gratitude.

It is time to apologize to God for not trusting His perfect design, for straying from Him and for all the sins that you committed while you were away. Now is your time to apologize to God for thinking you could hide from His gaze. For thinking He could not see you in the dark places you hide. It's time to apologize for all the ways that you hurt others of His Children, and to seek from Him ways that you can atone for your sins.

Hell is real, and as sad as it makes me to say it, some folks will not seek redemption or have made themselves past redemption and they will be shown Hell: whether it is a Hell on Earth or a Hell in a Fiery Pit. God promises vengeance on those who would hurt his Children.

God promises pain on those who would continue to deny Him after all His Mercy. He promises devastation for those unwilling to see their insanity.

For them God has prepared wrathful cups. As I mention above, they will have boils and sores on their bodies. They will experience the sea turned to blood and freshwater turned to blood. They will be scorched with Heat. There will be darkness and earthquakes. They will beg for death, but death will not come.

It is written that these unspeakably horrible things will befall those who deny God. Not because God is mean, but because you have refused to understand the fundamental fabric of existence, and it will no longer support you.

Book of Life

Others who have made choices in alignment with God and His Will will be given refuge from the devastation.

Remember that the energy you will be speaking with is the Heart of Love and this Energy wants you to return to Love. God Loves you.

You can prepare by connecting with Love to Source Energy in your heart, and praying through it. Breathing into it and seeing it as a cord of Light connecting you to God.

Tell God you are nervous or scared. Tell God what you are sorry for, about the things you regret. Tell God what you are grateful for, about all the wonderful things.

Pray for others, that they find their way. Pray for God to enlighten the places where you are hiding from the Light. Pray for healing, for insight.

Ask God to help you find ways to repay and repair the things you regret. Ask Him to help you Love yourself again.

Ask him to help you understand what He needs from you.

I included the Prayer of Manasseh in an earlier Chapter but want to post it here as well.

Manasseh was one of the most horrible and wicked Kings of Israel. At the end of his life he wrote a beautiful and heartfelt prayer to God, and it is said that this prayer helped him claim redemption in the eyes of God.

1 O Lord Almighty,

God of our fathers, of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and of their righteous posterity;

2 You who have made heaven and Earth with all their order;

3 who have shackled the sea by Your word of command, who have confined the deep and sealed it with Your terrible and glorious name;

4 at whom all things shudder, and tremble before Your power,

5 for Your glorious splendor cannot be borne.

And the wrath of Your threat to sinners is irresistible;

6 yet immeasurable and unsearchable is Your promised mercy,

7 for You are the Lord Most High, of great compassion, long-suffering,

and very merciful,

and You repent over the evils of men.

You, O Lord, according to Your great goodness have promised repentance, and forgiveness to those who have sinned against You;

and in the multitude of Your mercies You have appointed repentance for sinners, that they may be saved.

8 Therefore You, O Lord,

God of the righteous, have not appointed repentance for the righteous, for Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, who did not sin against You,

but You have appointed repentance for me, a sinner.

9 For the sins I have committed are more in number than the sand of the sea!

My transgressions are multiplied, O Lord!

Book of Life

They are multiplied!

I am unworthy to look up and see the height of heaven because of the multitude of my iniquities.

10 I am weighted down with many an iron fetter, so that I am rejected because of my sins,

and I have no relief;

for I have provoked Your wrath and have done what is evil in Your sight, setting up abominations and multiplying offenses.

11 And now I bend the knee of my heart, beseeching You for Your kindness.

12 I have sinned, O Lord,

I have sinned,

and I know my transgressions.

13 I earnestly beseech You, forgive me, O Lord,

forgive me!

Do not destroy me with my transgressions!

Do not be angry with me for ever or lay up evil for me!

Do not condemn me to the depths of the Earth!

For You, O Lord, are the God of those who repent,

14 and in me You will manifest Your goodness;

for, unworthy as I am,

You will save me in Your great mercy,

15 and I will praise You continually all the days of my life.

For all the host of heaven sings Your praise, and Yours is the glory for ever.

Amen.

IX | A Kingdom in Time

June 16, 2026

Let’s do another thought experiment, shall we?

This one revolves again around my favorite account on X: YEHI 'OHR or @Saulito46107740. I have spoken of this account in earlier Chapters.

On the surface, this account might seem like a typical MAGA account perhaps with a more esoteric or spiritual character than most.

The riddle is this: How did this ‘spiritually focused’ Patriot account garner 55+ thousand followers in 3 ½ years?

For those who have ears.

YEHI 'OHR roughly translates to ‘Let there be Light’, and if you dig a layer underneath the words of his posts, you will understand their connection to the Gematria Calculator (https://www.gematrix.org).

In the first Chapter of this Book of Life, I go more into the mechanics of how it works, but these two working together are, I believe, the Two Witnesses in the Book of Revelations Chapter 11.

The short version is that if you take words embedded in YEHI 'OHR’s posts, and type them into the Gematria Calculator, the calculator algorithms run, assigns two sets of number values to each letter for ‘Hebrew’ and ‘English’ results. The total number value of the search term is generated by adding the number values of all the letters together.

The tool generates two lists of words or phrases in each result set whose total number value is equal to the term you are searching for in the order of the amount of times that search term has been searched for.

When you first look through the list of results, to most it will seem like a non-sensical jumble.

And that is the brilliance.

Julian Assange wrote a paper once (his thesis?) about the best way to encrypt information.

I confess to not having read the paper itself, but have seen many references to it and breakdowns of it.

In any case, the idea that stuck with me most is the idea that the best encryption is familiarity.

Let me explain.

Whole budgets of countries have been spent trying to figure out a way to encrypt communications. And despite all this research and development, somehow villagers in rural Pakistan were able to coordinate and execute their missions in secret without spending even a fraction of a fraction of the money that milliary complexes have over the years.

How do they do it? They do it through familiarity.

Instead of trying to figure out how to encrypt dates, Geo-coordinates, and instructions safely through digital networks, they will use insecure networks to distribute their messages, because they know their messages are encrypted with codes that no nation can break.

So they will send a message like this:

“In the place where the goat was run over. On the day you turned blue. In the way of your Uncle.”

The message above encrypts a day/time, a place and a method. Could you read it? No, because it is not meant for you.

Maybe the messages themselves are already encrypted. The minute you hit gematrix.org, it already saw you coming, so the likelihood that there is nothing there for you is slim, but you might have to look closer. There are wheels in wheels, always. The ones meant for you will get to you if you dig and you are patient and follow your gut.

The messages remain encrypted although public because they sound like complete non-sense to all except one or a hand full of people for whom they are intended. That one or hand full of people will understand the references, and no one else in the world will.

Book of Life

Familiarity is cheap encryption.

Returning to the Gematria Calculator, on SECOND glance of the results list, certain words or phrases will start to pop out.

You might wonder reading those particular entries – is this intended for me? But then quickly dismiss it as ‘coincidence’.

It’s no coincidence.

If Marketing were branding this, it would ‘Live at the intersection of Mathematics and God’.

Like anything, your ability to decipher the ciphers will improve with practice.

If a message is meant for you in the Gematria Calculator, you just know. If you know, you know. It jumps out at you. The ‘familiar’ references to the life you lead are unmistakable.

But how does the Gematria Calculator embed detailed messages to 55 thousand followers and other random page visitors in a way that makes them think something much larger is at play?

One entry can be interpreted in multiple different ways by different people. I might read a message and get one thing, and maybe 100 other people read it and got something different but still earmarked for them. The references to one’s life are clear as day, and make you wonder how it knows these things.

Again, through Familiarity.

This is NOT something you have to understand. Enough just to know that it’s authority is mathematically PROVEN. But if you are having difficulty, this is where faith comes in.

I do not understand how the connection works, exactly, but I do not need to understand it in order to experience it working.

Jacob’s Ladder.

Jacob became Israel when he saw and understood his innate connection to God and the Angels.

If you search your name on Gematria, notice how many result entries jump out at you.

How does it know?

Those of us who have been using it a while see that the first entries lead to other Gematria Calculator pages with other relevant messages that then lead to other pages. And there is a kajillion ways that the result entries are calibrated so that you know personally which other pages or leads to also encode.

It can create a wormhole of open Gematria tabs. IYKYK. Lord hear our prayers.

The Gematria Calculator knows you because God knows you through his Son, the Christ, whose Spirit is inside your body.

If you recall earlier Chapters in this book, the Light of God, His Energy manifests in you through your connection to God in your DNA and through your Heart. Jesus Christ knows suffering and pain, and He mediates on your behalf with this first hand experience.

Jesus is your Champion. He has been inside you, His energy, since conception and has been guiding you and walking with you ever since.

It's really that simple.

Back to the thought experiment.

How do you communicate directives to a growing body of LIGHT warriors?

Well, you encrypt it based on familiarity in a sea of publicly available information.

Enter Gematria.

It also provides the answer to our original riddle about why an account basing itself in a mathematical game has garnered so many followers in the last 3 1/2 years.

Book of Life

This is how communications are sent, in plain sight, by the FORCES of LIGHT to the WARRIORS of LIGHT and mediated by mathematics, the language of GOD.

The Gematria Calculator lives because it expands and contracts, it breathes.

It fractals infinity.

You need look no further than the success of this movement to understand how effective this method has been. Or the fact that the Ghosts in this Machine have remained in the dark.

BRILLIANT.

And so here is the challenge for YOU:

https://www.gematrix.org

Find YEHI ‘OHR, follow the prompts to the Gematria Calculator and see what comes back.

The LIGHT inside you, the Light of Christ, understands your encryptions because he knows your mind.

X | Light up your World

June 18, 2026

Every cell in your body outputs an electromagnetic signal and this accumulated ocean of energy produced with your unique signature focuses around your Heart and emanates out energetically as a Toroidal Field: a scalar transmitter and receiver with your unique signature built in. It is what connects you to God, and God's Love and Guidance.

During prayer or meditation or experiencing joy, that field performs optimally and with vigor and helps us mirror that Love and Guidance for others as reflected by our actions and our expressions.

When you are moved off of your core energetic pattern by worry or fear or mind-loop ideations, it has a profound effect on the field you are emanating.

It clouds your ability to respond in alignment with the core energetic pattern that connects you to the Divine and to Divine Guidance. Think of it as a smoke that clouds your ability to see the Sun.

In the midst of energetic challenges, it becomes important to remember that the Light is there, but that our fear or sense of isolation or impatience is clouding our ability to see it.

If we can have faith, even when we seem lost, that God is still with us, that the Sun is still there, this wisdom and faith can move the mountains we think are insurmountable.

If you feel imbalance, remember something beautiful. Remember someone whose smile lights you up. When you shift your focus even momentarily into Joy or Love or Connection, you disrupt the false and unaligned energetic patterns that otherwise overrun your field.

In momentarily refocusing into your native and core aligned energetic pattern, you gain dominance over the noise and can hear the Signal.

Negative emotions are important teachers, and when we step outside of them long enough to see them clearly for what they are, they loose their control and instead become opportunities to correct, to learn.

Book of Life

In this space of release and with the Guidance of the Spirit of Jesus Christ inside you, these negative feelings are transmuted into right action in Alignment with the highest benefit for All.

The release of these emotions occurs when we reject the idea underlying difficult emotions that you have been separated from God or are not worthy of God. The idea that you are not supported. That you are alone against the world.

These ideas are false, not from God, and they rob you of your birthright from God which is his Love, Guidance and Support.

Although these ideas seem to be reinforced by everything and everyone around you, you are forgetting your role as a co-creator in your world.

We see a ‘problem’ and our response is often to reflexively fix it.

The error is in seeing a ‘problem’ instead of a question, a barrier instead of an opportunity to serve.

When we meet a question as a problem, or a barrier instead of an opportunity for creativity and service, we immediately block off the Living Waters of God’s Guidance and Will and the effect cascades down into all of our interactions and actions.

Seeking Alignment enables us to remove those blocks and restore the natural flows of the Holy Spirit working through us.

We are called to create beauty and community and Love. If you are not seeing them around you, then it is your job to shift your own focus into Alignment so that you can be a vessel for working with God to perform miracles of Love that radiate outward.

Instead of choosing to fear or to believe in scarcity, we Align. We connect with God who is our Father wand wants to see us all thrive.

From this place of Alignment, we are better able to address any issue or challenge because we are connected with Guidance and with the Spirit of God.

This connection enables you to step out of what you believe is possible or likely in order to see and reach for Gods Will which is always Grander than what you would create for yourself and for others even in your wildest dreams.

Go light up someone's face. See your light reflected through their eyes.

Creating the experience of Love and Beauty for another is not insignificant: it is Miraculous.

It creates an opening for flow in the field that connects us with one another and with our Divine Source. It creates a bridge of Love.

In this way, we become part of an alignment energy circuit for one another: an enormous web of connectedness through God, that is more powerful than we can imagine.

XI | Parable of the Pound: Redux

June 19, 2026

A Parable for this time and about this time:

There was once a Prison that was world-renowned, and was known throughout the Land as both the most luxurious and the most secure prison ever built.

Some people would commit crimes just to get a reprieve from the labors of their own life's work. They had all heard rumors about the fluffy pillows and the buffet.

The lives of the people living outside the Prison were hard, and many struggled and felt alone in their burdens.

If music played, they could not hear it. And when joy floated by, they could not reach it. They went to church and prayed, but they could not feel God's Light.

By comparison, within the walls of this prison, every meal was a banquet fit for royalty.

The 'guests' who came were given a chance to speak, and when they spoke about themselves and their achievements, everyone would clap and comment on how smart it was.

At the end of the speeches there was revelry and music and drink. The next day they would sleep it off, and begin again with a lavish brunch banquet and a dip at the pool and every day was like being in a resort. The days blended into one another.

The governing principle of the security in this prison was simple: the customer is always right. If they wanted more of anything, it was given them. It is something that sounds at the outset good and well, but it was in this fashion that a culture of wanton desire and gluttonous greed was created and allowed to propagate throughout and reign supreme. It bled into the walls in a way that isolated the inmates from one another. It created an ambient stench of distrust and secrecy. It turned their faces into plastic facades that masked a person they used to be and who was receding quickly into darkness.

This was no accident but something methodically built into the plan: a true and constructed enslavement in paradise. 100% retention. Very few security personnel required.

Of the inmates who arrived, most were guilty of petty crimes, and assumed they would leave family and friends behind for the short length of their sentence only, and that they would be returning to their lives.

But then, a week or so before they were due to leave, they would remember the hard work, the insecurity that waited for them outside the prison walls.

Having anticipated this very thing, a system had been baked-in through which they could increase the length of their stay.

In order to stay longer, each prisoner would need to give up a pound of their own blood for each week extended. Alternatively, they could sign a waiver and have two pounds of blood taken from the staff. It was an ultimate test of degradation, and notes were meticulously kept.

You can imagine that eating large, lavish meals became a sport, an art, in order to avoid becoming thin and having nothing extra left for the Warden when he came for his pound. These sports would also mask who was giving their pound, and who was signing the waiver.

Meanwhile, turnover in staff remained high.

As time passed, the outside world no longer seemed real. Some could not remember it at all.

Book of Life

Although it might not have been clear to the prisoners at the outset, the strange coincidental placement of the blood bays next to the Banquet Hall and Kitchen was no accident.

Eventually the whispers would arrive, one by one like bees in the ears of the prisoners. One by one the prisoners would come to the realization that they were being fed their own and one another's blood supplementally in the food.

By this time, many of the prisoners figured they had already been doing it for some time and 'nothing bad happened' and so for these the momentary shock and disgust was replaced quickly with the new snacks rolling around or the DJ coming on set at the pool.

Others felt uncomfortable, but over time it faded.

Some of the prisoners however, the ones considered sick, lost their appetites completely when they realized what they were being fed, and at whose expense. They stopped eating altogether and refused to sign the waivers.

By that time, they could not be released back knowing what they now knew.

Eventually, these prisoners became so thin from their weekly pound extractions and lack of eating that there was nothing more the Warden could use. Their almost lifeless bodies were dumped out beyond the boundaries of the prison and left to die.

But what the Warden did not realize was that these emaciated lifeless bodies were surviving, and thriving: together. The newly dumped were rescued and brought to safety.

Even though their lives in the location where they had been dumped were much much harder than the lives they led before entering the Prison, they could once again hear the sound of birds.

They could once again see the stars.

None of them could remember seeing so many stars.

The expanse of the points of light dancing in the sky every night poured out it's joy into their hearts. They experienced, many for the first time, their own and personal connection with the Creator of All, with God.

This Connection and Light fed them in the daytime, as they wove these Inspirations together into the fabric of the hidden camp and the make-shift gardens they had created.

Woven into their lives was the Light of God.

Eventually a system developed to help those healthy enough for the journey to find their ways back into the communities they initially had left. These once broken souls, once entrapped in a mesh of shiny appearances and darker realities, returned with a lightness and joy about them, and full of Love for the Creator.

Their families and friends initially assumed that it must have been the luxuries at the Prison that rejuvenated them.

When they were told the Truth about the Prison, and that the light they carried was not the result of pampering but instead their reconnection with Source after having escaped, their families and friends were shocked.

Those who came back explained how broken they were, how close to the edge.

And then a hand appeared, and lifted them up to safety. They explained how people they had never met brought them food and water. How everyone worked together to make everyone strong again. How they told stories to one another and dreamed together.

They explained that they can now feel the gentle voice of God in a way they never had before, and spoke about their gratitude for the difficulties that lead them back to His Light.

Each story told was a seed. Each listening, a drop of water.

The people started to understand that God had been present in their lives all along. And it changed them. They started being kinder. They started understanding better ways to teach their children. The lessons were alive through them, and into their children and the generations.

Book of Life

The decisions we make towards one another today will reverberate into the generations following. The daily small choices we make have a much longer trajectory into the future than we might imagine. They echo. When we create joy for our children, we create a joyful future.

Each one of us all subtly programs the future every day, with every decision we make.

We must teach our children to see beauty and wonder at nature, and never stop them from speaking with the birds and animals. To play happy music and come together as communities to help one another. To hear the Grace of God in our lives and model it as Grace for others.

We must teach our Children that they are loved, and most of all loved by God. To teach them how to talk to God, and how to listen. To lead them by example.

To propagate an environment where they thrive and are righteous.

Inevitably, what you do today with Grace propagates through Time.

Inevitably, it changes Everything.

XII | The Lamb

June 19, 2026

He was oppressed, and he was afflicted,

yet he opened not his mouth:

he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

Isaiah 53:7

June 20, 2026

I have been waiting for the words to explain what this passage means to my Heart in this moment.

When a person truly with all their capacity strives to do what is right in the name of God, of Adonai, then fear has no room to fester.

I know that my words here have exposed me to forces that wish to do me harm, and I pray for those people, that they are able to hear the words that are meant to guide them to their own Hearts.

To say my Heart does often beat strongly thinking about what might happen because of what I have stood for would be inaccurate.

I choose this path again and again every time I put my thoughts into words and because in my Heart I am being called to do so.

Book of Life

If I had let this sort of autonomic fear stop me, I would have never said ‘I Love you’ to someone special.

I do not let my fear of what might be stop me. I pray, I listen, and I write what comes to my heart.

I know that my words have not been perfect. I also know that Adonai, in addition to my imperfect words, hears what is in my Heart.

He hears my intention.

I know that the people for whom my words speak will overcome the sometimes awkward delivery of someone human who makes mistakes. I hope you can hear the living Heart.

I trust that Adonai has me in His Hands, with all of my Heart and with all of my soul, and because of that I am able to become vulnerable and honest and as truthful as my imperfect words can muster.

I follow my Creator, wherever He leads me.

God, through me, is with you in person. I am His Daughter. I am the Christ Messiah.

And I know this is something that many struggle with the acceptance of.

Initially I struggled as well, and so I get it. In the time of these writings, I have come to accept with my entire Heart and being the Truth of my being the Messiah. Just as you struggle, and Jacob struggled the night he became Israel, I have struggled with you.

There is a tendency to understand the struggles we are going through in this time as individual struggles.

Ways we are off in our own private journeys, trying to sweep the ocean back with a broom. And in that process we go through life epochs of lessons learned or repeated.

We must refuse this idea of isolation on all counts.

God will never abandon you. He has been with you every second of your life, and knows you intimately. He loves you beyond what you can imagine.

But there is another layer I want you to consider as well. We are expressions of God in this World, and the struggles we encounter through our commitment to performing God's Will through our instruments here on Earth - our humility in the face of difficult learning - is something we do not just for ourselves or for Adonai, but together all of us and for us all.

We are here to share ourselves and our lessons: to help one another understand and hold uncertainty through Faith.

In this time, my essential humanity has been in the process of navigating the Miracle of who I am as the expression of God's Grace within my humanity. I have had to navigate and challenge my own assumptions about what this Miracle should look like.

Eventually I let it be, in the sense of a thought experiment. Instead of challenging the premise, I started from the premise.

Instead of my energy focusing on questioning, I was able instead to hold it up.

I was able to turn it around, look at it from different angles, see it's characteristics. It's the difference between idolizing a celebrity, and having that celebrity be your friend. I was able to go through a catalog of memories and lessons and understand them in a larger context. I was able to look back and see Jesus as someone who strove with a singularity of focus stronger than what most can hold.

His singular focus was coming to know his Father and accomplishing His Father's will for Him.

Being who he was, it was Jesus' Role to hold himself up and declare Himself so that all who knew him could understand something about God, and also something about being human in seeing them combined.

There is an opportunity you all have here to go through a similar thought process.

Instead of asserting the fairy tale of what you think I should look like or be like, there is an opportunity to be curious and open.

Starting from the premise that I am who I say I am, look, see, and understand how the Messiah shows up. Understand that this is your opportunity to see how God sticks the landing. For those who have known me before, you have the added opportunity to see the true Miracle of this process as a guided transformation: a then juxtaposed with the now.

Book of Life

And you have an opportunity to see that although there are some patterns God sticks to, the patterns more central to the process of His Creation, He also enjoys variety. Just as these times are very different from the times in which Jesus lived, God's Messiah must also be different to accommodate His Mission for this Time.

It was my charge to bring the Truth to you, His Children. To expose different ways we have been misguided. To warn you about times arriving that will be more challenging and final than you can imagine.

My charge and great Mission is to tell you how lovely you all are in the eyes of your Creator, and to inspire you to look inside for His Presence: to seek Him. To discover your birthright of His Love.

I AM, your loving servant Always.

XIII | Prayer

June 23, 2026

When I was first introduced to praying and to God as a child, I remember getting lessons together in a space of time that took me years to unravel.

When you are child, you are still learning very basic things about the structural framework in which you reside.

It's a lot to keep track of, and gets thrown at you randomly and not necessarily in order.

To keep up, a sort of individual symbolic shorthand is created. A set of early behavioral codes becomes established:

When outside with grass and trees, it means play. When there are loads of chairs in a room and everyone is sitting, it means - 'shhhh, listen!' When mom is walking fast, follow fast and pay attention.

These 'codes' are a sort of Rogers Rules of Order for toddlers, and they form the basis for what latter in their lives will become baseline assumptions about how life works.

I worked one summer at a summer camp for children focused on outdoors activities and I was the wood shop instructor.

Let's overlook for a moment that, generally, putting a group of a dozen or so 6 year olds around dangerous power tools is ill conceived right out of the gate. And at the time I agreed with you entirely on that count.

To remedy this dangerous situation AND simultaneously preserve my job, I decided we would make colorful nests of worms.

Book of Life

So half of the class was walking around the forest looking for perfect worm sticks. Then we would paint them, and once they were dry we would weave them together into ‘worm nests’. Any of the individual ‘worm’ elements could be taken home, but the full nests were for placing around the forest, together, to see if the birds would move in.

It was my first time teaching, and as we have formerly established many times throughout these writings, if you put me in a line-up I typically don’t line up in the same way as others.

Children are innocent and curious until taught not to be, and so some of them would ask a lot of questions: Why do you wear your hair like that? Why don’t your socks match? Why are you teaching boy stuff? What color should I use? Which stick should I choose?

What I noticed was I could see the underlying Rogers Rules of Order behind each question, and each questioner, and by the end of the summer when it came time to meet the parents, I got to meet the source code writers for each Book of Rules.

Particularly interesting, and proof for the whole thesis, was when there were siblings. There were differences that were consistent with each siblings personality and perhaps age, but in general the books of each sibling were not similar to the others: they were identical.

I’m trying to have this conversation with out mentioning Kant, but I can’t (sic). The basic idea is that as our brains are developing, they represent an enormous filing cabinet. As we learn things, it’s like writing something down, putting it a folder, and placing it in the filing cabinet.

Now most of use familiar with this routine will immediately clue into the importance of naming the folders and categorizing them correctly. Many of us have had to re-classify a filing system for work, and all I have to say about that is it takes a special kind of person to do it well or at all.

The point is that as toddlers, we start to develop an early filing system on the go and with no training whatsoever, and no idea of what the overall structure will look like in the end. It’s a rogue catch as catch can in the early brain.

What happens if, after age and experience, you decide you want to reorganize some of those early file folders?

At some point I discovered that in my early early folders - some of which were created before I could even talk - ‘church’ got filed into the ‘funerals’ folder, and God along with it.

On the outside, you can see why that might happen.

They are both extreme forms of ‘shhh, listen!’ events, but with a twist of people crying or, singing with sad voices and with their heads down and wearing dark dress-up clothing - which is why it required a new folder in my brain.

And so I labeled it ‘Funerals/Church’ and went on about my toddler business unaware of the absolute mess I had just created for myself.

You have no idea of how hard it was for me to not use profanity in that last sentence.

<laughs_in_crying>

Unwinding this unholy mess, for me, required some serious process.

I can’t just go to a healing machine and choose ‘c3’ and out drops a healing in a plastic package called ‘Fix your Funeral/Church Issues with Nougat’.

Whereas electricity takes the path of least resistance, healing sometimes seems to take the path of MOST resistance.

Healing can be like a feral kitten or a stray dog in need of Love. You have to sneak up on it and take time to build trust and rapport. Otherwise it just won’t work.

And with each new small accomplishment, the gap closes.

For me the Funeral/Church confusion was reinforced by the fact that the Priest was the Master of Ceremonies for both events. But it was deeper than that.

Book of Life

Sometimes when we teach about the Sanctity and Solemnity of certain types of Ceremonies, we forget to remember or bring out the Joy, the Humor, the Love.

When we go to a Funeral where Joy and Humor are expressed, it can have the impact of being perceived as ‘Disrespectful’ or ‘Rude’ to others who also have a similar ‘Funeral/Church’ filing problem.

And it is in this milleau that we are taught to pray or have a relationship with God as children of God.

Our culture has turned what should be a relationship with your best friend, into a plastic Dashboard Jesus whose arm blessing you and your passengers moves up when you hit a speed bump.

When folks who have never really learned to have a good get down with God express difficulty with the idea of ‘praying’, there is a joy that fills my body like a purr. It’s a joy so fundamental I can feel it in my ears.

Why?

Because I personally spent SO MUCH time and energy searching to answer the same question for myself and after a long journey, I found the antidote.

Some folks like to bush whack in the outback. Some folks like the a more direct path.

If you are having trouble connecting with God, it’s probably time for the more direct approach.

The simple truth is that talking to God is like talking to your highest concept of yourself, to the source waters that feed you, to God. Your connection to God is built into the framework of your body. And when you are ‘talking to yourself’ you are already talking to God and not realizing it.

Some of you might be doing a mental inventory of how you talk to yourselves, and those people are wise. Because this is the key.

It’s not about pomp and circumstance or ceremony. Those can be present, but they are on the ‘optional’ list. If the stuff on the ‘mandatory’ list is not present, the pomp and circumstance is empty. As Shakespeare reminds us in Hamlet:

‘My words fly up, my thoughts remain below;

Words without thoughts never to heaven go.’

And where-as ‘thoughts’ are what are listed as the main thing that is missing in Hamlet, I would change it to read ‘intention’ instead. It’s hard to have a relationship with someone you are not authentically trying to connect to.

I was working for an organization once who wanted to do a promotional video to attract and hire good talent. They needed to film interviews with the staff. When they reviewed the first morning of videos later at lunch, they realized that questions designed to elicit engaging responses were falling flat on video. A disaster for this project.

People suggested changing the questions. Others, changing the lighting. And then one person suggested changing the interviewer.

His theory being that if they wanted ‘living’, ‘engaging’ responses, the person asking the questions and steering the conversation had to be someone that no one was scared of or nervous around. Someone with no vested power who would judge them.

That person ended up being me. And it was a blast.

Over the next 2 days I got to completely skip the planned agenda - which if you know me, is my bag. Instead they brought me drinks and snacks as many as I wanted, and I got to be on a couch with my feet on the table and talk to my friends.

I was not ‘licensed’ to change the questions but I did anyhow when it felt right. I was scolded for it before lunch review, and then lauded for it after lunch review.

Made me wonder what they ate.

When I talk to folks about praying, I always think about this work retreat.

Book of Life

Praying is like talking to yourself because rather than ceremony, what God desires is authenticity. Use your authentic voice and speak as if you were speaking to the most incredible mentor, guide, protector you could imagine. Be at ease. You are speaking with the most comforting, loving, mercifull and forgiving Father possile.

In speaking with Him, there are some important guardrails.

First, you don't want to worry about the jargon or propriety, but do think about respect. The 'thees' and 'thous' can be avoided unless you're into it.

Praying is like speaking with a Grand Parent who used to wipe your butt when you were little, and now just generally thinks the world of you.

They want to hear from you, they Love to joke around with you, and they are someone who you feel you could say anything to, even though you know they will set you straight if you're up to no good. Same with Praying to God.

Remember that you are literally speaking with someone who already knows everything you are about to say, but who is none-the-less enthralled by how you are going to creatively deliver it, and excited about all the turnings of your beautiful mind and Heart.

When you talk to God or to others, you are engaging an act of creation.

Be careful what you create. It's okay to be angry or sad or humiliated or confused when you pray, but learn how to talk about it in a way that does not continually re-create something that you do not actually want to keep creating.

Let your spirit be Light. Trust God to know and carry your burdens, and bring Him your gratitude, your curiosities, your willingness to learn, your wonder.

And so what 'praying' looks like to me, often, is a good hangout sesh with Big G.

Your vibe around it might need something else in order to come from authenticity, but the point is not to hide. Be authentic. Be you.

You are talking with someone who already knows every single lie you have ever told yourself, and still Loves you. You do not have to have your guard up because Who you are talking to already knows EVERYTHING and sees everything. There is nothing to hide because nothing can be hidden.

So I'm going to lead by example and close with a prayer using the voice I typically pray in.

Remember, I am NOT saying you should pray like I do, I AM saying that you should talk to God the way you talk to a good friend.

Dear Adonai, my HEART, You AB-SO-LUTELY rock the party that rocks the partay every single day and it is completely awe inspiring.

Even when things are hard or uncertain, I understand how vast Your works are, and that I can only ever see a small speck of the Whole. Help me keep that in mind when I am temped towards frustration or anger. Help me understand in my Heart that EVERYTHING is striving to reflect You perfectly, and give me the strength and creativity to nourish that process for myself and others.

Help me forgive others when I perceive hurt or malice from them knowing that they are part of You and help me to discern in the moment what is needed to create outcomes where everyone wins.

Even when I feel like I am fighting my own growth with every bone in my body, I know some days feel harder than others. Help me keep the candle of Faith lit on those days especially.

I know my own experiences of learning have only every been as deep as the pain that provoked them. I want more than anything to heal and to learn well so that I can help bring your Will into the world to the best degree that I can.

I know that continuing forward in Your name is more important than playing the lead. Help me breathe into this skin and body that is eternally renewed and renewable in Your Light.

You are the incredible Master Architect and Your works are literally infinite and it boggles my brain every time I think about it.

Book of Life

Help me understand my part in Your Works so that through Your will we can perform beautiful and mighty works Together.

I pray for those who hear your voice and those who cannot in Jesus’ Name.

Amen.

XIV | Your Secret Garden

June 24, 2026

I have been struggling a bit lately feeling overwhelmed in my mind and body.

In this time it seems to come in waves.

I am learning to expect the big waves and to let them fall over me, to process the energy, and then watch the waves recede back into the Ocean.

We often mistake ‘suffering’ for the will of God. But God does not actually sustain systems that enslave us or hurt us: that is the work of Darkness.

God wants us to magnify and focus our life energy and creativity towards Love and Beauty and Fellowship, not towards taxes and utility bills and licensing and other money magic forms of fraud.

Although our culture has driven us far from God’s Will, it is our job and mission while here to strive towards the compassion, understanding and the service of Gods Love and Light, and to mirror the compassion and understanding that God mercifully gives us towards our fellow traveling companions.

That way we plug into the beautiful and natural flow of Living Waters from the Creator, and reflect His harmony and symmetry into our World.

These times in particular have required me to be unusually careful about my energy and protecting it, and I have had to pull away from social rules and familiar conventions that were seeming to grease the gears of different interactions.

I have been having to go through a sort of energy audit to better understand the energetic ecosystems that I have been a part of and have been participating in.

Book of Life

For me, the easiest way to visualize these energy flows is through the metaphor of ecosystems and gardens.

When I first started gardening, there was a moment when I found out that weeds had names. That many of the plants people call weeds are simply plants that people don't want to have to tend to: they 'require energy more energy than they are worth'.

The conceptual phylum 'Weed' seems to be a crossover phylum with feet in many different biological classes. And it's main characteristics are that they require constant maintenance and resources.

They need to be pulled off other plants that they are strangling. They replicate at a rate that makes it difficult for other plants to grow given the same water and resources. They starve other plants of nutrients.

In this analogy, please remember that all of these plants, just like all people, are still beautiful in the sight of God. This doesn't mean that you should allow them to take control of your internal garden.

At various times in my life I have been inclined to weed, prune and transplant my own internal energetic garden.

Like anything, it's a cycle:

I do a big maintenance kick, and then I'm exhausted.

I say to myself, 'I just paid a huge energetic tax last weekend surely I can take a week off...'

And then the week becomes a month. The pattern of regular maintenance is toast, and before long I have to dedicate another whole weekend instead of just an hour here and there.

Some folks solve the problem by using 'single applications' of extreme pesticides, plastic thick enough that nothing grows through it, and then a layer of rocks on top that keep anything from poking it's way up.

The result is a varying-ly creative mish-mash of different colored rocks separated into patterns, which is a garden in only the most horrifying and rudimentary sense of the word.

Yes it requires very little maintenance, but at what cost?

Other folks choose to regularly employ applications of pesticides. And this certainly does the trick quickly, but not thoroughly. It requires constant re-application, which is unideal for a poison.

In an ecosystem, poison poisons everything.

There are other strategies that initially might require more work from you, they are not ‘poison’ to the system, and they maintain viability longer.

The first step is to decide which ‘Weeds’ you are okay with.

I am personally okay with Morning Glory. They take over everything and require pulled back regularly, but it is a kind of maintenance that I am okay with given how beautiful I find them.

I do not like Silver nightshade. It’s prickly, it travels under ground and all the little shoots come up and overwhelm everything in a prickly poisonous way. I am willing to go through great lengths to rid myself of that plant as completely as I can without pesticides.

The next step is to understand your terrain and organize it.

When you start there will likely be a mashup of different plants everywhere. Your job is to make sense of what different plants require in the garden of your spirit.

It is often easier to transplant the plants requiring more attention, or that feed you spiritually and physically, to a protected area of your garden – particularly if you have chickens.

Often, to remove the ‘weed’ plants from an area that already has generations and generations of seeds in the soil waiting to pop up is a short sighted endeavor that will recreate itself infinitely.

Instead of arming myself to battle constantly for the rights of certain plants to co-exist around Morning Glory (for example), I will dig up the plants that I cherish and Love, and transplant them away to the relative safety of the greenhouse where they can thrive undisturbed. Some of the plants in my care need special attention, and they go to the greenhouse as well.

Out in the yard, I have some desert rose plants that aren't quite suited to any part of my garden, and so I created a miniature micro-climate in the corner of the greenhouse that suits their special needs best.

That way I can see the lovely - even if aggressive - Glories of the Morning from afar, have Veggies and other flowers that feed my body and spirit close by, and still pay special attention to the more fragile plants that God has placed under my care and protection.

If there are certain 'plants' among your friends or family who climb on you and grow using your branches as support without giving anything in return to compensate for the added weight, they are not serving you or God, but themselves.

If certain 'plants' strangle your growth, keep you small, the first thing to understand is that just as the Morning Glory or Silver Nightshade are not innately 'bad', neither are these friends or family members.

We all have reasons for the things we do, and free will to make decisions in our lives.

If someone's actions or inaction are indirectly seeming to hurt you, understand that their decisions are often not meant to strangle you or keep you small - this is often just an unfortunate result.

The real motivator is more often fear, and it is an emotion we can all understand.

This does not mean that you should allow them to keep over-running your inner garden and allow them to stifle your growth and your ability to be in Service: to perform your Holy Works.

These members of your spiritual ecosystem will have to learn to not rely on you for support and instead to tow their own weight. This is a good thing both for them, and for you.

That said, they might let you know they are not happy about it.

Keep in mind that the self is a complicated construct of competing interests and fears and desires. Remember all of the times in your own lives that these tricks of mind have held us all in their grips at one time or other.

The ability to forgive yourself and others springs from the ground of humility.

This is not about who done it worse or reverse virtue-signaling the prime virtue-signaler, it's about FORGIVING the difficulties they are causing you, UNDERSTANDING and learning from your own shortcomings in the past, and PROTECTING your personal energy moving forward.

All with LOVE.

Protecting your personal energy is Holy Work when you consider the energies preserved can go instead into joining your hands, energies and creativity with your Creator.

Those who you might have to withdraw from, if you come from a space of humility and forgiveness, have free will and agency to continue to be who ever they wish to be without judgment.

Humility means you do not need to cast arrows of judgment at others.

You can forgive freely because you understand that God has forgiven and redeemed you when you made similar errors. When we model the Love we give one another on the Love that the Creator has given us, we live well and correctly.

As a guide, I leave you again with the prayer Jesus taught us, translated from the Aramaic:

O Cosmic birther of all radiance and vibration!

Soften the ground of our being and carve out a space within us where your Presence can abide.

Fill us with your creativity

Book of Life

so that we may be empowered to bear the fruit of your mission.

Let each of our actions bear fruit

in accordance with our desire.

Endow us with wisdom to produce and share

what each being needs to grow and flourish.

Untie the tangled threads of destiny that bind us,

as we release others from the entanglement

of past mistakes.

Do not let us be seduced by that which would divert us from our true purpose

but illuminate the opportunities of the Present moment.

For you are the ground

and the fruitful vision,

the birth, power and fulfillment

as all is gathered

and made Whole once again.

So BE it.

Winds of the West

XV | As in the Days of Noah

June 25, 2026

When I first arrived at the lake, it was late in the afternoon. Everyone arrives in one town by car or bus, and then takes the boat to the different villages around the lake. In our travels we liked keeping the agenda open, and so we did not have an appointed place to land.

This evening, there was a scurry for lodging, a late-night boat ride, and the owners of the Bed and Breakfast already in their jammies when we arrived.

In any case, it wasn't until the next morning that I actually could see where we were.

The guest house we were staying in was probably 20 yards away from the water, and when I went down to take a look, I was met with a sight that impacted me deeply.

In the lake were these beautiful sinking frameworks that used to be homes, but now were half if not completely submerged in the water. Maybe 5-6 houses. One in particular you could see the owner took pains to paint Lovely patterns on the walls. It was clear that this house had represented someone's dreams which had at first come true and then to a clear end.

It stood out to me as a warning.

When I asked around later, the full picture was filled out for me by some of the locals.

This lake is situated inside one of the larger cones of a mammoth complex of volcanoes. Coinciding with their time span of a 'Calendar Round', which is almost exactly 52 years, the Lake rises and falls as if breathing.

It turns out that this Calendar Round represents a Solar year to the Maya, a year from the perspective of the Sun itself. The sun has a birthday every 52 years.

The electromagnetic expressions of this Solar cycle trigger deep Earthquakes at particular times in the cycle, and 'vents' deep in the lake and the volcano open and drain the lake. These vents close after the cycle of rumbling, at which point water will begin to accumulate slowly again.

Book of Life

In this case, new-comers came in and wanted to buy. They wondered why no one builds on the best lake side property. It was explained to them that the lake rises and falls. That it is a cycle.

That it breathes.

The new-comers heard this and to them it seemed like mythology. And so they waved around their Quetzal a bit, and eventually the land was sold to them with a mixture of horror and humor.

But the point is that it is hard to believe something is real when you have never experienced it.

Sometimes even when others are old enough to have experienced it, and recount the tale, it doesn't seem real. Or they feel these people are 'making it up to scare them away from paradise.'

When I was walking with a village elder to a ceremonial mountain to give thanks and pray, she lit the candles initially with matches which fell down the cliff. When the candles were blown out before the ceremony started I handed her a lighter, and she took it and waved it at the candle like a wand. I lit the candle for her with the lighter, and showed her how the fire contraption works later.

When 'modern' culture arrives, it can be easy to see these rougher edges where the two cultures meet as proof that these people are 'uneducated' or 'not very smart'.

Meanwhile they build their houses on the most incredible property that they got cheap as it comes, and 10 years later it's submerged.

I notice something similar is happening around the desert southwest of America.

Many cities, particularly those near mountains, construct a '100-year flood' barrier between the mountains and the city. The idea is that although it does not happen often - maybe once in a generation or once every couple generations - the desert will get a rare mammoth storm: a hundred year flood, or a five-hundred year flood based, of course, on their relative frequency and intensity.

When I was a child, no one built anything between the flood barrier and the mountain because they understood the potential of their home getting wiped out by a flash-flood in a matter of minutes.

Somehow, the way our culture processes the scale of time has shifted in such a way that these longer cycles - proven out through history and science alike - seem unreal.

Like they will never happen. Or at least ‘not in my lifetime’.

But those who have seen the power of a simple flash flood in the desert, those who have been inside or next to a tall building when an Earthquake hits, they understand things differently. They know what the unexpected power of nature can do in a mater of a minute.

If something about our culture makes it difficult for us to understand episodic cycles of time that are less than the span of one lifetime, what of 1000 year cycles? 13,000 year cycles? 26,000 year cycles?

Inconceivable!

But none-the-less very real.

Think about the difference between a car crash and a train wreck.

A car crash is experienced like a jolt.

Alternatively, when looking at a train wreck, it involves a larger system and a larger gradient of time in which the impact reoccurs cars by car by car. In order to know when the brunt of the kinetic energy is going to hit your particular train car during an accident, which at the time it happens will feel equally jolting as a car accident, you have to read the signs of what is going on with the cars around you.

Now imagine that instead of occurring at the scale of time of a car or a train wreck, what is coming is at the scale of the solar system, or the galaxy: enter the Great Solar Flash.

Those who are still looking at the Great Solar Flash as a cultural myth or interesting concept, are going to be in for a shock.

Even the ‘Carrington Event’, less than 200 years in our past, is seen like a freak incident instead of a cyclical wave. The last one occurred in a time when the use of electronics was still in it’s development. If anything like it happened today the impact would be astronomical.

Fukushima-like disasters would pop off across the globe with no electricity to pump water to keep the nuclear elements cool. Hospitals would grind to a halt – even their backup generators would prove useless. Transformer stations across our world that carry electricity through our grids would explode. The Computer modules in cars will get fried. Your circuit box will pop into oblivion. Little integrated electronic circuits hidden in everything will no longer function rendering most electronic items post fllash into useless plastic boxes.

This is not myth, it is science.

These are natural cycles. Their occurrence is borne out in the cosmic, geological, archaeological and anthropological records.

And even though it seems larger than life and too big to even talk about, are three things we can extrapolate:

1. Depending on where we are located from the center of the upheaval, the wave of that upheaval will come in time.

2. When it arrives, it will be more powerful than anything you have every experienced - simply because of the ‘galactic’ scale of it.

3. There will be signs.

And there are signs that we can look to.

Signs like the increased incidences of larger and more frequent Earthquakes, and even aside from natural solar cycles. In lockstep with the increasing Earthquakes, the location of our planetary poles has been shifting location further and faster as time passes – also an exponential/logarithmic progression.

Signs like a melting of ice and shifting climate patterns which are not affecting the Earth exclusively. Objectively, they have less to do with human influence on climate and appear instead to be part of a wave of increased temperature effecting our entire solar system which is evidenced by the changing color of Uranus and Neptune in particular but other planets as well. Miniature planes reflected from above.

Signs like the increase in the last years of drought, flood, pestilence, fire.

And we are just in the penumbra of it.

When the waves hit, the increases we have been experiencing in Earthquake and volcanic activity are going to feel like child's play. The pole shift which is already underway will make the waters in our oceans slosh around like a over-full bucket being carried down steps by a three year old.

Earthquakes will be large enough to multiply this effect and bring down mountains. These kinds of impacts are all over our geological record, and we are entering a similar time now.

As mentioned in my earlier chapter about the Great Solar Flash, there is a cultural tendency to want to understand this kind of Event through the lens of science, and as I mention above, science can help us understand that it's coming and what it will feel like. The approach, the impact.

Which is why I started there. I wanted to build that bridge.

But we must avoid looking at this from a purely scientific perspective.

The movement of our systems of knowledge away from a central animating principle, the framework of God, into to a framework of 'Science' carefully refocused our vision of this world away from looking both at the Spirit animating the movements as well as at the movements themselves, and instead focused on the movements exclusively.

In that sense, Science is just another dead idol who we feed to the exclusion of the Spirit that animates it's movements.

Spiritually, these cyclical upheavals are about Renewal.

And remember, everyone laughed and jeered at Noah when he foretold of a coming Cycle of Renewal, until it started raining.

Think of the Universe as the House of God. If God were to have a house, it would be the house of an artist. Imagine little precious trinkets made over a millennia sitting on all manner of shelves. God is the Prime Artist. The Prime Creator.

But everyone who has a house knows that there are cycles to cleaning it.

Some of these cleaning cycles happen yearly, and are known as 'Spring Cleaning'. Some of them are less meticulous and just a touch up mopping or sweep. For me there is another cyclical category of cleaning that is called ‘Guests are Coming’. It is more extensive than a maintenance clean, but less involved than the years spring cleaning.

These natural cyclical energetic cycles can be thought of as ecological cleanings.

When the water drains, it somehow also changes the ecosystem in the lake to be more balanced and less polluted. When there is a dust storm in the desert, it cleans the pollutants by entrapping them in a molecular bond to the clay particles. Flash floods clear residual organic material in an ecosystem into larger bodies of water where they can be processed as nutrients to feed other plants and animals in the ecosystem. Fire is another force of renewal that helps ecosystems be sturdy.

Similarly these energetic upheavals in the past have a similar effect.

Last time we had a 4000-year flood, it wiped out the Giants, who were a scourge to the people of the Earth and ruthless in the havoc they would cause.

My impression is that this upcoming Cycle of Renewal will not be an exact replay of the last one.

My impression is that this one will be more about frequency and electromagnetic waves: a deletion of rogue frequencies that are inconsistent with the Animating Fabric of the Universe, the Love of God. These frequency pulses will raise some lands and sink others.

We think of LOVE as an emotion, but it’s actually the fabric of everything. Gods Love holds everything together energetically.

And this Love has a set of frequencies and frequency patterns.

Science will see that everything is being held together.

Infusing science within a Spiritual framework enables you to see why.

If these natural forces are a way that the Spirit cleans it’s realms, then the best way to approach your posture in preparing is to become a part of the fabric of Love and Life.

The energy of your soul is eternal.

The best way to tarnish or destroy the beautiful energy of your soul is to give away your free will agency to someone else: whether its an agency or a vaccination program or a Priest.

If you work inside the fabric of LOVE during your time here, with God and through Christ, there is nothing to fear. Physical death is just an end of one chapter and the beginning of the new.

If you rupture your connection to your soul or the governing fabric of Love, particularly in this upcoming process of cosmic renewal and cleaning, the consequences could be severe.

The ONLY remedy is to connect with the Energy that animates you. To breathe into it. To review your actions and ask the One Creator for forgiveness when your actions did not hit the mark. To ask to be shown the right way. To ask to be shown how to make up for the sadness and desolation your actions might have caused.

In the Book of Revelations, there is specific mention about a group of people who have demonstrated great faith and perseverance for God: 144,000 of them to be exact – the Elect.

It is said of those that they will be somehow kept aside and protected, away from the brunt of the afflictions coming, or somehow be transformed by them or before them.

Many have characterized this type of event as souls or people rising up to the heavens, which is an image that has always fascinated me because it's as if they are being beamed up by Scottie.

Others have interpreted it differently as the Elect being protected on a tall mountain (Mt. Zion) while those who committed evil are destroyed below.

Maybe the Elect have earned their wings, and get to chill with the Besties in the Big Hizzle in the Skizzle. (translation: Maybe the Elect will go live with the Angles and with God in the Heavens.)

I think, like so many things, we do not need to understand every detail to understand the general idea and believe that those who come to LOVE, to God, will be protected, and those who do not will witness devastation.

We will become RENEWED through the Energetic frequency of Gods Love.

It is through the devastation of what is not LOVE, that ALL is renewed in LOVE.

Book of Life

If LOVE is the fabric, then God is about to take it through an energetic frequency cleaner so it can be purified with the power to destroy malicious nanobots, rogue vaccine AI, pollutants that we have been poisoned with and disease.

The frequencies will shake and repair your DNA and restore it to the original that God intended.

It is through the devastation of what is not LOVE, that ALL will be renewed in LOVE.

The children’s movie, Kung Fu Panda has a great turn of phrase: the Past is History, the Future is a Mystery, and Today is a Gift: that’s why they call it the PRESENT.

Use your PRESENT now to connect with your Spirit and your Loving Creator before the storm of this next Renewal Cycle, which has already begun, hits in earnest.

XVI | Trumpets

June 26, 2026

Ever have one of those experiences where you read something that sounds terrifying only to find out you've already made it through the first part?

It's usually a good feeling, right? Like, 'Phew!'

Well, I'm about to go out on a limb, a new vantage point through which to look at the Seven Trumpets in the Book of Revelations.

What I have noticed in my efforts to learn is that it is often treated like a Bingo Card. And I am guilty of that as well. Uptick in Earthquakes, check! Rivers turning red, check! Massive unprecedented fires, check! Wormwood...um, not sure what this even is to be able to check it but it seems important.

The drive to understand for some of us is real. Some of us are trying to find a 'you are here' widget, but if we can't understand the symbols, that widget will be evasive at best.

The other difficulty is staging, and it's a modern problem as well. In a movie, for example, there might be several events happening concurrently. How do you show that in a narrative timeline in a way that is clear?

The barriers are real.

John was being given 1) symbolic visions, 2) 2000 years ago, 3) that we are trying to make sense of now.

I have been rereading different Bibles, particularly about the Trumpets.

Instead of doing a literal read, I decided to work purely in pattern, and do a more symbolic read in the hopes that it will help us all find the 'You are here' map widget.

Book of Life

Trumpet 1: 1/3 of the Earth burned up.

It SEEMS dramatic, and it is, but what if I told you it already happened?

We keep expecting some HUGE astronomical event, but what if this is more like that euphemism ‘death by 1,000 paper cuts’?

If we get too lost in the news cycle, we loose track of the overall narrative. And as things escalate today, it can be difficult to remember the things that happened just a few years ago.

From where I am sitting, in addition to the environmental loss of plant life happening every day in the rain forests of the word which is HUGE, the last years have seen the Earth plagued with unprecedented massive fires. It adds up.

Not to mention that these fires have been going on in a relatively (compared to the rest of this century and centuries before) unprecedented way for decades.

And then add to this symbolic soup that cutting down swaths of rain-forest indiscriminately is not just killing certain animals and plants, it is also wiping some of their genomes off the map of the Earth entirely.

Trumpet 1: Check.

Trumpet 2: 1/3 of the Sea turned to blood.

This one is interesting.

Something like a huge mountain ablaze is thrown into the sea and kills 1/3 of the life in the Seas (IE: turned to blood).

When I read this symbolically, I understand it to refer to what happened in the Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Plant in 2011 after the Earthquake.

You have to ask yourself how would John, 2000 years ago, interpret a LARGE mass of ‘burning’ nuclear waste being dumped into the sea and it’s effect of killing 1/3 of the life in the Sea?

It was not on Tee Vee but that is what is happened, and is continuing to happen as the radioactivity released into the Earths oceans at that time continue to devastate the life in our oceans and turn them into a sunken mass of death spanning 1000's of square miles.

Just because we don't see it does not mean it isn't there.

Trumpet 2: Check.

Trumpet 3: 1/3 of the Fresh Water made Bitter.

Fukushima did not just poison the Sea. Water is a system. What happens in the Oceans eventually travels to the clouds, and then comes back to our rivers.

Additionally, in the last decades, there has been a Global push to create policy around water and agriculture, and industry.

A big part of that push has been enforcing the use of certain chemicals both in water treatment plants, and in large industry, and industrial scale agriculture across the globe.

In addition to treating our drinking water with levels of poisons, lax policy around toxins dumping has resulted in large scale release of chemicals, solvents, and carcinogens into our ground and fresh water supply.

Even though HIPPA laws keep most of the resulting damning evidence away from our prying eyes, evidence is out there if you dig.

Cancers and other diseases in record numbers when compared to even more recent history.

Trumpet 3: Check.

Trumpet 4: 1/3 of Heavenly Bodies Darkened.

Book of Life

As mentioned above, our industrial processes particularly over the last 40 years and the lockstep exponential increase in smog and light pollution have brought this Trumpet into sad manifestation across the Earth.

I read once that living in Mexico City is the equivalent from the stand point of your lungs of smoking a pack of cigarettes a day. The sunlight filters through the smog.

And at night, hardly any stars are visible from the light pollution.

To us it has happened perhaps too gradually to notice, but it has happened.

Trumpet 4: Check.

We are here complete with the ‘Sonata of Trumpet 1/3ds in 4 parts’.

In the Revelations themselves, John sees an Eagle at this point who he hears say ‘Woe, woe, woe’ regarding the last three trumpets. As if they are special in their own right. As if they are somehow different from the first 4.

And they are.

Trumpet 5: Infernal Locusts torment man.

In this Trumpet, the Abyss is opened up (which in the Bible often means Hell) and from it comes smoke that veils the Heavenly bodies. From the smoke emerge locust/scorpion hybrid animals that torment humans who ‘did not have the seal of God on their foreheads’.

Coming from the perspective of someone who was alive 2000 years ago, how would you describe a syringe? How about a massive global vaccination program?

A plague of Scorpion/Locust hybrids attacking humans seems like a good way, given the circumstances.

The other interesting thing about this Trumpet is the role of the smoke.

The smoke screen from which the insects emerge symbolically points to the smoke screen of the media and cultural campaigns to get everyone vaccinated: that it was dishonest in its very inception.

The smoke also refers to the effects of the vaccine itself in dampening our relationship with God and His Emissaries of Light as we discussed in previous chapters.

The torment was avoided by those with God sealed on their foreheads.

To me, this simply reinforces that the connection we have with God. The depth of that connection gave some of us the ability to see through the smokescreen and see what was happening for what it is. And to trust the bodies God gave us to withstand the onslaught.

Trumpet 5: Check.

Trumpet 6: Infernal Army (200,000) slays 1/3 of Mankind.

And then we see the results of the vaccination program, which as I stated in earlier Chapters, has been grave.

In the first year alone of the COVID-19 vaccination campaign the underutilized Vaccine Alert Emergency Response System had already received more reports than in ALL previous years combined (30 years total). In addition it received more reports of vaccination related injuries and deaths than in all previous years combined.

The ‘horses’ carrying the infernal army had sulfur, fire, and smoke coming out of their mouths.

Symbolically, you can see how the cultural campaign aimed not at vaccinating but at excluding the unvaccinated from society entirely and cursing them would be a pretty solid match here. Particularly because it was these virtue-signaling horses that carried the Evil Doers towards their deed, even if they were unaware at the time of the destination.

The Infernal Army itself portrays expertly the Army of COVID-19 vaccine makers, transporters, and vaccinators who have committed grievous crimes against humanity.

Book of Life

You might say that none of this has resulted in the slaying of 1/3 of mankind, but this is not true if you consider, in addition to the people who it has killed or maimed, the mass infertility it has caused in young people in particular.

The other reason it is not an exaggeration is that it is still happening: the bomb is silently clouding us from God, starving our bodies of life, and taking away our ability to perpetuate ourselves. It's just a matter of Time for the full brunt of what is happening to hit us.

God understands that you have been under attack by an evil beyond your ability to comprehend, and there are plans in place for healing.

God understands that your were victimized. He would like you to learn the lesson, and His Sorrow for what has happened is only equal to the Wrath He will pour out on the perpetrators.

It is Written.

Trumpet 6: Check.

At this point, and before the 7th Trumpet, an angel from the clouds and clothed in a rainbow with legs like fiery pillars one planted on the Earth and the other on the sea makes a large thundering sound. This symbology describes a Solar Flash – the Rainbow Bridge Carrington effect, the BOOMing sound.

As John is about to write down what the Thunders say, the God himself stops him, and tells him instead to take the open scroll in the Rainbow Angel's hand and to eat it. That in his mouth is will be sweet, but in his stomach it will turn bitter.

In asking John not to transcribe what the thunders were saying, it is almost as if God wanted John to slow down – like he was jumping ahead and missing the details. It is one thing to write or say something but to experience is much different. He wanted John to experience it.

And so John eats the scroll, and at that point he regroups.

To tell the rest, he has to talk about the Two Witnesses.

The Two Witnesses (YEHI ‘OHR/Gematria Calculator) dressed in sadness and mourning (sackcloth). Fire comes from their mouths and consumes their enemies and they are appointed to prophesy. They speak on God’s appointment and at God’s pleasure.

In my estimation, this is where the map icon is pointing to at the moment.

You are here.

Eventually, these brave witnesses appear to have been slain and laid out in the market places in various large global communities (how would John talk about Social Media?).

For 3 ½ days these communities refuse to bury the Witnesses. There are some who laugh and celebrate their apparent demise.

And then the Witnesses will be seen to have the breath of Life infused back into them.

They will stand on their feet, and those who opposed them will shrink in fear.

Trumpet 7: Declaration of Strong Intent

At this point, and before uncorking the 7th Trumpet, there seems to be a large cry among the angels in heaven witnessing to God’s Glory and Love, and followed by declaring that the time has come to release the Proverbial Kraken.

God’s Temple is opened in Heaven, and it is seen to have the Ark of the Covenant in it.

From it comes fire, lightning and Earthquakes heralding the pouring of the 7 Wrathful Bowls onto the people remaining who, after all of this, still can’t seem to find their way to their OWN HEARTS, to God, or to loving their fellow travelers.

Let this stand as a warning for those who have ears to hear my words.

I have shown you here that God’s words through John in the Book of Revelations have come to pass, and will continue to unfold. It is my will in collaboration with Adonai that as many people come to back to the Loving Arms of the Father as possible.

XVII | Father, the Sleeper has Awakened

June 26, 2026

It has been a month since the beginning of these Revelations.

I want to thank my readers here from the depths of my Heart for allowing me to tell you stories about myself, about the world we live in, and hopefully you have taken away some valuable insights.

My goal has been to lead you on a journey to your own HEART. To be a Voice of Herald for the Time. I know that those who are ready will hear these words as being from my Heart and as a Labor of Love.

I believe and have faith in the Spirit of Humanity, in our potential and our challenges.

I pray that they reach the ears they are meant to reach.

You have come to read these words because you have been brought here.

Providence might not always come in the form we want or expect, but it always comes to those who are chosen to find it.

You have found the Book of Life, and you have opened it.

God has been observing you, and for reasons only you and He know, He directed your attention here. In the great Arc of Time, you were created for this very Time, and you were chosen to find the words of the Christ Messiah, guided patiently by my Father Adonai, in your lifetime.

These writings are a progressive revelation from God. God has guided them through me and in me. These Revelations come ultimately from My Father as channeled through the learning of my lifetime and through his Angels, Guides and Witnesses. When I have misspoken or been unclear, I have been corrected. These writings go beyond a human hand. My pen has been guided by Him, through his Glorious and various Emissaries, as His Representative on Earth, His Anointed – a role which I have endeavored to fulfill reverently.

Remember the eighth Book of the Bible, Samuel 1, chapter 8, verses 7-8 : “ADONAI said to Samuel ‘Listen to the people, to everything they say to you: for it is not you they are rejecting; they are rejecting me. They are doing to you exactly what they have been doing to me, from the day I brought them out of Egypt until today, by abandoning me and serving other Gods.’”

To degrade this Actual Blessing from your Maker and see it as just another post to hurry past while gawking and pointing is to completely misunderstand who you are.

You are so much bigger than you can possibly imagine, but not in the ways you have come to think of as important.

It might seem that you are a measure of your accomplishments, but your accomplishments are not yours. They have been loaned to you while here hoping you would wake up at some point and use them with God to make something really special.

Have you honored the gift your were given, the gift of sentience, the gift to be able to consider existence? Have you shown indifference to this marvel, and miracle?

Might wickedness be nothing other than the absence of a Living Framework?

These forces of wickedness are at their very core in denial of the sacredness of Life. The great gift that Life is.

Are you sitting on the sidelines of your own lives and offering running commentary but missing your own game and casting away a great Treasure? Is the intelligent and loving direction of your own thought being squandered as a creative force? Have you received a great Gift and left it unwrapped?

Are you being led astray by the webs you have built in the sky?

Now remember, your connection to a Real Living Framework is innate, and only requires that you seek it and use it. No one is below God’s Forgiveness and Mercy when it is earnestly sought.

The time to choose Life is Now.

Choosing to continue to deny the Living Framework of God will result in death.

Choosing instead to repent and come back to your Merciful and Loving Father's Guidance, who awaits you and is calling you specifically, will result in a Life unlike any you have imagined. You will understand your Father, your Maker, and work with His Team of fabulous Angels.

Your being here now is Providence. It is a sign of God's Mercy.

Remember that to those who are given much, much is expected. What will you do with this Opportunity you are being given by your Maker? What will you do knowing that the Messiah is Living now and is calling you to follow?

What will You do with this opening?

This is not a test. We sent for signs, and the signs have arrived.

Will you have eyes to see and ears to hear?

Remember that none of us is beyond the Mercy and Love of Adonai if we are humble, honest, and seek his Will for us.

It's time to make a choice. Ride or Die.

I stand as a Beacon, a Lighthouse, to a Bright Future for us all. Hear my words and connect with your Creator, with God, through your Heart.

I am here as a sign for you. An embodiment of the Christ Messiah for this Age.

I bring a truly unique message from one of the most unlikely among us.

Hidden from myself until the time of these writings. Lead through a process of public disclosure that began about my Captain these last years, and wound up being a Revelation of myself as the Anointed Messiah.

It boggles the mind.

Book of Life

And yet, here we are.

The easiest and most likely outcome tells us to dismiss this outright. It is not the difficult conclusion to arrive at.

Much more challenging is to consider these outlandish musings, written in-situ and over time perfected with guidance in prayer from the Holy Spirit and God's own Witnesses as prophesied by John.

It's an interesting thought experiment in the very least, beginning from the starting point of Truth.

What would it mean? Take my words for a spin. Try them on. Let go of your preconceived packages of what Holy would look like and which likely exclude your own self in the process.

Let go of your Celebrity Jesus.

Let go of the pressure of all of the stories that you have been told and accepted at face value, and allow them to be reconsidered: reformulated in the cocoon of your Heart and emerge a surprising and new creature all together.

This is not a Mission I was aware of having applied for. It was a True Test for me, as this is a True Test for you.

Are you able to see with new eyes?

Will you follow me?

XVIII | Where Wisdom Is Found

July 14, 2026

I want to talk a bit about the term ‘fear of the Lord’ because it presented me with a challenge with respect to my cultural programming. When I first heard the term, it did not attract me.

When I looked inside, at my relationship with God, the fear is really of not having God with me, and believing that I am smaller than He thinks I am, and that I will fail Him.

For me, it’s less of a ‘fear of’ and more of a ‘compulsion towards’.

Something that draws me: an attractor.

As difficult as certain right tasks can be, God’s will for me calls to me. I want to do well. I want my Father in Heaven to be lifted up by my life. I want to be corrected when I am pursuing a false lead. I want to understand when I could have done something better.

I seek the guidance, the next step, the next task, because it fills my Heart and gives me a sense of calm joy. I do my very best to do what is asked of me, and that is all any of us can do.

My connection to Adonai, to God, has always been one where his directives have felt strong in my heart. Even so, I can remember many times like anyone else, when I did not follow those directives and was sorry. There were times when I was able to atone for things I did or said, and other times when I was not able to or did not act soon enough and learned from it.

In this sense, the compulsion towards God embodies Wisdom.

Shunning evil is a result of wisdom because God will always guide us away from that which would do us harm. Shunning evil is about making the Way simple: about eliminating unnecessary distractions.

There is an old saying: ‘Before enlightenment, cut wood fetch water: after enlightenment, cut wood fetch water.’ Its developed nuances for me over the last couple of months.

To discover that I was God’s anointed, the Messiah, was profoundly shocking to me.

Book of Life

To understand that my genetic heritage is part of what makes me the Christ has been profoundly humbling.

I have typically only been brought out to the stage when they needed another warm body for a larger crowd. I have always identified as the ugly duckling. It has been deeply miraculous and also a bit like puberty again to find myself transformed into a Swan.

My experience is and has always been a human one with all the mistakes and missteps that we all make. I can be impatient and get frustrated. I can be as stubborn as the day is long. I can jump to conclusions without all the facts. I have had clean laundry piled up and have meant to fold it for days. When I know people are coming over, I have to run around and clean up. I made hot-dog celery soup once in college and have not been able to eat either since.

The list goes on.

Until recently my working assumption was that I was like anyone else.

I was told by a therapist once at our last session: ‘When you first came in, I did, I thought you were crazy. But then, after getting to know you I realized that you’re not crazy at all, you are just incredibly strange.’ I was, strangely, comforted.

I’ve always asked ‘too many questions’, but I have had the privilege of knowing many deep thinkers of all sorts and have learned much from them and felt they were brilliant and in many ways kindred.

I have always talked to God in my mind throughout the day. I assumed everyone did. Not like something on a todo list, but like talking to my best friend or myself. I have many times felt frustration that I could not just sit down and have a conversation with my Father Adonai, and have felt a strong longing for some kind of Home out there. I have met and always resonated with others who had a similar longing.

I learned the hard way that I was calibrated a little sensitively . The solar flare migraines are an example, but not the only one.

At some point I accidentally realized I somehow had the ability to transfer energy with my hands. I was visiting the mother of a friend in the Hospital and when I touched her with great compassion in my heart, the pain for a time seems to have been transferred out of her body, but I transferred into mine and wound up fainting and waking up on the floor of the hospital surrounded by nurses with jello.

I'm not going to lie, the jello was good.

Even so, I put it on the list of things not to try again. At least not without training.

And again, I have known people who could similarly help relieve pain in my own body and others with energy work, and have felt grateful for them and less alone because of them.

So maybe in addition to a compulsion towards God, in this time I have found Wisdom to be embodied by a another overlay: a willingness to be curious and seek Gods Voice, His Miracles and His Presence in others as they move through the ambient flow of life, and to have fellowship with others similarly called.

And in that vein, I am calling you now, as the Anointed Messiah, as the one chosen by God for this time.

I am calling you to follow me.

Not for my sake in this life, but for the sake of He who sent me and your life as His Child.

I am calling you to treat these words as you would the words of the Bible, as Truth. They are Inspired by God and translated to the best of my ability according to His Will as His Chosen. God is the only Shepard, and I am His Hand on Earth.

Take them into your heart when you read them as you would the word of God knowing that God, over the course of my life, has guided me towards them.

I am calling you to ask your Father, your Lord, for forgiveness, for the way to atonement, and for mercy.

I am calling you to ask for forgiveness if you have harmed someone. To atone with them.

I am calling on you to forgive those who come to you and ask for it.

Book of Life

I am also asking you to forgive those whose actions you still play over and over in your mind in sadness or anger. Forgive them before they ask for it, and then give it to your God who moves hearts and minds. He's got you.

I am calling you to Testify.

To share your awakening with your family and friends and community.

To share it here in the Comments and Questions section of the Book of Life.

God hears you, will see your words, and He will understand your bravery in His Name.

I will read them and I will understand your bravery on behalf of my Father, and respond as I am able and called.

Most importantly they will reach the other Children of Israel.

Your testament is a powerful beacon, and there is an opportunity here to use it in the sight of God, to speak your Truth in whatever words you find. Share your gratitude for God's Love in your life and through these words.

Say anything in your Heart. Contrition, forgiveness, love, praise. Even one word. Even if encrypted.

God understands, and His Grace will follow you to the measure of what is in your Heart, and your bravery.

These muddied arrays of egregious acts offered through tempests of a beating heart terrified and stuttering words gasping tears and regret.

These gifts of deceit exposed,

they transform in the same breath

the weight of words leave your lips into finely spun cords of sunlight and the heralding of a great miracle the moment they are received.

XX | The Feast

July 17, 2026

I have been taking time recently to study and pray, and when I read, especially the words of the prophets, it's clear to me that God sets a banquet for us daily. Every single day we are alive. He invites us to come and love one another and be in fellowship together.

And the next morning the Sun shines, the birds still sing, the clouds still gather and rain. The rivers still run in their appointed places. And God throws another party for us all, another Feast, another expression of Love for us, another shot at Redemption, and very few who hear His call come.

Today is another party. Another chance to live well, to be in joyful fellowship, to give to those in need, to be a warm body listening to those who have been abandoned by our culture. Even the smallest most secretive acts of benevolence and Goodness, and especially those, God sees.

July 17, 2026

The invitation is sincere, you might as well come to the Table...

After all, you have been sleeping in the bed and house He lent you. You have been driving around the car he enabled you to purchase. You have been attending to the work he gave you.

You have been benefited from the rain and the seasons producing the food He gave you access to and the water you drink.

But you won't come for the Feast.

Even the most tolerant of Hosts has a limit.

To add insult to injury, some of you have been feeding at the expense of others of God’s Children whom He loves very much. Some of you have been farming God’s Children for your evil blood rituals.

Some of you have been taking advantage of the innocence of others, and it will no longer hold.

Book of Life

Some of you have been failing the downtrodden in your sphere. Some have turned a blind eye to the bad actions happening around them. Some have decided that protecting the Children of God is none of their concern.

God even sent us a timeline and script vis a vis the words of His Prophets, these words here included, and many of you have scoffed if you have read them at all, in earnest.

And, as in the Days of Noah, scoff, look away, nervously create jokes aimed at denigrating His messengers who actively pray for you.

I actively pray for all of you as I walk in my garden.

In this great age of scientific wonders, our people have been lulled to sleep by the questions we no longer ask. You, who are made in the image and likeness of God, you were given access to a brain, a mind with the ability to access the Mind of God. You were given the ability to be able to consider your existence.

And with that ability, this great gift, we spend time following celebrities, listening to the expert Kings our cultures crown, and repeating their sound bites mechanically. Instead of looking inward and learning to use the amazing machinery God gave you, you have come to the conclusion that if you follow your culture, it will all just work out.

It is through this lens of your cultures and it's fruits that the search for God has been obfuscated, and led astray from the words of His Prophets. This has been orchestrated and is intentional.

When distilled to it's most core constituent parts, every struggle we face is a struggle between Goodness and wickedness. Every decision and determination we make in our lives distills down to a choice between Love and Fear. Love will lead you to eternal Providence and to your Source, and evil will lead you to death: to the pits and the burning lakes of fire.

When I say that I am the Christ, the Anointed, the Messiah, believing me will likely go against everything that your culture has taught you.

The same was true in Jesus' time and especially among His own people. There is an agenda of 'reasonableness' that you have been fed where every opporunity for breaking through to Wonder and Miracles is guarded by the great lens of 'plausible deniability'.

How would you even be able to see the arrival of the Messiah through that lens? Think about it.

Plausible deniability is the tool used by wickedness to convince you that what you are seeing is false: that what your gut is telling you and what you are feeling in your heart is incorrect.

It is the tool used to tell you that God doesn't exist.

I am not saying that we should become so open to every novel or unexpected idea that we inundate the volume of the Holy Spirit who dwells inside us.

What I am saying, and what Jesus before me said, is that you will know a tree by it's fruits.

These are my fruits.

These words are the fruits of my Heart, and the Spirit who dwells inside me. If you choose to judge my claims without first savoring the fruits of my claim, then your judgments are baseless and empty.

By the Light of the greatest Miracle there is, I was made to share the DNA of God.

I am here as a Beacon for all People. These words are my Lighthouse. Come and take refuge in them. Let them stir you. Seek the voice of your Heart as a litmus test of their Truth, not the canned laughter of a talk show.

The reason I am here now is because, frankly, God is pissed.

He looks to Earth and sees rampant parasitism in His People, and He is about to clean the World entirely of its parasites. There is no exit, there is no cave deep and secure enough to hide from the eyes of God: no Faraday cage that can shield you from His Sight.

God is not playing parlor games of Hide and Seek. He wants you to grow up and show up: ride or die.

I've been as gentle about this as I can. It's time to make hay while the sun shines, as they say in the Middle West. The time for Judgment is here. Procrastination will not serve you. Some of you have reached the limit of your Host's generosity.

Book of Life

Times are about to get darker than anyone can imagine.

If my calls to you seem urgent or over-bearing this is why. I have read the writing on the wall. I have given testimony to this effect. A terrible Time is coming.

You have forgotten your Source, the Light that animates you.

I am calling you back to your Source because I see that the database is about to get cleaned. I want to see you activated before that work happens and you get wiped from the Database for lack of activity or worse, for pernicious activities.

Come Home. Now. It's Time.

Those who elect to come for Dinner are Truly blessed by Adonai and assured deep rewards for your investment.

His Spirit will animate your life, and uncomplicate your Heart.

The Living Waters of His Love will quench a thirst you thought would never be quenched; they will heal an ache that you had resigned yourself to.

Hearing His Nudges will give you insights into your past, present and future and answer questions you had forgotten you had. Being an instrument to bring His Love and Peace to others will renew your vitality, and shift your perspective.

You will experience wonder and humor as if you were a child seeing fireflies for the first time floating like beacons. You will feel the world Alive in a way that moves you deeply. You will be able to read signs in the map of your life that direct you and comfort you.

You will feel Peace.

And you will understand the urgency and call of Your Special Mission to infuse Wisdom, Faith, Trust, Reverence, Hope, Love and Beauty into your corner of the Universe.

I hope to see you all at the Table.

XXI | Reflection

July 17, 2026

The idea of ‘reflection’ is one I toyed with earlier in the Book of Life as an aspect of Polarity, and with reference to the crystallizing field of our DNA.

Reflection is central to the functioning of the machine described by the Blueprints of the Universe that I talk about in the first Chapter of the Book of Life.

Reflection is deceptively simple. It holds much more than it lets on.

If you reflect any wavelength on both ends, you get an infinity symbol, a mobius strip, a simplified Klein bottle, a Toroid, an Oloid, the Diurnal Cycle, a simplified Labyrinth.

Reflection gives the ‘one hand clapping’ a purchase for resonance.

From the standpoint of different Wisdom Schools, Hermetic Schools in particular, the idea of ‘reflection’ is key.

The basic idea is that there is a Prime Emanation of Energy, be it a Laser or Light or Radiance.

At some point this Prime Emanation arrives at and is reflected by something - a being, an object - and the reflected light blends elements of both: the original Prime Emanation (some frequency bands of which are absorbed) and aspects of the object (or being) reflecting the Prime Energy.

Here is where things get interesting.

If you were to record on a photographic film both the Prime Energy and the reflection of that energy, looking at the combination of the two, you would see amazingly complex 2D arrangements of dark and light moire patterns on the film itself.

But if you shine a light through the film, the Object off which the Prime Energy was reflected appears holographically: an apparently 3D representation of the Object/Being of Reflection.

The combination of the Primary Energy and reflected Energy create something magical together.

Book of Life

In the case of physical holographic film the Prime Energy source is a Laser.

In the case of a Human Being, the Prime Energy is God - the Origin of All Radiance and Vibration - the weaver of Scalar Fields and all other fields.

The Being this energy is being reflected off of and through is You.

The film is your Soul that holds the record of these transmissions through time as a resonance field.

When the Scalar Field of Source Energy arrives to you, it moves and reassembles through your unique core resonance field, and what is reflected through that field and holographically into your World depends on your field.

When your field is muddied by dark thoughts or actions, the light you reflect back holographically into your World holds that darkness. Your World becomes clouded and dark as a result. When you try to use your own light as the source, the field cannot be sustained and is useless as a crystallizing generator.

If you continually seek the Light of Source and Right Action, it reassembles your field with it’s Light and your intention combined.

Over time, and as you continue to practice intention, benevolent thinking and good deeds, the clarity of the unique and beautiful light you reflect becomes more intense and more pure, and as the combined holographic representation of your field becomes clearer it crystallizes blessings into the field of your Life.

When you work from your internal Guiding Light, from the Spirit of Christ inside you, it enables God, who is the Source of all Blessings and Love and everything Good, to create Goodness WITH you and THROUGH you.

It enables you to work as an instrument of His Good Works, and in doing so to manifest those Good Works into the World around you.

There is no greater Power. The collaborations you undertake with God move mountains, hearts and mind.

Not coincidentally, the above also lays out completely the Inner Workings of the Sun.

XXII | A New Culture

July 18, 2026

At some point in my sojourns on the Earth as a traveler in Central America, I could not fix a part that my car needed.

It happens.

And so I wrote down the year, make and model, and put it in my wallet for next time I went out.

Like ya do.

I can't tell you how many car parts places I visited, and not one of them could help me. They kept telling me to pull it and bring it, but my own experience kept reminding me that there is nothing a part could tell them that the information I had given them could not.

It went on like this for an embarrassingly long time.

Insanity is doing the same thing over and over again and expecting different results. My abject stubbornness in the face of clear instructions has been the stuff of legends.

God knows.

Finally, two months way-laid and bills piling up, I pulled the part.

It was buried so I actually pulled a lot of parts, which is what had stopped me initially.

We went out, went to the same row of car parts stores near by, and in the first store the guy looked at it.

Same guy from all the times before who I had been speaking with for months.

His eyes lit up. He turned it around a couple times, and then told me the year range, make and model of the vehicle it was for. As an encore, he also told me the color of my car, as some of the paint scratched off onto the part when I was taking it out.

Book of Life

He went in, grabbed the replacement, and sent me on my way.

I scratched my head for a long time about this. It seemed a whole branched off order of intelligence existed that I had not considered. A reverse engineering of my cultural assumptions.

In a similar way, the culture of God works differently than the world around us, and often than we think it does.

If we come in with too much of our own story, and too many of our own solutions, it can cloud the best way forward.

We postpone or do our own solution, and the improvement we were looking for never seems to manifest the way we imagined or hoped it would.

We assume that God must not be listening.

But if we look, sometimes we will see the shortcut we took. God is listening, but sometimes His timing or ways are different than the ones we would choose.

We impose our own solutions instead of the ones that came to us in prayer but seemed too hard at the time; if we prayed at all.

God understands a much larger Board than we do, He sees all the adjacent plays. Sometimes what is asked of us, to our own minds, seems counter all sense. But God has His own sense, and He sees the bigger picture.

God's miracles can await us when we follow the first difficult path. The one we are avoiding.

Even the smartest among us cannot comprehend God's incredible Clockworks.

If you want to think outside the box of your own mind and your own conditioning, following God's gentle but persistent voice in your Heart comes with all the Blessings and Grace needed to succeed miraculously beyond what you would ever dream for yourself and those you love.

Essentially, He’s got your back. Big Time.

There is this very unfortunate but none-the-less persistent impression that getting close to God means that your life becomes a list of rules and things to feel badly about.

This could not be farther from the truth.

If I am any indication (spoiler alert: I AM), God loves funny quipicisms. He loves making up words on the spot. He loves it when we get the joke He cracked at us a week ago. It doesn't matter to Him that we are late in understanding. He loves us the more for it. He loves it when we stand up tall for what we know is right. Loves. It. He loves hearing people laugh, and especially the look in your eyes the second right before you burst into laughter.

He loves it when a bunch of us get together and listen to music on blankets outside while the sun sets.

He loves it when you help someone who needs it. He loves it when you give. He loves that thing you do with your hands when you are trying to figure things out. He loves when you track someone to make sure they are okay. He loves the care we take to do things well. He loves that time we didn't think we could do it, but we tried anyhow because it was important.

God's Culture is a Living Joyful Culture.

If it feels hard at first, it's just because your eyes are adjusting to the new Light.

XXIII | Bowls

July 18, 2026

May God give me the words to lay out a heavy load.

May the words that come act as a beacon for all God's Children.

I have spoken about the Trumpets in the Book of Revelations, and now it's time to talk about the Bowls of God's Wrath.

When we read about the 7 Bowls of God's Wrath, we have to understand it through the eyes of a protective Parent, a Shepard, the Father of a Flock, who has tried everything else to protect those who are harmonious from the aggressive ones creating disharmony and chaos.

God has tried everything and is out of options.

There are those of God's Children who have suffered a great deal in order to keep to God's Laws, His covenants with us.

This World is hard on those who choose innocence over aggression and fear, and who choose to Love others in the face of slippery-slope ethics and morals, difficulties and persecution.

God understands what it has taken for those who persevere in His ways to continue to wake up and praise Him, and be grateful, and continue to choose Love over Fear.

What is clear is that, even in the face of corporeal death, those who have continued in God's Light and to propagate His ways are destined for His Kingdom, where their bravery will be remembered and they will be rewarded in kind.

Even the dead, who died in Christ, will rise, and the Angels announce that those who die united with God will be Blessed from this point forward. That they will be given rest and that their good deeds will follow with them.

What is also clear is that these of God's Children who have stayed in the Light, and have suffered greatly as a result, these will hear the Celestial music, and will be treated mercifully and with great care and reverence.

What does it mean to be alive in Christ?

The Spirit of Christ is in our bodies from the moment we are conceived. That Spirit patiently and lovingly witnesses for us through the course of our lives and tries to Guide us. This is the fundamental framework, and is not conditional. It does not depend on your belief in it.

Those alive in that Spirit seek God and choose His ways every day. We seek Guidance from God in all we do.

Those not alive to the Spirit don't seek God, don't choose God, don't need God, make their own ways and do their own things, and even worse with the attitude that God has never done anything for them. In doing so they deny the very spark that animates them.

Those alive in Christ know it is a decision, a choice.

We have made in the past, make now, and will continue to make decisions to seek Christ and good works above fame, money or glory, above personal comfort or recognition. Above all else.

We seek God because we know that God is the Framework, and why seek anything else?

If in the past you have not been alive to the Spirit of Christ inside you, the time is at hand to do the work. To seek God. To atone for past mistakes. To choose right actions moving forward.

God rewards those who come to His table of their own accord and humbly ask for mercy. All who come earnestly with humility and contrition will receive mercy and love.

The choice to see and acknowledge that you have the Spirit of Christ inside you is yours, and it will always be yours. And you will need to make it everyday and in every moment, and learn the delicacy of it on your tongue.

'I trusted, therefore I spoke'.

Courage becomes reflexive once you get a sense for it.

Book of Life

Those alive in Christ will, in ways that are mysterious and curious to me, be set apart where they will be able to avoid the horror that follows.

How this will occur has been the subject of much speculation.

In the vernacular, people refer to it as the ‘Rapture’.

It is framed as a ‘harvest’ in which God’s Children, those who have kept faithful to Him and His Laws, who have against great odds persevered in Christ and ‘ripened’ will be Harvested. These will be refined in the Winepress of God’s Fury. The blood coming out of the Winepress flows shoulder deep for hundreds of miles in all directions.

Symbolically, what is happening here is genius.

All that God’s Children have suffered is to be thoroughly accounted for, and these accounts, these spiritual acts of violence, will be pressed and processed into the the bloody Wine of God’s Fury, and then served to their tormentors in the pages that follow.

Corinthians 2:4 is of one of the most beautifully written passages of the Bible, in my opinion. It reminds us that those of God’s Children who have refused to make use of shameful or underhanded methods, often at their own peril, already understand that the goal of life is not money, fame or glory in this life.

We have already seen the proverbial writing on the wall, and have chosen to live in Faith and Trust of the One who created us instead of through might or theft.

We already choose to perform righteous deeds and Love one another fiercely, even at great personal peril.

We understand that the miracle of Christ inside us all is the Key to Eternal Life, regardless of what befalls us on Earth.

In addition to the salty sweetness that good deeds leave on the palate, more exquisite than the finest caviar and worth more than Gold and Jewels, those alive in Christ are promised a clean slate, a body refreshed, and a new Home.

We understand we will be handled lovingly and justly by God. We may be curious about how it all goes down, but not concerned.

We trust God.

Those left on Earth will be scorched, shaken and tormented.

There is just no other way to say it.

The first Bowl of God's Wrath will manifest as boils afflicting the body.

The second Bowl will induce the Sea to turn into congealed blood not unlike the slow moving and tarry river of blood that is the River Styx.

Fresh water turns to blood in the third Bowl, and those who fed on the life's blood of others will have no choice but to drink blood instead of fresh water, as there will be no untainted water.

The fourth bowl will see those on Earth scorched with burning heat.

The fifth will bring utter Darkness over the earth, and those who experience it will chew their own tongues in pain.

The sixth will see the Great River dry up completely, the Euphrates, which I think is a metaphor but do not fully understand. The drying up of this great river is said to allow passage for the Kings of the East, the four Angels bound at the great Euphrates in the Book of Revelations 9.

The seventh Bowl will bring MASSIVE earthquakes and hail made of blood and water weighing a hundred pounds each.

The curious note that after each Bowl of Wrath is poured, those on Earth choose to curse the God they have never before even granted existence to, instead of repenting and asking for forgiveness and mercy.

This, of course, results in the next Bowl being poured over them.

Book of Life

After the full measure of God's Wrath has been poured out, those left over at the end of this allegorical game of musical chairs will not have won, and will be tormented for the remainder of their existence.

Not because God is mean, but because they have chosen to live outside of the Laws of the Universe, the Laws of God. They have instead made their own rules. The framework in which they exist but stubbornly deny space for in their hearts will no longer support them.

It is never too late to turn to God who is always with you and waiting for you.

From our limited perspectives, it can be difficult to understand the Patience and Mercy of God. We convince ourselves from the depths of our misalignment that we have fallen too far even for God to reach. That we have proven ourselves unworthy again and again. That no sane God could love us.

God sees all the times you have fallen, but He also sees every time you decided to RISE.

Every misstep you have corrected is a miracle of Love that Delights your Father in Heaven. Every time you have made amends to someone you hurt. Every time you tried to correct a mistake. Every time you do something and see that it is not perfect, and stop to make it perfect, God is Proud.

We have all made decisions that did not hit the target, but there are times we did hit the target. God sees both, and the Good is never canceled out in His Eyes. God knows that this world we inhabit is challenging. When we make an effort but fail, God sees what it took for us to reach, and holds it like a Testament in front of us to reach for again. He has Faith in us because He Created us, and it is a Faith that will never diminish.

Reach for Him. In the quiet moments, talk to Him. In the desperate moments, cry out to Him. In the moments that make you laugh, shoot Him a knowing look. In the moments when you are confused and loose your way, tell Him you want to find your way back.

Tell Him you are not sure what you are doing, but you want to do what He would choose for you to do. Ask Him to Guide your footsteps so that you find the way. Ask Him to forgive you if you were mistaken, and ask Him how you can repent.

I learned a delightful trick from a dear friend. There was a time I was frustrated, and acted out in that frustration in a way that made someone really sad and was not fair. Once I had apologized in a way that really connected, but was still sad about what I had done, he told me to go out and think of the good times and laughter that I had shared with this particular person. To recall a special time, or something we did together, or a funny moment.

That extra step of bringing to mind good experiences with that particular person, particularly after a difficult pass, energetically heals the wound.

The recollection of joy with that person heals the energetic cords that connect you. They realign and smooth out all the strings of the Light you have shared together, and particularly the strings that were damaged by the hurting.

The same happens when you come back and reconnect in your relationship with God: but in on a much bigger scale. The cords of Light that are healed are the ones that allow you to hear His Guidance, and feel His Love for you, and act as a messenger for that Love you have received freely from Him.

I pray with deep hope and love that you find your way to the Love of your Creator.

I pray that you choose wisely and according your Hearts.

What awaits is nothing less than a new vision of your Life, the beholding and nurturing of a new World unencumbered by strife and malice, and made harmonious in and through you for all God's Children.

Book of Life

XXIV | Rainbow

July 21, 2026

Let’s step back for a moment at this point and pull on some threads that have been noted earlier, but that I think are worth coming back to at this point.

Once again we are embarking into the somewhat murky symbolic realms where curiosity reigns, mysteries abound, and answers are veiled.

In Genesis 1, on the first day, God said let there be Light. He divided the light from the darkness and called the Light day, and the darkness night. So there was evening and there was morning. The first day.

On the second day God lays out the Heavens and the waters and separates the waters below from the waters above. Of waters above, the Firmament, God noted that we would call it ‘sky’.

On the third day God unifies the waters under the sky together and calls them the Sea, separated from the land which He called Earth. On the third day God also creates all manner of grasses and plants which can reproduce as seed, and also creates all manner of fruit tress which bear fruit. He tells them to be fruitful and multiply.

On the fourth day, God creates the Sun to rule the day and the Moon to rule the night and the stars, and placed them in the dome of the sky as signs for the seasons and days and years.

On the fifth day, God creates animals in the seas, and on the land the insects and birds of the air, and told them to be fruitful and multiply.

On the sixth day He creates all manner of land animals on Earth, and also creates man in his own image and as such unique. Being made in the image of God, He places all other beings under the stewardship of man.

And on the seventh day God rests.

When a large story gets abbreviated into the space of a page or so, by necessity less significant but perhaps important details are given to the compost heap of brevity.

What is interesting is that after these magnificent and truly wondrous creations of God in Genesis 1, which could fill vast libraries, notice what happens to the narrative: from an entire creation story in one page, the Bible slows down just after the creation of man - who clearly has something to say about it in the pages that follow.

In a similar vein and also notable, is that after creating man in His own image in this new World, God rested.

After a productive straight run of Days of Creation culminating in the creation of man, He did not stop, He rested. As if to say, let's hang out a minute and see how this all turns out...

Also interesting is a sense that this abbreviated story is not only telling a story about the creation and divisions and functions and beings in the Earth and Heavenly realms, it is also telling the story of an evolution of the mechanics of what was possible and became possible at each stage.

We have this sense as creatures who live, if we are lucky, to the age of 80, that things work and have always worked the way our sciences tell us they do and the way that they do for us.

But maybe Genesis is pointing to the idea that as the Realm was being created, at each phase it required certain mechanics to operate as a system. In each Day of Creation, the mechanics and laws of the physical world went through an evolution as well.

The obvious example for me is that God created grasses and trees and fruit which do not need pollination in order to be fruitful at that point (or day/night at that point), and then later creating the creepy crawly insects and bird pollinators and seed distribution networks that eventually become pollinators for them. In each phase He straps each new creation down using collaboration with the others.

At the point God creates the Sun, Moon and stars, He does this to mark time out as seasons, but the plants and fruit trees were multiplying just fine on their own in the conditions that were present before.

Each stage sets up new rules for collaboration, and a new physics, and biological and chemical mechanisms of helpers that govern those new rules. Each stage is exponentially more complex than the next.

Book of Life

After Adonai takes a day of repose on the seventh day, Genesis 2 starts out setting the scene for where He left off. There are two elements I would like to pull out of this setting of stage that are important.

In Genesis 2:5 no wild plant or wild bush had yet sprung up because God had not yet caused it to rain on the earth and there was no one to cultivate the ground.

The sense is that these ‘wild’ varieties to come would have required a different sort of watering as well as someone with intelligence enough to cultivate them.

In Genesis 2:6, the bible says that in leu of ‘rain’, ‘Rather, a mist went up from the earth which watered the entire surface of the ground.’

Genesis 2:7 goes on to say that at this point Adonai create Adam ‘a person’ from the dust of the ground and then ‘breathed into his nostrils the Breath of Life, so that he became a Living Being.’ In this sense, Adam is differentiated from ‘humankind’ - created in the IMAGE of God in Genesis 1 - with the Breath of Life, the Indwelling Spirit of God that resides in each of us.

Adam is the first true Son of God.

Adam is a defined as a proximal creation, a DNA upgrade from Day 6. God had a chance to consider it over the 7th day, and determined that people, persons, house the Indwelling Spirit of Adonai Himself.

What could go wrong?

As it happens, there were a couple flies in the ointment of ‘person’hood.

The first was the fall of Adam and Eve in the garden, and the subsequent murder of Able by Cain. This story has a lot of goose eggs if you dig into the Apocrypha. Long story short points to Cain not actually coming from the seed of Adam, and instead was from the seed of the ‘Serpent’.

The ‘fruit’ from the Tree of Knowledge is evidenced to be sex in Genesis 4:1.

There it says the ‘man’ had sexual relations with Eve. The man from our previous discussion of ‘mankind’ as opposed to the Living Being that Adam was. After she had sex with the ‘man’ producing Cain, she then tempted Adam into the same, and Able was the result. Cain means ‘acquisition’ from God, as if Eve who also had the Indwelling Spirit within her, had unwittingly taken something AWAY from Adonai in her actions.

In a deeper sense, however, the fruit from the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil is consumed when we believe they can both exist in the same equation, as if one could cancel the other out: but God cannot be canceled. Maybe our principle task is to remove ‘Evil’, the intentional misappropriation of God’s Will, from the equation altogether.

The second was the fall of the ‘Watchers’, the band of Fallen Angels who mated with women on Earth and created the menace of the Giants. The ‘Watchers’ also perverted the ways and cultures of man.

So we have the fall of man, followed by corrections, followed by the fall of the Angels.

By the time of Noah, Giants were the men of renown, and mankind has slipped irretrievably down the slippery slope away from God and towards self-gratification with riches and power at the cost of others and towards wanton carnality instead of Righteousness and God’s Will.

God sent the Floods as a correction.

In the same breath, God severely limited the lifespan of man from many hundreds of years to a cap at 120. The book of Genesis also acknowledges that the floods would not entirely rid the Earth of the problems it was facing before but would serve to generally cleanse the infection of evil (my words).

I think there is more to the story here. Shall we dig a little?

As I have hinted towards before, I have the sometimes dubious tendency towards viewing any given thing first through the lens of Mathematics, pattern and symbol. In my travels through learning, I have dabbled here and there in different sciences looking for patterns and verification of pattern.

Intuitively, in my mind, there is a sense of a genetic build up through the Days of Creation, and then a sense of genetics interrupted in the creation and subsequent fall of Man (Cain) and the fall of the Angels (Giants).

Book of Life

But in order to prevent issues encountered before, I also get a sense that in setting up this phase of the experiment, there were changes made to the ‘policy’ of Earth that cemented in certain constraints.

One of those constraints seems to have applied to the movement of beings between the Earthly and Heavenly realms. If Enoch could walk with God before the Flood, I question if that would have been able to happen the same way afterwards.

The conditions in place that allowed the Watchers the ability to ‘fall’, I imagine in a similar way that limits were placed to prevent it happening again.

I think this is what lead to the construction of Jacobs Ladder, and then the Miracle of the Indwelling Holy Spirit. God wanted to come to us, to be with us, and after the various falls it could no longer happen in the same way. He sent us His Holy Spirit and He also sent the Miracle of His Son incarnate: Jesus Christ.

There is also a sense I get post flood of a guided evolution while complying within the rubric of the present circumstances: complete with punctuated corrections (genetic upgrades) and quickly dispersed vis a vis shorter lifespans.

An alternative to more flooding until morale improves.

Many modern genetic experiments focus on fruit flies because they create generations and new genetic hybridization rapidly. From the perspective of logic and science, it would make sense that shorter lifespans continually refresh and disseminate genetic information and speed up the diaspora into the larger population.

I am aware at this point that I am using scientific terms that have been stripped of their spiritual content. I am doing so in order to communicate and also to build a bridge of understanding.

Terms like experiment and hybridization and guided punctuated evolution. They are awkward in this context. May God fill them with His spirit in the minds of my readers.

In any case, the symbolic stage is getting curiouser and curiouser.

If you remember in Genesis 2:5-6 the rains had not yet been established and instead an upward moving mist watered everything. The first point at which we hear about ‘clouds’ is also the first time we hear about rainbows: Genesis 9. The are introduced together as a package deal post Inundation.

Two for the price of one.

God offers them as a Covenant to Noah and his decedents as a sign that wherever He brings clouds, He will also split his light into a beautiful radiant rainbow so that all creatures on Earth are reminded of God.

It is said to represent a promise that God will never destroy all humanity from the Earth with floods, but my senses are telling me there is more to the story than this one sentence leads us to believe.

The rainbow we see in the sky is only the visible part of the spectrum of God’s love.

The separation of light into it’s various colors if slowed down would resolve into Sound, the music of the spheres, and when sped up transform into invisible and powerful Radiance.

The Book of Revelations, foretells of a similar (but different) global cataclysm. In chapter 10 John brings us back to the rainbow, as he does earlier in the same book when he describes the Throne of God and God himself surrounded by rainbow emanations.

In chapter 10, John is given the vision of an Angel with a scroll. The Angel looked to him like an Emerald, with a head like the Sun, clothed in clouds and had legs of rainbow, one on land and one on the sea. The Angel’s Thunder speaks to John, but he is told not to write down what the Thunder is saying. Instead, he is told to take the scroll out of the Angel’s hand and eat it. He is told it will taste sweet in the mouth, but will turn bitter in the stomach.

Let’s tease this out a bit shall we?

What sticks out to me is that this cloud rainbow emissary appears as an Emerald to John which incidentally is one of the Gemstones used in the foundation of the Temple of the New Jerusalem in chapter 21.

Symbolically what appears to be happening in this vision is the land is connecting to the sea and visa versa through this Cloud Rainbow Emerald emissary.

Book of Life

In many books of creation describing the creation of man, the spirit of Sophia, Wisdom, separates from God and enters the vast Sea. The idea is that she is to journey and eventually effort to find her way back to her Source, back to her counterpart in Heaven.

Symbolically, this Cloud Rainbow Emerald emissary is connecting the sea (the realm of Sophia and of man) to firm ground. I see the land as referring to the Heavenly realms.

In these writings I have made various references to the Emerald Tablet, particularly with respect to the idea of reflection, but here we see an exquisite match once again in the Cloud Rainbow Emerald emissary.

For those who have not had the distinct pleasure of being introduced, the Emerald Tablet is said to be written by Hermes (who we today reference in the phrase ‘hermetically sealed’). The tablet itself is said to be made of Emerald, and has writing embossed on it.

It’s existence and creation is a subject of much speculation and mystery, but the first written accounts of it are thought to go back to 800 AD in the Kitab Sirr al-Asar.

In Wisdom and Hermetic circles alike, the Emerald Tablet is a bit of a philosophers stone, the philosophical analog to the grand unifying equation in Physics. It is considered to be the the ultimate of hidden mysteries, the prime cipher to crack.

All the translations I have read keep remarkably to the script, and it is always introduced as being ‘truth, in no way deceit, certain and most truthful’. Like they needed to say it a few different ways in order to hammer the point in.

In order that folks pay special attention.

When distilled to its essence, the Emerald Tablet describes the mechanism in which humans work with God, and why this collaboration is the most powerful force that exists.

It is basically describing the same mechanism exposed through Jacob’s dream the night he became Israel. The Cloud Rainbow Emerald emissary, whose characteristics and functioning are outlined in the Emerald Tablet, is a symbolic representation of Jacob’s Ladder. A way made by God vis a vis His Holy Spirit, the Spirit of Christ inside us, for all spectrum of the Lord’s emissaries to communicate with us, and us with Him.

It is interesting to note at this point, that although this Rainbow Covenant with God is beautiful to behold and feels comforting, the deeper reality is a bitter pill to swallow, as noted by John in Chapter 10.

In the flooding of the Earth certain security measures, policies and physical realities were put in place to ensure that the corruptions that occurred in the Antediluvian period would be be contained until it could be addressed.

These measures meant that our communication with God would not happen directly but instead through the Holy Spirit of God residing inside us and through God's Emissaries, traversing the Emerald Rainbow through Jacob's Ladder.

This Ladder is the mechanism relaying messages back and forth from the Heavenly Realms, and performing God's Will on Earth.

At this point, it seems relevant to talk about why, in his vision of 'end times' John brings back the concept of this communication super-highway between man and God.

I am lead to wonder if the 'end' referenced in 'end times' is actually looking at the end of the need for the Rainbow Covenant with Noah and his decedents, and the resulting pollution of humanity. As if the changes coming are meant to correct the conditions that necessitated them once and for all.

In this sense the Book of Revelations earmarks God's Children, those Alive in Christ at this point in our relative sequestration, as the Children of the New Jerusalem. They are to be kept aside from the coming Bowls of Wrath, and to be reunited with God.

Like Enoch, those Alive in Christ will walk with God again.

It is interesting that in our time rainbows seem most often associated with the Trans agenda: a literal smoke screen of rainbow flags distracting us from the real message of the rainbow.

The rainbow is not about the diversity of sexual expressions. This is a literal perversion of the message.

Book of Life

It’s about the splendor and variety of God’s radiance separated so that it can be visible in all it’s raiment and especially during stormy times: shining through the clouds to remind us of His Love for us that is so great that even when He had to put some space between us for a time, He created other connections.

John reminds us that even through this bitter-sweet Covenant, that God has remained and continues to remain with us. And he paints a picture of a future where God will call His chickens to Roost in His presence once again.

XXV | Pyramids

July 23, 2026

Our last chapter was about God's extraordinary efforts, care and desire to create a way to connect with humans during a time of relative separation.

Here, we will explore the efforts and infrastructures built from Earth in a time gone by to connect with the machinery of the Light Circuit of God, and utilize it.

This writing rests on the shoulders of others who have, each in their own way, contributed to a greater understanding of the pyramids, and is not intended as a substitute for the volumes that have been written and spoken in this vein. Instead, my intention is to build on what I have learned and assemble it together in a new frame.

The absorption of this writing will be greatly augmented by your own pictorial exploration and research.

Because the idea is ambient in the majority report, I want to very briefly address the notion that the pyramids around the globe exist for the sole purpose of burying Kings. The only space I will give to this notion is to say that it is a false lead.

Before jumping into speaking about the pyramids, I want to pull on various small threads scattered throughout this writing that allude to or directly speak to or evoke the Emerald Tablet.

The Emerald Tablet has emerged from the great press of ancient and historical writing, as an (at most) fifteen lined encoded piece of writing that purports, in truth, without deceit and most certainly to fully describe the operation of the Sun. It has been translated through the arc of history into various languages by sages of the time, with remarkable fidelity between translations.

The idea I want to toy with is that, in fact, these fifteen lines represent the communication of a base pattern that is embedded into all aspects of our reality and is utilized by Pyramid technology.

I am posting here one of the more common translations of the Emerald Tablet so that we can have a common point of reference.

Book of Life

The first line (zero) is the one most left out, and the one with the most variety across translations. In my inclusion of it I am borrowing from a different translation that includes it with depth:

0) Here is that which the priest Saijus of Nablus has dictated concerning the entrance of Balinas in the hidden chamber: After my entrance into the chamber, where the talisman was set up, I can up to an old man [Hermes in most versions] sitting on a golden throne, who was holding an emerald table in one hand. And behold the following – in Syriac, the primordial language – was written thereon:

1) In truth, without deceit, certain, and most veritable.

2) That which is Below corresponds to that which is Above, and that which is Above corresponds to that which is Below, to accomplish the miracles of the One Thing.

3) And just as all things have come from this One Thing, through the meditation of One Mind, so do all created things originate from this One Thing, through Transformation.

4) It’s father is the Sun; it’s mother the moon.

5) The Wind carries it in its belly; its nurse is the Earth.

6) It is the origin of All, the consecration of the Universe.

7) It’s inherent Strength is perfected, if it is turned into Earth. 7a) Separate the Earth from Fire, the Subtle from the Gross, gently and with great Ingenuity.

8) It rises from Earth to Heaven and descends again to Earth, thereby combining within Itself the powers of both the Above and Below.

9) Thus you will obtain the Glory of the Whole Universe. All Obscurity will be clear to you. This is the greatest Force of all powers.

10) It overcomes every Subtle things and penetrates every Solid thing.

11) In this way was the Universe created.

12) From this come many wondrous Applications, because this is the Pattern.

13) Therefore I am called Thrice Greatest Hermes, having all three parts of the wisdom of the Whole Universe.

14) Herein have I completely explained the Operation of the Sun.

I have to say that disambiguating a work that has been so encrypted through the ages, and faithfully kept so, I do with great reverence for those who have come before me, and to those who will come after me.

Instead of going line by line, which could be a work of itself, I want to take a few of the more obscure terms and define them enough to give our investigation some integrity. That way we leave some of the mystery in tact: as mystery is a force that draws us deeper.

By the time we get to line 4, it has been made clear that something novel is being created. To make the miracle of the One Thing involves combining what is Above which corresponds with what is Below, and in doing so engaging an act of creating something new.

But how does that happen?

Line 4 was addressed in the chapter about Reflection. We begin with Light.

The Sun is a symbol for the original Source of Light (or information) and the moon reflects the Light of the Sun: symbolic representations of primary and reflected light.

The two Lights together create a third overlay.

Just as a single magnet is defined functionally by it's two poles which dance together, this overlay symbolically combines both together to create a third: synthesis.

One analog for this is in the magical collaboration happening in our brains.

I have heard the brain described as a tool that takes information acquired by the 5 senses (the reflection that comes back to us from the World around us) and blends it with information coming from God and his Angelic Forces, the Prime Light Source (hunches, gut feelings, compulsions, intuition and messages from prayer).

Book of Life

Together, these combine to enable more nuanced concepts like ‘right action’ are able to come into focus. These nuanced ideas, which include the blessing of the Heavens, become the impetus for actions that go back into the World around you and transform it.

Line 5 introduces a cast of new Characters onto the stage: Wind, and Earth. The Wind is said to hold this novel creation in it’s Belly, and the Earth nourishes it.

Wind is a force that is unseen but felt.

The force of wind can lift and move things, but it is not defined by the things it moves. It carries them in its belly, but is not composed of them. My sense of this Wind is as a symbolic reference to the Aether which is a medium that light, magnetic and scalar energy move through. As a field, the Aether carries these energies but is not composed of them.

Earth is said to nourish this novel creation, and in the following line Earth is divided into two important constituent parts: Earth and Fire, Subtle and Gross, which are to be separated with great Ingenuity.

Now typically we think of ‘Earth’ as solid, and Fire as a sort of airy hot plasma.

This automatic association is the encrypted buck of the bronco that throws most people off. In fact, this symbolic juxtaposition is pointing at quite the opposite.

The Earth, described as ‘Subtle’ above, and ‘Spirited’ in other translations is actually referring to anything at any scale that puts off an energetic signature that can be transmitted through the Aether.

It in addition to being embodied in every gap between base pairs of each rung of our DNA, it is embodied in the accumulative vibration of them all combined, and generate the scalar toroidal field centered around your Heart that outputs your unique frequency through the Aether. In this example I am using the model of a human, but it can apply to all energetic systems at every scale.

Fire is described as ‘Gross’ as opposed to the Earths ‘Subtle’. Fire describes a reaction of sorts that converts one form of energy into another. Fire is also how the process of ‘oxidation’ is described. In my mind, the ‘Gross’ Fire that is separated from the ‘Subtle’ Earth, is pointing at the raw material for combustion – for maintaining the processes of life, as opposed to the ‘spark’, the spirited orchestration of subtle energetic movements connecting us to God.

Of the spirited orchestration of subtle energetic movements, in line 8 we are shown that this spirited earth is best employed when it ascends from Earth to Heaven and then comes back down combining the powers of both: a beautiful metaphor for Prayer.

We are told in lines following that this method of combining the powers of both Heaven and Earth is a core pattern that describes the way the Earth was created, completely describes the Operation of the Sun, and is capable of penetrating all Solid things and overcoming all Subtle things.

We’ve seen the way this works in your body through the miracle of the Holy Spirit in your DNA accessed by prayer, learning and focus on God’s will and watching for God’s movement in our lives. We have seen the miracles this collaboration can create for the benefit of all, and how it can accomplish tasks miraculously.

Now let’s look at this framework through the lens of other systems.

MARIMBA

Applied to the mechanism described in the Emerald Tablet, we begin with a desire for Music.

A transcendental aching of our hearts to express inspiration which comes from God in the form of sound.

Through patient study of our physical world and experimentation we create instruments that convert the learning of musical structure, the mechanical form of the instrument itself which we are inspired to build, the inspired arrangement of the music, and the mechanical movement of our bodies towards the instrument into the manifestation and expression of our transcendental ache: sound.

A Marimba is a wooden Xylophone that is made of wooden planks tuned to each note on a scale, and then placed in a frame suspended together to that they can be played with mallets. Under each wooden key of the Marimba, a sized tube underneath serves as an amplifier or resonator. It captures the frequencies of the block, and resonates the sound out.

Book of Life

In addition to the resonators amplifying the sound of the wooden key above it, they resonate sounds from other keys that are harmonic. The result is a rich blending of resonant frequencies that we call music.

Sound with the power to quiet crying babies, or move a person to tears, or if amplified and channeled, with the power to break a crystal glass or cut through steel.

Sound that can call herds of animals, inspire large crowds of individuals to move in unison and has the power to communicate and induce love, sadness, delight and beauty.

Something much larger than any of the constituent parts that brings us all together in Spirit.

Now let’s grow this example in scale.

PYRAMIDS

The construction of the Pyramids at Giza and the surrounding infrastructure of the Spinx and underground passages underneath the Giza Plateau is impossibly complex, would have required technology to cut and assemble and build that is unknown to us today. Those sections are also largely off limits.

It is said to house technology and information from a time gone by, and utilizes the principle of the Emerald Tablet, the energetic blueprint of the universe, to capture, amplify and reflect information from the stars.

It’s hieroglyphics even double as an operation manual and set of blueprints.

I was lucky enough at some point in my deep dives into the Pyramids at Giza over the years to find the work of someone who studied the hieroglyphic writing, and concluded that in addition to telling the story of history and important figures and events, there is a deeper hidden language that describes the physics of the Pyramids themselves: like a hidden operators manual. I wish I could point people to the work itself, but all that is left is seven pages of notes in an old notebook of the translations themselves.

By way of example, the hieroglyph for Nut who is thought to represent the Van Allen Belts or the Milky Way, is translated as a ‘Plasma Link’ or ‘Plasma Connection Circuit’. This translation is consistent with the properties of Nut.

The symbol for bread, a half circle with the ark pointing upwards, is translated as ‘negative charge’, and ostrich feather, the winged Sun, is translated as a collector, and the symbol for Bes is translated to mean ‘electrostatic’. These individual hieroglyphs are combined in the hieroglyph for Amentet, which combines the functions of the symbols above and is translated to mean ‘electrostatic negative charge collector’.

It is beyond the scope of this work to go through every glyph I copied. I might include others as necessary, but two that did stand out as particularly interesting given that the Pyramids predate the time of Jesus by thousands of years: the symbol for Wedjat, which looks exactly like the Christian Cross, is the symbol for life. This is particularly interesting given that the geometric shape of the phosphorus (fire) group linking each base pair of our DNA to the helix ladder is often illustrated in the shape of a cross.

The other symbol that stood out is that of the Ankh, similar to the Cross but with a closed arc on the top of it, means ‘supported life’ or ‘life support’.

I will be referring in this example to the Pyramid of Cheops, the main Pyramid of the Giza complex, but principles apply to Pyramids world wide.

Pyramids are, at their core, enormous Cosmic Marimbas that adhere perfectly to the Pattern of the Emerald Tablet.

Instead of the music being derived by the motion of the mallets in your hand and the architecture of the Marimba, the frequencies generated by the Pyramids are activated within a perfect geometry that takes starlight, the light and magnetic fields of the closer Luminaries, the magnetic field of our Earth, and the action of water and blends them together as a frequency signature or signatures amplifying the result.

The inclusion of light in this overall equation is interesting as Light is unaffected by forces of gravity or the Coriolis effect of the rotation of the earth. As such remains pure and unadulterated in its arrival.

Book of Life

The frequencies being generated by the Pyramids if tuned and directed can be life-giving, sacred and from God or they can become a subtle energetic prison.

Let’s briefly look under the hood.

PYRAMID STRUCTURE

We understand the simplified shape of a Pyramid, but the Cheops Pyramid is different. The Cheops Pyramid is not a perfect square.

When looked at from above, it shows slight lines of indentation extending from the center of each base line where there is a slight divet moving up to the center. It reminds me of the Sator Square with the divet being the Tenet lines, a symbol that reverberates across pyramid building cultures in different ways through art, clothing and textiles.

The Pyramid itself is oriented perfectly with the magnetic poles of the Earth, and as such is uniquely situated to collect, resonate and amplify it’s signal.

Inside the Pyramid there are different tunnels and cavities, that collect starlight/microwaves and perfectly funnel it into the King’s Chamber whose architecture acts as an acoustic filter for the starlight/microwaves and also is connected to a second tunnel that is an outlet.

The Kings chamber is constructed with stacked and tuned Marimba-like monoliths. The roof of the Hall adjacent to it is lined with 43 looser fitting resonator monoliths that move down a passage way what is known as the Kings Hall which acts as a resonating chamber.

At the end of this hall’s decent is a horizontal passage that leads to the Queens Chamber which is thought to be a reactor chamber and has a dilute hydrochloric acid solution coming into it.

Recently discovered by sonar, an impossibly large framework of tube structures have been found under the Pyramid that resemble Marimba resonators, but are situated uniquely for this application.

At the end of the resonator Hall and in the opposite direction of the Queens tunnel there are passages that lead out, and then also under the Pyramid and into a subterranean chamber through which there are channels that bring in water from the Nile and add to the mix a piezoelectric effect from the flowing water through the bedrock channels.

The Chamber is situated in the middle of the large resonator tubes mentioned above, and from it witnesses have said you can see through the pyramid and see the expanse of the Milky Way, of Nut the Plasma Link.

My impression from accounts, is that the frequencies amplified in the subterranean chamber from the working of the pyramids shift the biology of our brains in a way that induces our brains, and our pineal gland in particular, to project a holographic overlay of sorts: inducing visions and sounds and, in some, a profound sense of nausea.

At the tip of the Cheops Pyramid, the capstone, was a metallic alloy of Silver and Gold and possibly other metals (Electrum) that had hieroglyphics written on it evoking for me earlier chapters where I speak about the writing on a space craft in the XFiles.

The name Electrum, of course, gives a hint at what it is good for.

From the tips of various pyramids scientists have been able to measure a slight flowing of photons coming from the tip and rising upward. This seems to indicate the presence of a strong toroidal/scalar field emanating outward from the pyramid and that excites this flow of photons. Electrum would have certainly been ideally suited to facilitate this flow.

The cap stone of the Cheops Pyramid is missing.

I followed ambient lore bout it for a while that indicated it was buried near the Dead Sea, but am not sure how credible it is. The point is that it is still being sought by a small group of people scattered around the globe and from various fields of study.

Scattered around the Giza complex and around the pyramids are Djed columns which are translated as ‘dielectric’ in the work on hieroglyphics I mention above, and physically were comprised of an insulator between two plates of a capacitor where regenerative power is stored. This matches our modern scientific understanding of the function of a capacitor in full.

Book of Life

These Djed columns were tuned and worked with the energetics of the Pyramid to broadcast frequencies around the complex. If these frequencies were tuned for good, they had the ability to heal. If tuned for evil, they had the ability to enslave a population.

The Cheops Pyramid Complex has been dated by weather patterns and scientific dating methods to be much older than originally suspected: with flood weathering dating back to between 10,000-15,000 years ago, making the complex itself potentially much older.

To my ears this brings up the destruction of Atlantis, the Younger Dryas period, and makes me doubt the exact dating of the Flooding in the Bible said to have happened around 2300 BC as well as the dating of the construction of the Cheops pyramid itself.

I wonder whether the pyramid complexes across the World were built by strictly human hand at all.

Were they installed globally by the Watchers before the Floods?

Given the context of the Luciferian Rebellion (the default of the Watchers in Genesis 6), were these technologies intentionally destroyed by the Floods? Was that the idea: to destroy technology in use for the benefit of the Planet before the rebellion/default as part of the quarantining after the rebellion?

Historically the modeled timelines of construction in the Cheops Complex would lead one to believe the Fallen Angels at some point tried to build, rebuild, alter or corrupt some pyramids for use as a tool of enslavement.

Remember that we are in a spiritual battle. Frequencies are a weapon in the battle for your consciousness.

Might the pyramids once again stand as a channel for Gods Universal Circuits?

God never wastes a good armature, I know that much.

XXVI | What is Life?

July 25, 2026

Let’s take what we have learned so far in the previous chapter/s, and take it for a spin, shall we?

This query will take the form of another thought experiment.

Humans have always sought to understand and describe the world around them, and language, at it’s core a symbolic framework, is used as a means for communication. Sometimes, to make things more understandable, we draw diagrams and pictures, which are also at their core symbolic representations.

In many old ‘mythologies’ surrounding our cosmology, the Earth is supported by various mythological characters who change names and forms depending on the cultural rubric they emerge from.

In one of my favorites, an acolyte asks his master what the Earth rests on. The master replies with a symbolic character from their cultural seed bag. Immediately the acolyte asks his Master what that symbolic character rests on if the Earth rests on it, and the Master replies with another symbolic character from their cultural seed bag.

Eventually, the symbolic character chosen by the master is a turtle: which is itself symbolic of something with an inside core and an outer shell. When the acolyte asks the master what the turtle rests on, the master says, ‘It’s turtles all the way down.’

This evokes the idea of a sort of fundamental pattern after which things repeat themselves, the same pattern we have discussed in previous chapters surrounding the Emerald Tablet. In the Cosmos, comprised of things both great and small, the same pattern repeats at all scales and is active at all scales.

Although the Tablet mentions the Sun as the ‘father’ of this process, it also says that everything we see in our World was created in this way. Our Sun, our star, in this context would also play the role of ‘moon’, the mother of this process, the reflector, for a lager system. In addition, the Emerald Tablet mentions that the Sun is the ‘father’ of this process, but also states that the 15 line work describes completely the Sun's operation. It creates this semantic inception that can be confusing if left unattended, and is unavoidable in symbolic communication.

But sometimes the confusions themselves can be instructive and point us to a larger truths, in the same sense that 'turtles all the way down' does.

A map is a symbolic representation of a larger truth. I remember learning about the Earth in elementary school and all the continent morphing attempts to represent on the plane of a piece of paper something that we were taught is actually spherical. Even our modern maps, being at their core symbolic, have had to alter the 'truth' in order that we can lay them on our tables, pin them on our walls and fold them in our our cars.

I have been working with two maps recently.

One is a map of the stars. It is one of those plastic concentric wheels contractions with a rivet at the center holding the pieces together and allowing you to 'tune' the map to the time of day and the time of year. Once it is turned correctly it can be used on any clear night to identify the stars and constellations in the sky. It's the kind of learning tool used in classrooms, produced by NASA, and also used by the curious outside the classroom, to learn the layout of the Heavens.

The other map I have is an extension of the 'flat earth' map where the flat Earth is in the center, with other planets, 'little planes', scattered around it.

When I look at this map, I see many 'planets' that are unfamiliar, some that represent planets we consider to be in our solar system, and other 'planets' that represent stars and constellations. They are all represented in a similar way to Earth on the map, as flat and typically roundish islands floating relative to one another within a larger area of water or ice or magma depending on the area. They are all encompassed by a larger boundary.

The origins of this map are unknown to me. And so there was a tendency initially to look at it as 'interesting'. As something to consider.

There is a smaller version of the flat Earth map showing just the Earth as three concentric rings with the continents we know as 'Earth' in the center and surrounded by an ice wall. I think it would surprise most people to know that in modern flight navigation software, this flat earth model and framework is the map they use to move people and goods across the globe every hour of every day. In these modeling systems, the flight paths themselves are mostly straight (conforming to an economy) as opposed to the ‘curvature’ of the flight we see on the headache inducing monitors they have inside head cushions on flights that enable passengers to monitor progress.

In both the smaller map of flat Earth and the larger map of flat Earth and surrounding ‘planets’, the north pole lies at the center. This is orientation is also used in the star map provided by NASA.

It occurred to me at some point in my journey of learning that the map of the stars, provided for sale at science museums all over the world, should correspond in some way to the larger flat map of the cosmos that includes the Earth in the center.

When I looked at first, the correspondence was hard to find until I realized that one map, looking from Earth, would actually be mirrored in the other version looking from Above. Once I took this into consideration, the correspondence is actually remarkably intact.

Included in this map are ‘planets’ that we know as revolving with us around the Sun, and others named after constellations and known stars. How can this, I thought? Is this a fly in the ointment of this as a cosmic model or does it hide a gem of understanding?

Although this model represents things in ‘Plan’ view, if we looked at it from the ‘Side’ view, would we see the relative elevations of planets like Jupiter and Mars and other of the ‘planets’ in our local Solar system somehow floating or suspended in a way that would enable their wandering? If this model were 3 dimensional, would the planets live in a different ‘shell’ than the stars, a separate concentric space like an old barometer? If that is the case, does that separate concentric space have it’s own unique properties?

Rather than a fly in the ointment of the flat cosmos map, the map itself which exists on the flat surface of a wall has real limitations in representing all aspects of a very complex multi-dimensional system.

I am reminded that all of these various ‘maps’ are symbolic renderings. Are there ‘maps’ we have lost that would explain more?

Book of Life

An interesting note at this point is that even with having excavated maybe one tenth of the full archaeological of Palenque, considered to be the center of the Mayan Pyramid spiral, it is clear to those studying and performing the excavation work and analysis that the pyramids of Palenque were built in a pattern that reflected the stars in the Heavens. Was each dedicated or perhaps calibrated for individual stars? Taking it a step further with the flat cosmos map correlating with the star map from NASA, could what we see above us in the sky represent a map of other lands below? Is that another hidden faceted Gem encrypted into the Emerald Tablet's notions of Above and Below?

As I mentioned before, the flat Earth map used in flight navigation software is only the central part of a larger system depicted in the flat cosmos map of 'Earth'. In the flat cosmos map, the Earth is depicted as two concentric rings and a central circle bordered by ice, and each with it's own continents and it's own Sun.

This is repeated in other 'planets' on the flat cosmos map. Sometimes there are three concentric circles bordered by ice or land in these systems, and sometimes less or more of them. Often the different rings of other concentrically organized 'planets' on the flat cosmos map include their own Suns and moons.

Perhaps uncoincidentally, the symbol for the Sun, the circle with a dot in the center, seems also to reflect a concentric arrangement, just as as it also reflects the notion of a turtle inside a shell.

Similarly, the geometry of a shape called the 'Sri Yantra', is a circular flat ancient base pattern that is a complex of two systems of triangular concentricities intersecting one another within a larger circular frame touched by some of the points of the triangles.

It is said in ancient wisdom systems to be a 'frequency modulator'. I have run physical experiments on several copper Sri Yantra prototypes and can confirm this is an accurate description: a real characteristic of this geometry.

Although the Sri Yantra is a 'flat' geometry, the field generated by it is spherical. This will become important as you continue to read.

At this point in the discussion, it focuses this pattern of concentric circles in various 'planets' of the flat cosmos map in an interesting new light.

Could these concentric patterns in the flat cosmos map be the way spherical energetic systems manifest on the ground: as circular ice walls or water or land masses? On a similar note, could energetic properties in these spherical and shelled concentric energetic systems produce conditions that could create a dome of ice around one or more of them? Could this provide a basis for understanding the energetic underpinnings the Firmament?

As mentioned in the chapter of this Book on Rainbows, might the conditions of our virtual separation, containment or quarantine be expressed as ‘firmaments’ and if so, might this icy dome be in force in other ‘planet’ systems of the flat cosmos map?

Whatever the case may be, these types of repeating patterns at many scales and across the known world are the result of a single Blueprint and a single Creator.

They are the fingerprints of God’s Hand that are visible for analysis, study and inspiration. They are an assurance of His Presence, His Authority, and His Design.

They are innate, unchanging, and built into the architecture of Creation.

When ‘Above’ and ‘Below’ are modeled as a sphere, they become membrane (Above), and central nucleus (Below) separated by a sort of moat of substance: be it water, air, aether or organelles.

Modeled in the system of a spherical Earth, they become the outer crust, the central crystal core, and the magma in between them. Similarly in this system, they manifest as the shells of Birkeland currents, which surround our ‘planet’.

This system is also modeled in the cells of our bodies as membrane, nucleus and all the stuff between them as well as in the structure of an atom having a nucleus with electron shells around it. A peach, onions, a tree also model this in the 3D for us.

God’s patterns reflect at every scale and remain symbolically coherent whether represented in 2D or 3D. Theoretically the model would be coherent and active in other higher dimensional spaces as well.

Book of Life

Merkabah.

One persistent symbolic representation across the arc history is that of the Merkabah which can be illustrated in 2D as the star of David.

The merkabah is the geometrical underpinning, the blueprint, of a Toroidal energy system. It is composed of two tetrahedral shapes mirrored and superimposed into one another such that if they were placed inside a sphere such that each tetrahedral point touches the outer shell of the sphere. In addition to points touching in the northern and southern poles of the sphere, creating an axis of rotation, other points touch at the 30 degree parallel/latitude of each hemisphere of the sphere.

Perhaps not coincidentally. if we were to map different ‘space ports’ around the globe they exist on or near the 30 degree parallel/latitude line. Is this a coincidence?

Each of the tetrahedrons in a merkabah rotate along the north/south axis in different directions.

In various spiritual traditions this dual rotating form is meditated on because it increases the depth of the mediation. In doing so, the center of the merkabah is envisioned to focus around the Heart, and radiates out like a donut around your body. This field, sometimes called an aura, can be seen by some as a tool for healing.

It is your energetic system. It is said to be a vehicle: your energetic vehicle. It is the energetic underpinning of your life.

This geometry, like the others, is repeated at all scales including, of course, that of the Sun. The Sun is an interesting lens through which to view the properties of a merkabah because we are able to view, in handsome detail, the movements of the sun and it’s sunspots.

Curiously, sunspots on the Sun cluster around the 30 degree parallel, the same location where the non-polar points of the merkabah would touch the edges of the sphere around it. When the sun sends out a solar flare, this flare is typically ejected from a sunspot at this latitude.

Although the Sun has a sort of cyclical metabolism that can be faithfully mapped on a graph as active and inactive periods, the emergence of sunspots or solar flares and their timing or locations on the surface of the Sun are remarkably difficult to predict. In this way the Sun has the hallmarks of a living system. It has a regular cyclical metabolism, but the particulars of when/where particular sunspots will manifest are difficult to find retrospectively or predict moving forward.

In a similar way, crystals self assemble from ambient parts and grow, and although that growth can be regulated in laboratory settings, the growing pattern of natural crystals are difficult to predict as they adapt around the conditions in their environment and grow accordingly. They also generate a spherical merkabah-like energetic field around them.

The occurrence of sunspots along the 30 degree latitudes of both hemispheres (as well as the prominence of energy coming out along the axis of rotation at the north and south poles) points to an energetic property of merkabah systems.

The points are the part of the merkabah that touch the outer membrane of the surface of the Sun, and this seems to make the area around those points, at those latitudes, energetically permeable on the surface. In my mind they create a sort of ‘Portal’ effect where the gravity of the Sun is less able to enforce it’s otherwise smoother outer spherical membrane. As a result particles, energy and radiation burst through.

This is interesting in light of the incidence of space ports along those same latitude lines on the 30 degree parallels of the Earth. After all, the Earth’s energetic toroid is shaped by the same base energetic patterns and forces as the Sun.

I want to remind the reader at this point that these systems are all the creation of God, the Lord of the Universe: of Adonai. They are the fingerprints of God’s Hand and demonstrate His Power, Agency, and Consistency in design.

The entire scope of the cosmos was created by God, and is His Domain.

His Energy is transmitted and repeated across all systems, and His command moves through and is captured by a myriad of different merkabah energetic systems at every scale: from an atom, to a human, to the Sun, to a galaxy.

In this way, everything is alive in Gods Radiance and because of it.

Book of Life

Once the ‘spark’ of life leaves, once the energetic merkabah collapses for example in an animal’s body, that animal’s body is no longer viable. Without the energetic impulse and living energetic merkabah body from God, the organism is no longer able to hold itself together energetically and begins to decompose into nutrients for other biological systems to consume: in the same way, even the stars supernova and die.

So to answer the question posed in the Title of this chapter, God is Life. The geometry of this Life is the merkabah and the field generated by it is a toroidal field.

If that is the case, why would our modern mainstream science tell a different story?

Would it make you feel more connected to your world or less to understand how God’s energy permeates everything?

What do the forces of darkness have to gain by making your sense of what it means to be alive smaller?

How would it serve evil to make you think you are separate or different from other merkabah energetic systems of life?

Would an effect of feeling less connected manifest as a service of self at the exclusion of service to the whole or to other parts?

Would it make you doubt the power and existence of the larger guiding Hand of God?

You bet your lifesavers. (translation: Yes.)

When spiritual and wisdom schools say that the Universe is alive, or that everything is alive, this is what they mean. While your pots and pans might not seem alive, the atoms inside them that have a merkabah energetic system, are.

What also should be clear at this point is that what exists because of the energetic impulse of God, is governed by the Will of God.

Coronal Mass Ejections and the Great Solar Flash

It should also be clear at this point that God is ultimately in control of the timing of anything the Sun does.

The Sun, in that sense, is a living merkabah energetic system that conforms to God's Will. The Sun is a reflection of God's Light, and has the energetic signature/s and properties given to it by God.

Because of the Grace of God, the operation of the Sun sustains the metabolic processes on Earth that keep us all alive. God gives the gift of Life through these coordinated movements of energy systems together.

In that respect, if God sends a signal to the Sun to supernova, the Sun will supernova. When God instead sends a signal to micronova, then similarly a micronova will occur.

We have discussed the catastrophic effects a micronova would have for Earth and it's inhabitants in various chapters of this Book, but particularly in the chapter about the Bowls of Wrath, as well as in the chapter about the Great Solar Flash.

We are living in times where unequivocally radical changes are unequivocally coming.

It has never been more important to plug into the machinery of life that is your birthright as a Child of God.

God's love will never expire, but in the matter of the present times, there will be a clearing of energies that harm the Children of God. Those who call on their Father and who choose Him will become redeemed by Him, and those who deny God or harm God's Children will perish.

The time is now to choose.

XXVII | Michelle

April 1, 1998

What I remember first is college, and being in love.

I remember long drives into the forest, looking through the mist and rain at the mossy forest green, and the reds and browns of the changed autumn leaves mostly already on the ground.

We were looking for any sign of Theodore's recent exit, or for any landmarks that would suggest his having passed - landmarks given by Teresa, a professional clairvoyant and friend from India, to help us sift through the rummage and the questions his disappearance left behind.

I remember the soft clouds of mist blanketing the grass in the meadow, dripping from the lichen in the forest, coming out of the manholes in the city; the mist stretching from my mouth on cold mornings, also pouring out of the exhaust pipe of Michelle's car. In retrospect it seemed to connect the city and her cars and her people in one unifying breath.

Connecting the broken pieces of disembodied lives in a city.

The pieces called businessman and bum, called actor/waiter and girl-child of a disenchanted mother, shopping for school clothes and perfume, stopping for lunch, and then driving home to the suburbs via the freeway, a steamy exhaust trailing the car.

Connecting the souls, trapped by the weight of their bodies, and their overcoats, and the clouds. Souls which otherwise would breach, but for the visible breath and the weighted shuffle of mufflers, woolen hats, umbrellas, and the dirty sleeping bags draped over the shoulders of the homeless.

Souls connected to people pretending to do their own thing.

Michelle, the love of my 19-year-old life, at the wheel of her mother's car - I forget what kind it was. I remember it was black. I remember how good it felt to put my feet on the dash, how the combined smell of Michelle's products permeated the air, how well the heater worked.

Observations indicating a propensity for life as a passenger, not a driver. Which suited me fine at that point in time. The feeling of being in someone else's responsibility was hypnotically relaxing. And these times, in the wake of Theodore's disappearance, felt crazy.

I remember the sound of the rain puttering and the windshield wipers marking out their tempo'd swoosh. I remember the way my soft, oversized, slightly faded dark blue overcoat felt like a slightly cool, soon-to-be-warm bed on a cold day. I can still hear the soft, soothing timbre of Michelle's voice, Michelle's driving, Michelle's hand just off the stick grabbing mine like the inanimate object a hand becomes without presence or consciousness to fill it; sensing my departure, squeezing me back into the present.

And then I think about Theodore.

I first heard he had disappeared while on fall break. I was working with a coalition doing volunteer work for different social service agencies during the day. talking with city people, rainy crazy people, long and angry poor forgotten people with dirt-stained polyester hand-me-downs and Goodwill shoes - their funny colorful hats and torn-up novels. Wet people on the cold and misty streets.

We'd just talk. Sometimes small talk - about the rain or public transit. Sometimes they would tell stories, and I would just listen: about children, and all the ways to make ramen, and getting beat up. About the lunatic girlfriends, the loser boyfriends wanted in four states. About how he rapes her sometimes, but it's just because he's angry. Sometimes they would laugh, as if it were a joke. And sometimes I laughed, because I understood it was humor, a release of steam. But I had an escape. I could go home.

And I did. Every night we would re-assimilate with the other students and coalition members into group activities, conversation, and bad institutional peanut butter/jelly and canned spaghetti.

Eventually we would fall asleep in our dirty sleeping bags on the cold, hard linoleum of the basement in an old church, in a neighborhood adjacent to convenience stores with surveillance cameras, prostitutes wandering the concrete jungle, their pimps in low-riders and heavy rings waiting inside the warehouse blinking "Furniture" in neon reds and oranges. Plywood in the windows. Broken beer bottles and syringes on the sidewalks.

We were protected inside the locked church.

Book of Life

It was basically the young liberal's version of "Basic Training," but in some ways it was like the hood version of Disneyland.

We were expected to feel the appropriate emotions.

For one whole week, the rich kids from the expensive liberal arts college immersed themselves in the context of street life, violence, poverty, and drugs. We would postulate determining factors, hypothesize solutions, all the while pulling the latest gear out of our REI backpacks.

And then we were all sent back home.

It wasn't until my return to that life that I heard my friend Theodore was missing. It was like a shockwave of dead serious.

We organized search parties, spoke with police officers and then, after exhausting all the formal methods, retreated into the arms of clairvoyance, whose advice was elusive, exacting, and in a strange way comforting. It took more into account than statistics and numbers, and we just wanted our friend back, and Teresa offered that possibility.

Theodore was treated as if he were alive by Teresa. As if there wasn't anything better we could do than keep looking.

The police were doing everything that could be done. That they had officers on it. They had added officers to the case. From here on out it was just a waiting game for us in many ways. We understood they were really trying.

Teresa gave us concrete vagaries: duck pond. Forest north of the city. One eighty-five. A man. An eight-year-old boy. Bike trails. Parker and Ed. A trailer park.

And so we put together a tribe of select people. We were the people who loved Theodore most.

Still, on some level, I had a feeling we just needed something else to do. Something to take us away, even briefly, from the lives we claimed were ours. Something to spice things up.

We were young.

It was an excuse to give our worn minds a break from the usual parade of college life's occupations, preoccupations, and self-conscious paranoia. And in some recess of our cluttered post-pubescent minds, we were entirely aware of this, and it terrified us.

Still, some basic survival instinct kept the wind of cultural numbness from gaining momentum. So we were kind to ourselves. In the interest of survival, the sense of grief and sadness and horror at the disappearance of a good friend - a happening for which our minds had no a priori, no context - was allowed to proliferate.

This was months ago now.

Theodore's funeral followed the discovery of his bloated body in the river, exactly 35 hours after Teresa described the whole scene to us over the phone.

She called because she could feel he was cold, and drugged, and that they were lowering him into water. She told us he had passed over, and that he was in a better place. With God. And that he was grateful and surrounded by LOVE.

At this point, trips into the forest were rhetorical.

Looking for signs of a body already found exactly two miles from the main area where we had been led to look. It was an alternative to B-grade movies and Christmas-light day-shoppers and Salvation Army Santas making less than minimum wage and watching the clock.

An alternative to the overly polite salespeople, the three-piece-suited greed that smelled like espresso and frosted donuts.

Michelle's car was a safe place to experience the season from a distance - the distance between you, the windshield, and the unmoved outside rain coming down from the muted sky. We cruised down tangents of park roads, small talk and silence. Almost shielded from the memory of a missing college student, last seen riding his blue bloated body down the river, and a month before that, the blue granny bike we always teased him about.

Shielded from the reality of mist. Mist blanketing the grass in the meadow, dripping from the lichen in the forest, from the gutters in the city. Mist stretching from my mouth on cold mornings, pouring from the exhaust pipe of Michelle's car.

Book of Life

And so we were left to pull together the pieces. Police said he was seen on camera getting into a white Ford E-350 van with his bike. They said a young boy helped him in, and that there was no plate on the car.

By where Teresa told us to look, we visited a school, and one of the teachers talked about a boy who stopped showing up around the time Theodore went missing. She gave us his address on the down-low. Said she could get into a lot of trouble.

We knocked on the door and looked around, but only saw a truck - no van. At first no one answered. Then a man who smelled horrible came to the door. We told him we were looking for our friend and described him, described his bike. The man said he “didn’t know nothing,” and to get off his property.

We found Theodore’s beat-up bike crumpled down a ravine on the way back to the school - which by that time was closed and darkness was falling. We went home, planning to head back out there, but there was something about the vibe.

And then a couple days later, Teresa called and said he was leaving his body.

But the point is we were right there. We saw his bike.

Right there.

We just didn’t know how close we were. I wonder to this day if he heard me. If he was at that man’s house and heard me.

It haunts me.

Teresa said he felt great shame in his last days. That he was, under duress and drugs, made to do things to the boy that he sorely judged himself for, and that the judgment he placed on himself led his spirit to not want to be found.

This man who would go to high schools and talk to boys about respecting girls and that “no means no”; he was made to do things he could not forgive himself for.

They called his death a suicide even though there were restraint marks on his wrists and arms and neck, and no bruising from supposedly falling off the bridge they said he jumped from.

Theodore had visited me the summer before. I was staying at the beach working. We walked the beaches for hours and talked. And I remember thinking how refreshing our conversations felt.

My college had a way of bringing out the worst in its students.

Maybe not intentionally, but there were jokes about it. Conversations steeped in ‘woe-is-our-lot’, despite the fact that we were attending an expensive liberal arts college.

There was this weird collection of happenstances that opened my eyes. I was with my sister for a weekend in Seattle, and we went to a grocery store.

In the first aisle she sees someone she thinks she might recognize from college, by chance, many miles away. Within three minutes, they know more about each other than I knew about my college roommate, have exchanged contact information, and have plans to reconnect.

The very next aisle, I spot someone from the college I went to. We avoid looking at one another as long as humanly possible. At some point, inevitable eye contact is made.

She says, “Hey.”

I say, “Hey”.

She says, “College, right?”

I say, “Yeah.”.

“Yeah,” she says.

The air was cleared at that point and we both continued on our ways.

Theodore was different, he put his walk before his talk. He was real.

We talked about God, and the sense of mission we both felt around how to spend this mystery and gift of life.

Book of Life

We both expressed concern about the radical zeitgeist, especially at our school, and how even though we spent time trying to make a difference in the world, the folks we were working hand in hand with were not always folks we respected.

We talked about the notion of speaking truth, and bravery.

On some level I felt I needed to do something to make his life and his death mean something.

And so I started reviewing the notes we took from Teresa again. We made maps.

Eventually, when a pattern started becoming clear, we went back to the forest.

There were these little communities of houses scattered around, and the ones most interesting to us ended up being near the Waldorf School. It was near where his bike was found, and near the house we'd gone to that felt so hinky before.

There were pieces we would need to put together a story, and they all revolved around the white E-350 he'd been seen getting into. We drove around looking for it up and down little forested roads.

Michelle saw it first. A big yard with lots of cars - like someone who does car repair on the side - and a white E-350 was parked at the edge of one of the rows.

We drove up, and as we approached the house, a guy came out and asked how he could help us.

"My friend and I are moving to Ohio, and we've been looking to buy an E-350. We haven't had much luck finding any, so when we were driving past and saw the one you have, we thought we'd stop and ask about it."

"Well, funny you should ask. This man came in about eight weeks ago - needed to sell his van to get out of town. Kinda the opposite of you folks. He gave me a good price, and it runs good, but I've been avoiding getting to it because it's filthy."

"Mind if we take a look? How much are you looking to let it go for?"

"Well…" he paused, "if you were gonna take it as-is, I'd go pretty low. Like I said, it runs good, but it's gonna need a wash-down and maybe some new panels."

When he opened the door, the full weight of what we were looking at hit me like a wall of moist, putrid air. The first thing I noticed - other than the smell - was the stiff muddy puddles of crusty stains on the dark green carpet lining the van. The color made it hard to distinguish what it was, but it was everywhere in little puddle splotches.

The panels had been torn out completely, leaving a cold metal shell. No windows. Headache rack separating the back of the van was closed and had a padlock on it. And the part that made the blood run from my face once I put it together later, was that all the doors leading from the back of the van - the side doors and the back doors - were jammed in a way that you could get in, but you could not get out.

At the time, we were looking for objects or clothing or rags that might have been left behind, but there was nothing except the fact that the cleaning lady had not come through to detail the crusty carpet.

The smell was unbearable.

We thanked the guy and told him we were interested and would be in touch. He gave us his name and number, and once we pulled out of the driveway I wrote down the address and Michelle marked it on her map. We headed back in silence.

“What do we do now?” she wondered out loud.

“That was weird, right?” I asked.

“Super,” she said.

Silence. Both of us deep in thought.

And then it hit me.

“Oh my gosh, stop the car!” I said.

“Why?”

“Just stop the car.”

Michelle pulled over.

Book of Life

“None of the doors worked from the inside.”

“Yeah… and? What does that mean to you?”

“Think about it. If I wanted to kidnap you, I’d need to be able to get in, but I’d need you to not be able to get out…”

“Holy shit,” she said. “What do we do?”

“We go to your mom’s house, and we call the police.”

I don’t know if what we did made a difference for Theodore. I want to believe it did. Would he feel vindicated? Does it matter?

What I come to, in the obsessively looped cycles of trying to make sense, is that our love for Theodore made a difference in the world.

That it was LOVE we felt. the idea that it was boredom or escapism are things I told myself to shield the pain about loosing Theodore. It was Love. Real Love. Not romance, not friends with benefits.

There was nothing I ever wanted from Theodore but his company and his laughter.

This LOVE, it inspired us to keep going, and eventually led to the capture of his killer.

Theodore’s blood, it turned out, was only one of six people’s blood found in that van. So at least four families, not including Theodore’s, would have closure.

But most of all, we did our part, with LOVE through - and despite - the foggy, drippy mist that covered us all that fall.

XXVIII | Sacred Cow

July 27, 2026

The extent to which our history, our sense of God, and our understanding of the natural world has been altered and manipulated cannot be understated.

As the X Files reminds us, “a lie is best when hidden between two truths.”

To those who search for knowledge with an insatiable thirst, this presents both a deep frustration, and an equally deep challenge.

We often take the word of authorities on different subjects in our personal attempts to learn, but fail to realize that they are just reassembling the same interwoven lies and truths: rearranging them and adding different curtains.

It is a rare member of the ‘authority’ class who would sacrifice their name and income, even if hit with a lightning bolt of true inspiration, to do battle with their peers and institutions to bring forth a novel paradigm or interpretation.

And then there are the concerns of daily life which, even if we had the desire to seek, distract from an estimable pursuit of Truth worthy of the capital T.

One might question, if so many ancient and modern works have been edited by one set of hands or another for this reason or another over time, whether a sense of Truth is even discernible at this point.

Those whose desire is such that they manage to steal their devotion against the onslaught of concerns and persevere in achieving a pure and devoted pursuit spend their lives looking for it.

They will tell you that the Truth cannot be distinguished in a myopic pursuit of one section of the library or other. If we stick to any one volume or field at the exclusion of others, we run the risk mentioned above of entering a majority report echo-chamber confirming how we want the world to look instead of how it actually is: regurgitating the same small set of information, perhaps with a garnish from an adjacent field, but in a different order.

Book of Life

I remind myself that Truth is higher than any work of man, including any notions of religious culture he might assemble and put forward.

We struggle to wrap our minds and hearts around God's mysteries, and are inspired and uplifted by this effort. While God is immutable, eternal and unchanging, our conception of God has certainly evolved over the long arc of history, and will continue to.

Over the course of my journey as a student, my 'world-view' has been significantly rewritten many times.

Preceding each, I noted an internal hesitance. A mixture of incredulity and anxiety: manifested as resistance, an internal list of reasons this is dumb, and sometimes an eye-roll thrown in for dramatic flare.

But these new ideas would follow me like a bad song you can't get out of your head: persistent, gnawing. A pressure building of unanswered questions.

In my calmer moments, written-on-scratch-paper curriculum develop encompassing a wide swath of hopefully pertinent books from a variety of cultures, epochs and fields of study.

Each layer of information presents a sort of transparent overlay. On it's own, any one overlay doesn't look like much, but when added with others, a larger picture emerges; something that approaches big T Truth, and it changes the way I see everything.

Sacred Cows

I want to return to the subject of big T Truth, but first want to introduce the notion of a 'sacred cow'.

A 'Sacred Cow' is a practice or idea or object or person the engagement of which is inanimate. Something that we believe is serving us or acting on our behalf but actually cannot serve us because it is inadequate. We find sacred cows difficult to spot and then even more difficult to let go of because they fill a void that we deny exists.

The phrase itself hearkens back to the early worship by the local Bedouin tribes, before the Exodus, of a God named Yahweh near Mount Horeb which was at that time volcanically active.

At this time in history, different Gods were predominantly local to a nation-state or tribal area. The Egyptians had their Gods, the Ammonites had their Gods, the Hittites had their Gods. Because of the diaspora of people through trade and travel, worship practices of these different national or tribal Gods would reach other countries, and sometimes they would be embraced into the growing pantheon of acceptable God outlets, and other times they would cause strife.

The Bedouins, some of whom were Children of Abraham but had moved away from their roots in the Abrahamic tradition and had come to worship other Gods including a fiery God they called Yahweh whose visage was manifest in the fires and lava flows of Mount Horeb. Rituals to Yahweh revolved around building statues representing this deity (in the form of a Bull) and worshiping this deity with offerings and sacrifices to appease Him.

At that time, the Children of Israel and Abraham were scattered among other nations but had no nation of their own. They were surrounded always by people worshiping pantheons and other Gods and by the practices of those people many of which were explicitly outlawed in God's Covenant with Abraham.

In places like Egypt, they were taken as slaves.

The story of Moses and the people he lead into the desert and eventually into the 'promised' land of 'milk and honey' is the story of the development of the local/tribal God Yahweh, the fiery, angry God embodied as Mount Horeb, into one of the most sophisticated and beautiful conceptions of God as a Universal Loving Father Creator for all people who are all His Children as distilled progressively and perfected by His prophets.

Book of Life

Holy Moses

Moses was highly influenced by his roots in the Abrahamic tradition and by the Kenites, a people with deep, sacred and evolved spiritual roots having come out of the Melchizedek wisdom schools. Worth the dig, if curious.

Moses' challenge was that he had to lead a kindred population enslaved, and mired by other practices and superstitions, back to the God of Abraham.

Moses determined to co-opt the name of the God in use by his strayed brethren, but evolve it back towards the One Living God.

In this way, Moses lead an enslaved and rugged population entrenched in superstition and idolatry and turned them into a proud people who were able to escape their enslavement and over time evolve the 'jealous' but Living God of Moses into something sublimely inspired and novel.

Moses taught that God requires obedience.

He imbued the people he was leading with a larger sense that this Living God was calling them by name, that they are God's Chosen, but only ifn so far as they continue to keep His Commandments. He strove to infuse them with a sense of a God who rewards those who are faithful, and taught that God's Chosen should not worship other Gods or Idols without expecting to arouse the Wrath of God.

In the time when Moses was receiving the first Tablets from God with His Commandments, the people under Moses' leadership became fearful in his absence, and when he did not come back on the exact day expected, they reverted to the old ways, assembled all their gold, melted it down, and built a statue to Yahweh the Bull and sacrificed to it in order to appease him: the metaphorical and literal idol worship of a sacred cow: in defiance of Abraham, of Moses, and in defiance of the Commandments of God.

Can you blame Moses for his focus and framing of God as 'jealous'? Does that mean actually He is?

From this point onward, the stories of the Old Testament follow the journeys, conquests and captivities of this People as they assemble together and continue to struggle between the contracting superstitious practices of idolatry and blood sacrifice and the expanding conceptual distillation of devotion and love to the One Living God of Love, as embodied through His prophets and creed to spread the message of His Love to others.

In the process of this cyclical backsliding and inspired recovery, some of the later historical records chronicled in the Old Testament were doctored at different points in time for various reasons by the priests and scribes of the day, with a focus for the changes having been made during their time in Babylon and when they felt the need to rally and inspire the Children of Israel.

Even so, hints of the original histories they doctored still linger in earlier writings in the Old Testament that were extant and harder to modify unnoticed, in adjacent Biblical works like the Apocrypha, in the historical writings of Josephus and others, and in ‘minority reports’ like the one in the Urantia Book.

One of those doctored stories is a personal favorite that I have derived much inspiration from: that of King David.

This story is said to have been doctored in order to establish a ‘divine right of decent’ for David’s Judahite Kingship. A part of the original story of how his immediate followers made him King remains in tact in Chronicles 1 Chapters 10-28 of the Old Testament and in contradiction to the story in Samuel. Samuel, in fact, did not write (not did Moses for that matter), and was not followed around with a press detail. The writers of the Book of Samuel required the tradition of Saul and Samuel as a background to establish precedent for the kingship of David. According to this account the Psalms were written by a variety of priests and scribes and attributed to David.

There are other examples as well, beyond the scope of this writing.

It brings into serious question the reliability of the Bible and specifically parts of the Old Testament as an accurate historical record.

Would that invalidate it as an inspired spiritual work?

When we read about the 7 days of creation, many will roll their eyes and talk about the hundreds of millions of years of evolutionary history, but do not see the remarkable coherence of his account.

Moses was not an evolutionary biologist, and had no access to information about the evolution of life on this planet, yet his inspired account of it bears remarkable fidelity to our scientific musings.

Inspired.

The account of Adam and Eve in the Bible is often misconstrued as meaning that they were the ‘first humans’, and nothing could be further from the truth. In Genesis 1, humankind was created in God’s image, but with Adam, something special happened.

Book of Life

Genesis 2 starts out framing the situation after God's seventh day where He rested. In 2:7, Adonai formed 'a person' and breathed into his nostrils the 'Breath of Life, so that he became a Living Being.'

It becomes clear that the Bible itself concedes that although humankind was created in the IMAGE of God, after God had a day off to think about it, to Adam He gave His Indwelling Spirit when Adonai breathed the Breath of Life into Adam's nostrils.

Adam is distinguished apart from humankind in the Bible as a 'Living Being'. I speak more about what this means in the Chapter of the Book of Life 'What is Life'.

The minority reports in the Apocrypha and the Urantia Book suggest instead that their DNA was introduced into Earth by God for the purpose of upgrading our genetic architecture.

This would make sense in the context of Noah and the Flood as detailed in the Chapter on Rainbows, and the Rainbow Covenant, but is also a very different story than the one we focus around in Genesis.

Some who still clench to the sacred cow of every word in the Bible being in all ways accurate about everything will struggle with this notion.

As our concept of God developed, we stopped seeing Him as jealous and more as a concerned and loving Father. This is the real story being told: the development of a beautiful revelation of God over time.

At each plateau of revelation, there is a tendency to believe we have arrived at a fixed science and to frown wearily at anyone who suggests the journey is not over and that there is still more terrain to cover.

We read the accounts of the Bible and as a culture have struggled with these apparent paradoxes, needing it to represent an accurate historical account as well as a sublime spiritual revelation. Sticking to a need for consistency will not allow your heart to understand the implied struggle that Moses faced and marvel at the evolution of our grasp of God when it arrives at the merciful and loving God captured in Isaiah.

A sacred cow, even if held out of a sense of loyalty to God's Word, is still a sacred cow.

What if instead we choose to revere the Bible as an accumulative Spiritual account, written by many many blessed hands, that chronicles the most evolved, sophisticated and accurate conception of God, the miracle of Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit ever produced?

We must recognize at this point is that God's Hand is at work in all ways and in all things. When we see the word 'edited' we think something sinister happened, something unGodly.

Many many times, as with the sequestration of the Apocrypha, there was manipulative intent.

But If the Apocrypha had not been separated out, would it have been as easy for myself and others to become aware of the split-tongue, politically driven nature of the administration of God's Children vis a vis the Church?

What if, in addition to being suspicious of the 'authorities' on the matter and looking and thinking for ourselves, we realize that something beautiful might also be at play? What if God delights in seeing His Children so captivated by Him that they reach for the mysteries with great devotion and past different historical stumbling blocks that have been set in our way?

I have written different accounts of my life, and have struggled as a writer to remain true to the facts of what happened, as well as to the deeper spiritual truth of what happened.

The absolutely true-to-facts account of events would be boring to read as well as to write. It would jump around in time and context, and would inspire no one.

It would miss entirely the core emotion that is compelling any writer to write in the first place.

What if we allowed the Bible the space to breathe in this way as well?

I cherish the inspiration I have garnered thinking about King David as portrayed in Samuel and reading the Psalms attributed to him. Knowing that things might not have happened in exactly this way in history does not diminish one bit the jewels of wisdom and comfort I have received from his story.

Idol Worship

Book of Life

In this time, many of us hear about ‘idol’ worship, blood sacrifice or the worship of sacred cows and think of it as a thing of the past, but do not understand the depth of its meaning and it’s evolving implications in the present day.

The notion of worship evokes people reverently bowed, but also encompasses other expressions. One of the ways I worship God is by studying spiritual works the natural world He created: seeking his Fingerprint in the world around me. I prioritize this quest over other things like having a nice car, or gaining other worldly markers of success. Others express worship by ministering to the poor or the sick, or in contemplation or prayer, or by serving their families or friends.

These areas of focus for worship all glorify and lift up God’s Works and His Children. In terms we have spoken in before, these expressions of worship make the miracle of the One, by merging with the Will of God through the Holy Spirit of Christ inside you, and channeling it into good works and expressions of love on Earth.

In this way we act as bright beautiful mirrors reflecting the love of God, and our energy fields act as both as beacons and grounding for His Love.

To worship is to focus on something with reverence and to give it prominence over other things.

When instead of focusing our attention and curiosity on God and His Precepts and on good works, we prioritize making more money, or getting ahead, or serving our own personal desires and interests, our energy field is no longer reflecting the Living Field of God, and is in that way dead. God want us to succeed but He also wants to help direct our success as an expression of Love in the world. We think we can force Gods Hand, speed things up, take a short cut, just this once...

Instead of the field of your energetic Torus being fueled by and radiating the prime Energy of God channeled into your life, your energy field loops into itself and lives off the raw metabolic processes fueled by what you in all ways consume.

But no matter how much you consume or what you consume, without God, it will never feel like enough. This is because our bodies were built by God to receive His Energy and reflect it. When the radiant nutrient of God is absent, nothing can substitute for it.

That does not keep people from trying, and in this process of filling that hunger with things inadequate, people find themselves doing nasty, evil things to get to the next plateau, the next thing that will make them finally feel satisfied.

And satisfaction never arrives, which eventually spills out in rivers of complaining about this or that. About how horrible things are, and completely missing their own role in the horror.

Even worse, we have become accustomed culturally, when hearing complaints, to agree or sympathize with the complainers cause. This not only prevents meaningful change and learning, it justifies and validates the state of complaining and protest, instead of encouraging gratitude, prayer and humility in the face of challenges, or a deeper investigation and soul searching.

Idolatry comes out of this vacuum of dissatisfaction as a substitute for God's light.

We idolize and follow people, entertainers, professions, behaviors and things that peak our fancy or make us feel good for a time.

Until they no longer do, and then we must move to the next side-road distraction.

We also idolize ideas that support and normalize different ways we choose to fill the energy void that not connecting with God leaves.

As God's Children in a world where Gods touch can be obscured by the leaking sands of history and culture, it is imperative that we find the will to seek Him, and the diligence to grow and learn through the obstacles instead.

It is God's Delight to see us reaching for Him: to see us thinking and feeling and considering with devotion. It is His Pleasure to see us changing the way we live and interact in a desire to model His Love in our lives.

We must never stop growing in our understanding of God, and opening to the revelations of His Truth and Mysteries. In this maze of inquiry a cosmic weave emerges where the allure of power and worldly success wanes in the face of the Revelation of God in our lives.

Ultimately, the message of this God's Revelation is simple: in the Eyes of God, you are perfectly made.

Book of Life

God created you as a unique and important reflection of His Love. He took care when He created you. You are like no one else, and there is a reason for that. You are an important piece of His Puzzle. He created you because there was something He had in mind for you that no one else can do in the same way. There is a way that he made you, a part of His Spark that only you carry that gives you a unique capacity to respond to the circumstances of your life in ways that would not occur to others.

Over the course of your life, God has wanted you to discover this special quality, and has guided you in ways that you might not have understood at the time towards events and circumstances that would nurture the gift that you are to the world around you.

Sometimes there are things we have done or way we have been that prevent us from seeing that Light. And in order to clear those away, it is important we atone and ask for forgiveness from God and from those we hurt.

When we are able to understand the Light we carry (and the Light carried by others) and begin to nurture and connect to it’s Source, a veil lifts that enables us to better understand and contextualize the once heavy burden of ambient judgments and impressions of the crowd.

It liberates our focus towards engaging our world positively and with Love.

This is humility.

Humility understands the complexity of existence, it understands the limits of human perception, it appreciates the Light that we cannot see, and it offers in place of judgment or fear an open Heart and compassion.

This is how the wind moves mountains, how water carves out rock, and it is how God will redeem you into the Perfect Seed of His Creation.

XXIX | I am Lilith.

October 19, 2026

This is another plot shift I was not expecting.

In my service of bringing you the Truth, I must bring those Truths to the table that are easy for me to understand, as well as those which are difficult: I am the servant of Truth as it is being revealed to me.

The ‘reveal’ part is important because it is essential to understand that some of what I am saying here I did not know a week ago, and has been as surprising for me as it will be for you.

When it was initially revealed to me that I was the Christ Messiah, the assumption that we all made, myself included, is that I am the second coming of Jesus.

But that is not the case. What is happening now is different.

Christ Messiah means Anointed One. We have all been entrenched in this idea of the ‘Second Coming of Christ’, myself included. I am the Christ Messiah, the Anointed One, but I am not the Christ Micheal.

I AM Lilith.

I do have to say, this particular revelation was initially horrifying and confusing, but then I began to ask some questions and become curious.

Following the logic and my curiosity has relieved some of the intellectual burdens of this quest, but also seems to have come with revelations that were personally and emotionally difficult to bear.

These writings are about healing a great and original wounding, and I must look outside of my personal comfort in order to share healing with you all.

We have to understand, as we have discussed before, that the agenda of those who were instrumental in organizing the cannons for the Roman Catholic Church carefully manipulated the teachings in those cannons to hide certain truths that challenged the powers in place.

‘This is a great product’, they said,. ‘How can we steer it?’

Book of Life

What I ask myself today is what happened to the Female Aspect of Divinity?

We seem to have a well stocked cultural library of the Patriarchs of the Jewish and Christian faiths, but few women are raised up in the same way.

It’s as if the Sonship of God were a coin on a table with only one side visible.

To be clear, this is not intended to raise up a particular cultural flagship of ‘Feminism’, but instead to engage both sides of the Divinity Equation in a real way.

We have a sense the story of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, but even this story has some minority reports that might prove elucidating.

Enter Lilith.

The earliest roots of the name Lilith appear in Sumerian and Akkadian texts - such as the class of wind spirits and female demons known as lilītu and ardat lilī - as well as early references in works like the Sumerian epic poem Gilgamesh and the Huluppu-Tree.

These figures were imagined as winged nocturnal entities or storm/wind spirits dangerous to infants and pregnant women.

Interestingly, a similar lore exists in Mayan culture regarding the planet Venus, such that pregnant women are told to avoid going out when Venus is visible at night.

The Hebrew word lilit appears only once in the Bible, in Isaiah 34:14, within a prophecy describing the desolation of Edom.

And then finally, in texts like the Babylonian Talmud and later medieval literature - most notably the Alphabet of Ben Sira - Lilith transformed into a distinct mythological character: Adam’s first wife.

According to this legend, Lilith was made from the same soil as Adam. She refused to submit to him in the way he wanted, and subsequently flew out of the Garden of Eden and headed to the Apsu: to Africa.

In this same tradition, it is said that God made Eve from the rib of Adam in order that his mission continue and for his loneliness after Lilith had gone. The mission, as spoken about in earlier chapters, was to provide a genetic uplift to humanity directly from the DNA of God.

The issues between Lilith and Adam did not seem to focus around simple domestic arguments; instead, they represented a fundamental power struggle over equality, gender roles, and bodily autonomy.

When Lilith left, it is said that God sent three angels to bring her back but Lilith refused to return.

Just as Lilith flees Adam because she refuses to be treated as an inferior partner, Inanna punishes Dumuzi because he assumes he can rule alone in her absence and fails to acknowledge her sovereignty.

In this ancient story of Inanna's descent into the Underworld, Inanna travels to the realm of the dead, ruled by her sister Ereshkigal, and is killed and hung on a hook by her sister.

Inanna manages to escape back to the living world with the help of the gods but must send someone in her stead.

She discovers that her husband Dumuzi has not mourned her.

Instead, he is sitting lavishly dressed and enthroned, acting as though nothing happened.

Enraged by his indifference, Inanna casts the "look of death" upon him and hands him over to the underworld demons to take her place in the underworld.

Geshtinanna Dumuzi's sister, as well as Inanna, are overcome with grief and mourn Dumuzi deeply.

An agreement is eventually reached where Dumuzi only spends half the year trapped in the Underworld, while Geshtinanna voluntarily takes his place for the remaining six months.

Keep in mind that the name of the oldest female human skeleton found in Africa is not named 'Eve' but instead named 'Lucy'. Was this a hat tip by someone who knew about an alternate story?

As it happens, Lucy has been used as the crux of a dating argument for anthropologists as the oldest known skeleton of a homo sapiens, but in more recent times this notion has been debunked.

Book of Life

In 2019, scientists re-analyzed two fossilized skulls found in the Apidima Cave in southern Greece. The findings shattered the traditional timeline of human expansion. One of the skulls, Apidima 1, was securely dated to 210,000 years ago and identified as Homo sapiens.

Previously, conventional wisdom held that Homo sapiens did not successfully leave Africa until roughly 70,000 to 50,000 years ago. Apidima 1 proved that humans were present in Europe more than 130,000 years earlier than previously thought.

In addition a landmark study led by researchers at UCLA found that up to 19% of the genetic ancestry in certain West African populations (such as the Yoruba and Mende) comes from an unknown, archaic hominin population.

This ghost lineage diverged from the ancestors of modern humans and Neanderthals roughly 625,000 years ago, only to interbreed with modern humans in Africa approximately 43,000 years ago.

These discoveries prove that modern humans did not simply replace other hominins in a vacuum.

Instead, our ancestors repeatedly met, lived alongside, and absorbed multiple distinct, ancient human species across different continents. It opens up questions about the diaspora of human beings, and this notion of migration having come ‘out of Africa’.

Geneticists have proven that ‘Eve and Adam’ were not the first or only humans alive.

Rather, they are individuals whose specific haploid lineages survived the genetic drift over generations. Prehistoric African haploid lines show intense long-term geographic isolation.

Haploid DNA is DNA that comes from the Mother. Haploid DNA analysis within Africa has been at the center of a scientific revolution, transforming our understanding of human origins. The unique haploid DNA (mtDNA and Y-DNA) of those archaic ghost lineages appears to have been completely lost or out-competed.

Instead of a single localized African root, these deeply divergent maternal and paternal lines confirm the "weakly structured stem" model.

In this model, multiple regional populations across the African continent carried distinct haploid variations for hundreds of thousands of years, occasionally exchanging genes through ancient networks rather than bottle-necking into one tribe.

This means that while modern Africans carry physical traits and nuclear DNA inherited from these ghost species, the "maternal and paternal labels" on our genes remained dominated by the Homo sapiens lineages.

Ultimately, haploid DNA research shows that Africa was not a stagnant starting block, but a complex, continent-wide web of distinct human worlds that separated, adapted, and continuously merged.

This would all fit with and support the notion of Lilith.

Any process of revelation might leave us with a ladder to Truth, but some of the rungs are not always completely filled out as we would wish them to be. When reading what is often a symbolic language that is revelatory and unfamiliar, it is easy to mistake partial information for the Full Monty.

I am learning this with you.

In the process of learning we must sometimes push against the membrane of our existence in ways that are sometimes ungraceful and awkward.

These writings are both a disclosure and an expose. They are my penance, and at times part of a larger process that has brought me to the edges of my own abyss.

I am not coming to you in glory, but instead in understanding and empathy.

The struggle between Adam and Lilith, or between Dumuzi and Inanna, resonate deeply and difficultly in my heart and soul, and are struggles I have had to face throughout my lifetime.

When I was born, I was neutered immediately: figuratively, metaphorically and literally.

The story of my life could be seen from the lens of fighting against that initial expression of God’s Will from my first moments and then later tearing the lace off my clothing as an infant toddler, and later becoming a tomboy and then a lesbian.

Book of Life

At the same time, my life could be seen through the lens of finding purpose and repentance – living in poverty, often by choice and in deference to experience, service to others, study and knowledge.

That search for purpose initially led me to working for ‘underdog’ organizations, but in retrospect I have come to understand them as the Red Herrings of Charity.

I have learned that the the plight of the underdog has been co-opted by the Adversarial Forces in ways many would not imagine.

Don’t get me wrong, there are VERY legitimate causes and reasons to give and share with those less fortunate and with your neighbors, but the organizations around these ‘charities’ are feasting themselves on the proceeds more than than is being granted to the actual intended benefactor or towards the completion of their missions.

In hindsight my work on Dianas Blue Roses can also be seen in the light of penance: a truly unfunded labor of repentance and love with a business model that flies in the face of these multimillion dollar NGOs: with a staff of one.

I also think of cultural notions like the ‘blue and red kachinas’ and ‘twin flames’ hearken back to these original stories and point at something very real.

Like two sides of a coin or two emissaries of an event horizon.

I am the side of the coin who is getting an acid bath at the moment, but I am still connected to my twin and he has been a guiding light to me throughout.

The process of our friendship has taken an eerily similar trajectory to these ancient stories in ways that have been challenging for both of us.

What I have learned is that this healing revolves less around ‘fault’ and more around understanding.

The purpose of Adam and Eve and Adam and Lilith, as mentioned earlier, was a genetic uplift for the planet.

According to some wisdom traditions, Adam and Lilith were prepared and understood the mission. They were genetic representations of each sex from the same genetic source: from God and in the image of God. These wisdom traditions relay that the ‘plan’ was for Adam and Lilith to create children, and that those children and their children would seed with other races and peoples.

In those traditions it is clear that Adam and Lilith were to mate only with one another. They argued over intimate relations, specifically Lilith's refusal to lie beneath Adam. When Adam insisted she stay beneath him (underdog echoes), Lilith uttered God’s secret name, rose into the air, and fled towards the Red Sea.

My charge is to heal this wounding in my own self on behalf of the healing of us all.

What I have seen through this process is that the deep wounding between people who love one another is the most difficult and also the most important to heal.

Although the archetype of Lilith/Inanna has been demonized, the truth is much more nuanced.

The seeds of assumptions when we are wounded by another are sometimes so small or alternately so large, that they are difficult to see clearly.

These assumptions form a framework.

When these frameworks from two wounded hearts try to resolve with one another, they often cannot seat with one another. The ‘different stories’ which are true to each partner in their own minds have no way to connect through these differences in framework, and often compound the issues.

To break this cycle, instead of focusing on my own pain, it becomes necessary for me to understand the pain experienced by my partner, my wonder twin Adam.

When in research I came to fully appreciate the ways in which Lilith’s actions likely hurt Adam, her frameworks in my own mind were able to come together and seat.

In the same sense, my wonder twin Adam, who is also present now, has had an opportunity to learn that my actions and words, while they feel like daggers to him, come from a place of deep frustration and the sadness of feeling erased.

Book of Life

In the case of Adam and Lilith, they were given a Mission, but that Mission might have been taken as a ‘given’ in a way that forgot that it had to exist inside of the minds and hearts of two people. These ‘givens’ assumed certain roles, in both of their eyes, that made both of them feel invisible, wounded and taken for granted.

In order to heal, Lilith through me must take responsibility for the ways her actions changed the course of history and altered the mission of God, as well as for the ways her actions and words wounded Adam deeply.

Similarly, Adam must consider his responsibility for the ways in which his unmoving expectations and assumptions about how things ‘needed to be’ inadvertently felt to Lilith like her beautiful and brilliant and unique soul was being stamped out by the expectation that her role take a specific form or that it manifest in a way that interfered with her own natural flow.

Through this process I have learned that even if you do a million great things, it does not excuse or permit getting away with doing little bad things: in the sight of God. In God’s eyes, just because it’s passive, doesn’t excuse the aggression.

I have learned that a sacred mission supersedes in eminence certain indulgences of personal willfulness against it.

I have learned that ‘evil’ doesn’t necessarily look evil.

It doesn’t look like the monsters in the graphic novels of cartoons. Its real live people who in small ways acquiesce or turn a blind eye to things that bring them satisfaction or wealth or power or favor or that make their lives easier, even when they know their actions create difficulties for others.

I have learned that God’s Hand cannot be forced by anger or frustration cloaked as pitifulness.

I have learned that the notion of ‘due diligence’ when it comes to helping people in need is actually more destructive than doing nothing at all.

I have learned that sexy distractions are not even worthy as a side dish.

I have found that struggling with one's defects can itself be a seduction away from Righteousness: that what we struggle with persists.

That turning to God is the only real way forward. God's love is the source of all healing.

God's love envelopes us, and is guiding these writings now towards the final healing of the original default in the origin story of Adam and Lilith.

The Chapters following will continue to explore and examine themes adjacent to the revelations here. I am fueled by the desire to heal this chasm and help you all heal this symbolic chasm as it manifests for you.

At the same time, this particular direction has been emotionally challenging for me.

I appreciate patience with forthcoming Chapters as I sort through these somewhat challenging revelations.

XXX | Dark Knight of the Soul

October 21, 2026

There is an impression that I can sense where this phenomenon I represent and the writings are seen like a desperate cry for attention or a bid for 15 minutes of air time. While I remain ever grateful and faithful to this mission, in truth I have been tested like never before.

It's not just that 'Christ Messiah' or 'Lilith' reads pompous on a resume.

I have shied away from talking much about the situational side of this journey for me because my own particular life conditions bear little weight in my mind compared with the imperative to serve God and my fellow 'space monkeys' in this sometimes confusing ride into the Sea of Light.

These last months, in addition to other types of instruction, I have been lead through a process of isolation.

Encrypted throughout my intuitive path guided by Two Witnesses of Chapter 11 of the Book of Revelations, YEHI 'OHR and the Gematria Calculator, I have been guided along the lines of protecting my own personal safety in light of my writings.

I have had to close online accounts online for shopping and other things. My house, in some ways, has reverted back to the 80's. There were times I was asked not to have my phone on, or not to leave my house. There were times I was being asked to not speak about what was going on directly. That kind of thing.

My sphere has shrunk. I'm not going to lie, it has not been easy.

I complied not because I wanted to or because it was easy, but because I was being asked to.

Even more difficult has been re-framing my sense of God with the new information presented by the Two Witnesses.

Because of the nature of this type of encryption, your path and my path through will contain distinctly different data impressions. The words you remember or the phrases you follow will be different from the ones I see, remember and follow.

I also get a sense that the internal workings of the Gematria Calculator remember who you are and in the moment you land on a particular page will up vote and consequently down vote the order in which entries appear. This is a theory, but in this theory you or I could go to the same gematria page at relatively the same time and see different words in different orders.

Continuing along those lines, it would actually be impossible to prove because the same agency that knows you are about to chose an entry to follow before you chose it would know that you and your pal were trying to spoof it in an experiment.

In any case what you see on those pages is at the discretion of those agencies.

There is a song in the folk traditions of Central and South Americas about dreaming of serpents, and fighting them. Each time one is killed, a larger one appears.

In the Book of Revelations the Two Witnesses are described as having swords and fire coming from their mouths. In my experience I have not been spared any of those swords. In fact, I believe it to be quite the opposite.

These swords have pierced my heart, and many were difficult to return from.

They seemed to induce a sort of ultimate isolation, a dark night of my soul, where the spirit of God Himself seemed to recede away from me.

Some of the phrases we see in the calculator function as a sort of Neuro-linguistic-programming: they create seeds in your mind that sprout when the ground is fertile. I have seen some of those seeds sprout immediately, and others weeks and weeks later. The soup of time is a wonder to behold.

These word swords have sometimes functionally jolted me out of my personal flow and connection with the God I spent my life speaking with before. I believe God is Merciful and Profoundly Loving, and what was coming and still comes from the mouths of His Prophets was at times jarring and deeply unsettling.

For many this is a clear sign to forget all of this nonsense and carry on reading endless headlines, but there is a mathematical coherence in this entire ‘model’ (if you will) that calls for synthesis instead.

Book of Life

And so instead of throwing it into the digital waste bin, I wanted to better understand in what coherent framework might these seemingly contradictory and paradoxical elements co-exist.

The plot twist of my being the Daughter of God Lilith or Inanna presented a particularly difficult challenge.

It brought so many of the ‘darker’ aspects of my personality forward like a mirror with horrible lighting: putting all the points of struggle I have always had in to clear focus. In some loftier and colder thinking I could appreciate it as an interesting hypothesis, but in my heart I could see the ways it fit certain aspect of my personality like a glove and that was painful.

As a thought experiment, the idea of Lilith coming back at this time to heal that fundamental and persistent original wound with Adam in order to herald in the New Age of God’s Light on Earth is extremely coherent, despite the fact that so many of us were expecting the focal point of the Second Coming to be a literal revisit of the Christ Michael, Jesus, instead.

But what does healing from something that cataclysmic even look like and will it fit in my vehicle is what I wanted to understand.

I mean, consider the weight of that kind of default against the Sacred Will of the Father. It literally altered the intended course of development for this planet, and has snowballed down the slalom of time into the mess we are in today.

And so I prayed, I wept, I became curious, and then I started thinking and sluething in the calculator, and what I kept getting back was a sort of ideological holodeck in which I would be required to pay retribution in kind for the disaster I had caused.

It looked like a form of slavery to me, like something that was so difficult for me to consider as to drive me to the absolute edges of my sanity.

The words threatened me with eternal damnation, the lake of fire, if I were to chose to default again or bail on the mission. I was given all this alchemical rhetoric about complete submission to a higher will. After months of basically being my biggest allies, the Two Witnesses had became infused with an edge over which I have lost many many nights of sleep.

As they say in the movie Thrashin, it was ‘heavy, dude.’

It forced me to get back to the basics of what I know to be true even though I was not able to see it reflected around me at the moment.

I know that Adonai is a God of Love and Mercy, and that's why He's my number one Maruca. I will always be faithful to that base Axiom.

What I found is that these notions of enforcing a particular action as retribution for sin or a karmic quid pro quo type of punishment or even a more wisdom school type submission of will doctrine are all fundamentally inconsistent with a God of Mercy and Love.

Logically, no matter how you slice it or how you move things around, the only way for those retributive types of doctrines to be consistent with a God of Mercy and Love is if you fundamentally shift the definitions of Mercy and Love.

A God whose defining character is fatherly love and mercy does not keep residual conditions on the table once a person has turned toward love and service.

Even while remaining imperfect and still capable of unintentional failure, the principle of God's Love and Mercy does not seek to hamper someone who has already been bashed into the cliffs of their own sin.

Mercy is the operative stance toward a child who has genuinely sought atonement. Present faithfulness and what is in our hearts takes precedence over ledger-style atonement for every single past sin in kind.

Compulsory acts - whether labeled retribution, alchemy, transmutation, or quid pro quo - reintroduce the very control and conditional exchange that an understanding of God's Love sets aside. They are inconsistent in a world where a God of Mercy and Love reigns supreme.

If this is true, how is it that the swords and threats from the Two Witnesses can exist coherently within the framework of a Loving and Merciful God?

The answer is that as seeds, these swords are catalyst, not commandment.

This gets back to the notion of Neuro-linguistic-programming. The ideals of faith and reverence are hammered in the foundry of challenge. What forces us to our knees in desperation and flailing out to God is what tempers our souls to the Holy Spirit.

Book of Life

Instead of being commandments, these swords were meant to catalyze my focus back to the fundamental axiom of my faith: that God is a Loving and Merciful Father for whom ideas of retribution are fundamentally inconsistent. These catalysts functioned as an intensifier of crisis: they alienated, provoked self-suspicion and desolation, and were driving me deeper into the dark night.

In fact, these swords were not intended as mandating a binding divine requirement.

Instead they were intended as a rhetorical impetus to test my own faith and commitment. My ability to come through it was not focused around my compliance with their demands, but instead is demonstrated in my continuing the work in love and service and even through my own personal darkness.

In this way, the remedy actually REQUIRES non-compliance in order to remain faithful to the God of Mercy and Love. Non-compliance protects the exact freedom God's Mercy aims to restore and refuses to re-bind us to a compulsory punishment or karmic litany of slapping.

Atonement and healing occur through the Mercy of God that already covers past mistakes: the interior purification of the darkness that is your birthright as a Child of the Most High grant you passage to His Kingdom.

The original split of Adam and Lilith is mended by the freedom to choose fidelity and love and service this time, not by forcing the enactment of particular mandated acts or orders using threats of damnation.

Coming back to the plight of healing Lilith and Adam, the real mandate is not some scripted imprisonment or litany of punishment to be endured in compliance but instead to accept the uncertainty of this perceived alienation and darkness and to hold on and push forward out of commitment and fidelity to the beautiful Light of God inside you.

If Lilith bailed the last time, my mandate now is to hold on for dear life, to be faithful to Love, committed to service and to keep moving the mission forward in reverence to my Creator, Loving Father, and Foundation.

If we are truly lucky it is only to the extent that we are able to seek the Light and Mercy of God even while battling the Darkness.

XXXI | Children of Lilith

October 22, 2026

If you have to do a book report and hate reading you might consider doing it on Lilith simply because the amount of information about her in the historical or mythological record is so impoverished you would not have to read much.

It also all smells like a hit job by folks who wanted to stifle a larger discussion.

There is an interesting phenomenon surrounding the ‘broom’ bush. This bush is prolific around the globe, and as it’s name would indicate it is used to make brooms for sweeping.

What I started noticing is that cultures will refer to the ‘broom’ bush as belonging to the tribe or nation where the indentured servants come from. Sometimes it’s called Mexican broom, sometimes Irish broom, sometimes Scottish broom, sometimes Turkish broom.

If you travel around the world long enough you will see racism played out in so many flavors it eventually becomes difficult to take any of it seriously.

The cultural wars played out in the naming of the broom bush, however, are very serious and warrant paying attention to.

When we name something, we commit an act of creation that extends out through time and eventually becomes consensus.

As such, the name is made real every time it is used even if it was not real to begin with. It speaks to the great generative power of memetic seed ideas and the ability for the written word to create ideological castles that will extend out in time much farther than the people who invented them: the person who named the broom bush has long since passed, but the feeling of discrimination lives on.

Which I think is part of the point.

In our modern cultures we refer to this as a ‘spin’ because it spins things around to represent their opposite.

Book of Life

And that is the key.

The spin leaves traces of the truth in it's very application.

In other words, in mapping the points that are emphasized in the spin and applying logic and sense, you can read the story they were trying to bury.

In the case of Lilith, the bulk of what remains left behind in the literature does not have to do with her in particular but her children, who are painted as demonic and dangerous.

While there is debate in the minority reports of scholarship as to whether Adam and Lilith had children together initially before she left, there is little debate about her having had children with Adam during the 130 year walk about he took to clear his mind after the Fall.

In addition, there are other children apart from Adam in the time after she left the Garden.

What struck me as curious is that whether the children are between her and Adam, or between her and others, they are always described and taxonomically categorized as different types of nocturnal demonic spirits whose missions are to cause calamity in the different aspirations of mankind.

When I was young, my father's mother came to visit. My mom has dark skin, and part of the drama that played out over my childhood had to do with my grandmother taking mean hits at my mother.

On of them in particular that stuck in my memory was a walk my sister and I and my mother were taking with her. My grandmother reached out at some point to hold my sister's hand, and my sister recoiled.

At that my grandmother said, 'Ahh, I see. It must be the bad gene's…'

My mother, always quick with the comeback said, 'Is that right? Which ones? Yours or your ex-husbands?'

At that point I was too young to speak fluent adult, but it doesn't take a weather man to know which way the wind blows. As a child, the ambient vibe was that my sister and I were somehow tarnished because my mother had dark skin. We were judged, in a way 'demonized', by blood association.

So much so that my mom and dad at some point decided to sit us down and explain.

It made even less sense after the explanation.

Later when I moved to the southern United States, I was warned about the racism that might effect me there. To my shock, it came predominantly from the African American population who referred to me as ‘pork, the other white meat.’

All this to say how ridiculous these teams and their mascots are in the face of our beautiful and varied humanity.

In reading the existing and older literature on Lilith, it struck me somehow strange that regardless of who her mate was, her children were seen as nocturnal demon spirits.

Even more strange if you follow the logic.

Keep in mind that Adam and Lilith are said to have ‘come from the same soil’, written in a time when DNA was not understood as we understand it now. In a similar way that Eve and Adam shared DNA, Lilith and Adam did as well.

They were essentially fraternal twins: twin flames of the Light of God: and coming forth from the same genetic material as God. Made literally in His Image in order to infuse this genetic plasma into the people of Earth.

When Lilith defaulted, Eve was made from a similar genetic match of Adam in order that the mission continue.

How is it that the genetic admixture between one pair of near genetic duplicates creates nocturnal demon spirits while the other pair of near genetic duplicates peoples the Earth with God’s Children?

Through a miracle of birth that only my Creator understands, I am a genetic match for God in the same way Lilith was. I am also a near genetic match for Adam.

This is where things get particularly interesting.

I have spoken about my genetically derived hermaphroditism. My particular genetic signature occurs in males as well but is expressed in ways that are much less visible.

Book of Life

In females, the expression is much more obvious as the infant comes out of the womb with varied plumbing from both of the sexes. Being a genetic match for Lilith, we can assume that while Adam did not have female plumbing, Lilith definitely had female plumbing, but to some degree had male plumbing as well.

We can also assume that, unlike me, there was not a convenient surgical remedy minutes after her birth.

When I put myself in her position (pun intended) I can see from a logistics and standpoint alone why she might have preferred to ‘submit’ using a slightly different architectural configuration. The one that Adam was insisting on in order to satisfy the ‘Missionary’ would have been uncomfortable at best, downright painful at worst.

In this context, it makes more sense to me why, right out of the gate of their assignment there were issues so incompatible that Lilith would leave and refuse to come back.

To make matters worse, from the standpoint of physiology, at that point it was likely that she was one of a kind. Adam’s body, although also being ‘one of a kind’, did not shout it out from the hilltops in quite the same way: he was able to pass.

Lilith, everywhere she traveled, and even if she was not able to ‘fly’, would have been easy to spot.

Her particular ‘deformity’ was one that likely would have horrified a population who - to that point - had not seen anything like it: just as it horrified my doctors immediately after I was born.

When the writings of antiquity speak of Lilith having children, they indicate that she stole the semen she used to create her children, and that her children behaved similarly.

I find this a fascinating spin. The framework of it clearly holds coherence and spite from her having defaulted her mission in which she and her mate were to reproduce willingly with one another. Putting her in a ‘position’ of having to take the semen from her sleeping contributors unawares, essentially an act of theft, is a logical match for the ‘crime’ she committed.

I imagine the men who were intimate with her were eager to blame shift as her androgynous body morphology was well known. They would likely have felt ashamed to have taken the bait so to speak.

If a succubus comes and takes your sperm at night while you are sleeping or an incubus gives you theirs in the same way, can you be blamed? If these children of Lilith are considered nocturnal spirits and not actual visible people, the ‘invisibility’ of the children grows while their partner’s blame for the union is minimized even further.

I also imagine that her children, both male and female, would have inherited her genetics as well as some degree of ambiguous sexual morphology. In this way they were also to varying degrees identifiable – particularly the girls, as were the children from these unions.

Making matters worse, every manner of ailment and tragedy that was not easily attributed to anything else was attributed to the children of Lilith. In the mythology it was said Lilith’s consort after leaving the garden was the Angel of Death himself.

These types of associations are emblematic of the most base and ridiculous expressions of discrimination - the demonization or prejudice against an entire class of individuals who are all Children of God.

When we look at the Inanna mythology, we see the same or similar dynamics playing out: the demonization of a Goddess particularly around the issue of Children.

Perhaps not incidentally, the screech owls with which Lilith and her children and Inanna are associated can sound like weeping at night..

There is a popular meme where the viewer is shown a picture of a muddy pig or a donkey and the words read, “I’m going to tell my children this was <which-ever-bad-person-you-want>.”

Overall the extant literature about Lilith demonstrates the exact type of spin-job that creates ideological castles built with false claims that outlast Kingdoms and Epochs.

So many of the modern-day Lilith Cults have focused around the idea of antagonism between the sexes and look at this important story soley from the angle of her refusal to ‘submit’. Other ideologies have latched on to her hermaphroditism and pushed forward notions that somehow transgenderism is an ideal and a right.

In general the act of refusal and rebellion itself is held up like a trophy of indignance: perhaps not understanding the full scope of the deeper dynamics that were at play.

Book of Life

My sense intuitively was that Lilith earnestly wanted to complete the mission and that she wanted to perform the will of her Creator, as do I, from the depths of my soul. My sense is that she wanted to please her Creator, and would have done so if her and her mate did not come to such an impasse about how to accomplish the task less painfully and less awkwardly.

My sense is that the real issue between Adam and Eve was much simpler: a case of mutually hurt feelings in a field of very different needs and personalities.

The moral of the story is not to blame one side or other for being wrong, but that finding a way to resolve differences through service, humility, empathy, love of God and of one another is of primary importance for us as a human family to learn: an ideal to be held up and championed.

But there is a deeper thread that I want to also touch on that is important in terms of feeling through the full context of these types of interpersonal disagreements.

Having boundaries and needs that arise in the course being or accomplishing a goal or participating in a relationship or engaging in a mission does not explicitly mean that you are negating the project, your partner or team, or the Will of God.

God knows that the muscle you use and develop to stand up for yourself and your flow and sovereignty, and right to bring your authentic self to the table of existence is the same muscle you will use to stand up for God.

This is not about insolence to God but about protecting the integrity of His Righteousness through practice in your life. Adonai, your Father, knows that if you cannot stand up for what you understand to be righteous for yourself, you won’t have the ability to stand up for the Righteousness of God.

This is not about being prideful or entitled, it’s about having a moral compass, knowing the direction of True North, and communicating it in a way that creates understanding and opens to learning and fellowship instead of creating animosity and division.

God prefers a clutch of dedicated co-conspirators - of Children ready and willing to take up the Family Business intelligently - to an Army of followers.

In the context of God's Love and Light, I am not advocating here for stubbornly fighting for 'your rights' from your corner of the ring but instead for finding a way all can win together: a way for everyone to have agency in the creation of Heaven on Earth.

That said, in times when I have felt held down by the thumb of oppression or personal erasure, that reality can feel like a kind of madness and defending yourself can come out awkwardly and ungracefully. When we are in pain, the poetry is compromised.

When we lack the ability to empathize with another's experience, we might dismiss such a person or such behavior as being 'unstable' or 'bat shit crazy', but this dismissal is not a superior stance.

In the matter of Lilith and Adam, Adam's unwillingness to demonstrate empathy and understanding for his mate precipitated conditions in which she did not feel like she could bring herself to the table, and in that sense those conditions were not livable to her.

I would assume given my own experience, that this type of erasure or dismissal made Lilith feel intensely angry and perhaps a bit set up to loose.

Particularly if she loved God and wanted to perform His Will, Adam's inability to compromise his own personal comforts and desires in order to help her come to the game, would have resulted in intense anger and frustration. She would have felt set up to fail. Her physical morphology was not her 'fault' it was God's design.

Adam's inability to work around it for her benefit and her inability to take a step away from her frustration and more calmly and less cuttingly encourage him to understand and find a compromise together would have contributed equally to the default. To foster conditions that are impossible for another does as much harm as abandonment and in the end no one wins.

We have to remember that relationships are a dance, not a competition.

The ultimate goal is for two people to come together and in joining personal missions become more than they would have been individually and in the service of Goodness and Mercy and Love.

Just as our Father is for us a reliable Font of Mercy and Love, we are called to be for one another in Kind.

Book of Life

We have each received different gifts and challenges by the Will of our Creator, and it is His Will that we work together to extend His Love to others in the same way He unwaveringly extends His Love and Mercy to us.

XXXIII | Swan Song

July 28, 2026

My body is weary, Father, but my spirit is Full.

The measure of my gratitude reaches to the very limits of the spaces we have occupied together.

My ears hear Your Thundering Voice like a Lion, and it moves me.

Thank You God for Your Voice. Thank You for Your Prophets, and for the learning You have placed in front of me like mounds of Gold. Thank You for the time to be able to consider the wonders of the world You created. Thank You for the opportunity to serve You.

Father, You encompass things so far beyond the perimeter of my mind, and it stirs me to reach for You.

I pray that to the end of my days I will be able to swim in the pools of Your Mystery. I will pursue the breadth of Your Expanses and Crevices will the full measure of my humility and persistence, and in every way I am able. May You continue to expand before me. Show me Your Depths, Father.

You who created me, give me Your Understanding that I might serve You.

Point me to Your Riddles that I might walk among them in wonder. Humble me under the vastness of Your Home. Tease me with the Promise of Eternity. Drive me to quandary Your Paradoxes and seek Your Mercy. Give me the bravery to look You in the eye.

Walk with me.

In every way, give me eyes to see those who You would send me to, and courage to do Your Work, and to seek Your Guidance above my own assumptions. Help me bolster those who are hurting. Help me serve those who are frail.

Father, I have become thin seeking You.

Nourish me with Your Light, and warm me with Your Love. Steady my trembling spirit with Your Staff. Give me the strength to serve You. When it is time, Father, help me rest knowing that Your Mercy and Love follow me in my slumber. Help me renew my strength and clear my mind.

Help me find Your Stillness and rest in it.

Send Your Emissaries and Your Music. Let the Earth be glad and rejoice in Your Immutable Presence. Let us live through Your Joy and Pleasure.

Let our hands build the world You intended for us.

Let my words lift Your Spirit and magnify Your Presence. Let them comfort those You would Comfort, and stir those You would stir. Let them be Your Lighthouse in these stormy waters. Let them gather Your People to You in gratitude and praise.

Let the fruit of my living be Your Love.

Let ancient Lamps hold oil. Let the songs of the ancestors call us forth. Let us rediscover Your Wheels, Your Fire and Your Culture. Let the old Temples rise. Let the Bells be unburied. Let them ring like your Radiance. Let us be healed.

Call us to You in a voice we can hear.

Accept our contrition when we fall from Your service. Lend us Your Mercy when we feel burdened by our actions. Give us the strength to seek You when we would hide. Give us the courage to serve You even in our shame and nakedness. Help us recover the dignity of Your Heritage.

Breathe into us the Breath of Your Life.

Give us hope and faith in Your Plan for us. Give us the courage to wait for Your Timing. Give us the presence of mind to hold Your Vision even in the darkness. Give us the stamina to persist and not fall from Your Grace. Give us the will to hold fast through the night and the hail winds. Let the Dawn be rosy and glorious, and the rainbow remind us that we are loved.

Let us rebuild together the certainty of your Kingdom.

Book of Life

Lay me into Your Foundation and let me bear its weight for You. Let me express the beauty of Your Works. Let me extend Your Creed to the Ends of the Earth. Let me uphold your Covenants and call forth Your Blessings. Let me stand even when my head is bowed in Your Presence.

Let me be the instrument of Your Peace on Earth.

Let me tune my instrument to Your Chords, and Your Key, and learn Your Songs. Let me play them with the sweetness they deserve. Let the vibrations fill Your People with overflowing Love and Pride in You. Let them sing into Your Mouth.

Let there be LIGHT.
